FALL OF SEVASTOPOL NEARS

NATION AWAITS SMEAR INSPIRED SEDITION TRIAL

Case to Bare New Deal Secrets.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 15.—The greatest sedition trial in the history of the Republic, which originated in a New Deal campaign to smear the loyalty of members of congress and others who opposed the Roosevelt war policy before Pearl Harbor, is scheduled to begin here on Monday.

Brought to bar will be Mrs. Elizabeth Dilling of Chicago and 29 others, some of them convicted German agents, some of them anti-Semitic propagandists and other obscure crackpots, and all of them accused of circulating seditious utterances to disaffect army and navy personnel and of conspiring with the German government to establish a Nazi form of government in the United States.

Altho the majority of the defendants are without means, some of them impoverished by court costs in the two years the department of justice thru three successive indictments has pursued them, they will be represented by able counsel appointed by the court who are preparing to make the case an outstanding test of the safeguards of civil liberties in the United States.

Expect Long Trial.

So voluminous is the evidence the department of justice and the defense will present, so varied are the circumstances involving 30 different defendants, and so complex are the legal questions inherent in every phase of the prosecution that the trial is expected to take three or four months at a cost of more than $100,000.

What with the picturesque and unpredictable crackpots among the defendants and the persons of note who may be summoned as witnesses, the trial bids fair to be a spectacle from the start. The seamy side of history under the Roosevelt administration will be exposed to public view and there may be even an airing of the responsibility for Pearl Harbor, as one of the defendants has requested the court to subpena Rear Adm. Kimmel and Maj. Gen. Short, who are awaiting court-martial for failure to avert that disaster.

Other witnesses whose testimony is sought by defendants include Justice Frankfurter of the Supreme court, Bernard M. Baruch, and Samuel I. Rosenman, President Roosevelt's legal aid and ghost writer.

Subpenas Held Up.

Subpenas were prepared for Frankfurter, Secretary of State Hull, Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, Chairman Dies [D., Tex.] of the Dies house committee on un-American activities, and Chief Justice Edward C. Eicher of the District of Columbia Federal court, the presiding judge of the trial.

Issuance of the subpenas was held up by Justice Eicher, who said it would be premature to summon any witnesses until the testimony stage of the trial should be reached.

According to the department of justice, the defendants will be shown to have conspired with the Nazis to overthrow the American form of government and replace it with a Nazi government almost from the moment that Hitler attained power in the reich. The prosecution also says the defendants will be shown to have circulated anti-Semite and anti-war propaganda obtained from a Nazi agency. The defendants deny trafficking with the Nazis and some of them contend they were propagandizing against the Jews long before Hitler was ever heard of.

Assail Persecution.

The defendants also deny that they sought to disaffect the military forces of the United States. They invoke the Supreme's court's dictum upholding freedom of utterance so long as there is no "clear and present danger" of subversion. They assail as persecution the government procedure which, instead of seeking their indictment for sedition in their home communities where they circulated their propaganda, procured their indictment for conspiracy in the District of Columbia in order to subject them to trial in a government dominated environment. There were nine government pay rollers on the grand jury that indicted them and presumably there will be

Guzik Insists His Kidnaping Was an Error

Jack Guzik, gambling and racket boss of Chicago, was free yesterday after a reported two days as the captive of kidnapers. While he insisted there had been no kidnaping, reports were that he paid between $25,000 and $100,000 for his freedom.

Guzik, nervous and disheveled behind a two or three days' growth of beard, appeared late Friday night in the Benal drug store, 1658 W. Roosevelt rd. He telephoned a Wilmette attorney and reported that he was unharmed, and asked that the federal bureau of investigation be notified.

Seized in Berwyn Trap.

The telephone call was the first heard from the racketeer since he had been reported seized by three masked gunmen Thursday noon in Harlem av., near Ogden av., in Berwyn. At the time he was returning by automobile from Willow Springs police court, where he had been freed of a charge of disorderly conduct.

He telephoned the attorney again at noon yesterday and reported that the furor over the kidnaping was all a mistake, that he had merely been with friends. At first refusing to talk to reporters, he later agreed to a telephone interview.

"The whole thing was just a lot of newspaper notoriety," Guzik said, "a lot of fuss about nothing. On the way back from Willow Springs I ran into a couple of fellows who wanted to talk to me. We went somewhere and talked a while."

Disputes Son-in-Law.

Guzik refused to name the men with whom he held the alleged conversation. He was asked about the alarm spread by his son-in-law, Frank Garnett, who had driven him away from the court in an automobile and later made an excited phone call from a restaurant saying, "They got Jack."

"Frankie is a pretty good kid," Guzik said, "but he's pretty new in Chicago and doesn't know our ways. He said a couple of shots were fired, but that isn't so. I told him to get out of the car myself. Then he went out and spread all that notoriety.

"I didn't know about the newspaper publicity until 3 o'clock that afternoon. I went over to a friend's house and stayed that night. Last night I called my lawyer and told him everything was o. k. There was no ransom demand, no shots fired, and no ransom paid."

Wife Stays in Florida.

He denied reports that his wife was en route from Florida and said that he had talked with her by phone yesterday. Concerning reports that he had been mixed up in the violence filled election of a ward committeeman in the 25th ward Guzik said, "I don't even know where the 25th ward is."

"I'll be back in the loop in a few days," Guzik said in answer to questions concerning where he could be found for an interview. "Then you can see me."

Friends of Guzik said he was particularly bitter toward county police for his arrest on the disorderly charge, contending the seizure was for publicity purposes.

At the Benal drug store Alvin C. Weiss, son-in-law of the owner and pharmacist on duty at the time, said that he remembered Guzik being in the store. He readily identified pictures of Guzik as the man who telephoned from the drug store booth between 10:30 and 11 p. m. Friday night.

"I was busy waiting on customers when he came in," said Weiss. "When I first noticed him he was Divorce Hurls High-Wire Act Off Balance.

New York, April 15 [Special].—"And now, ladies and gentlemen, the stupendous, death defying spectacle, the Wallendas—five high on bicycles."

Just as usual tonight, the announcer at the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey circus announced the appearance of the five Wallendas—high wire specialists—whose act without nets is the show's climax.

And just as usual—so far as the audience could see—the five Wallendas went thru their breath taking routine. But things weren't as usual. There was a new face in the act. Elizabeth [Lee] Wallenda was not among the five, nor will she be again.

Story of Near Disaster.

Behind the withdrawal of flashing, blue eyed Lee was a story of near disaster at last night's performance, witnessed by thousands who got no hint of the near tragedy or of the drama of heartbreak in the background.

The story came out today when it was announced that Henrietta Wallenda, whose husband is in the navy, would take Lee's place.

Lee, it was revealed, was divorced this winter in Florida from Herman Wallenda, whose job it is to ride one of the bicycles on the high wire while others use his shoulders or the bicycle as supports for balancing acts.

Stay Despite Divorce.

Carl Wallenda, head of the troupe, persuaded both Herman and Lee to remain in the act despite the divorce. Since the opening of the show 10 days ago all five have been literally betting their lives on the ability of the divorced couple to control their feelings and muscles during their act.

The tension increased with each performance. Herman—shy, stolid, and plodding—was still in love with Lee and kept courting her. But Lee was thru with Herman for good.

On opening night Lee and Herman did not speak. The act went on. The performers were jittery, especially during the "double pin wheel of death" when Herman, balanced on a wire 50 feet above the ground, supported one end of a pole on which his divorced wife and Helen Wallenda whirled in dizzy gyrations.

Herman's Eyes Wander.

The near tragedy came last night when Herman and Joe were balanced on bicycles on the wire, supporting between them a bar holding a chair upon which Carl stood with Helen on his shoulders. The cyclists maintain their equilibrium by "sighting" on an object dead ahead.

While the arena filled with applause, Carl, balancing on his chair, was startled to discover that Herman's eyes had wandered from the sight and were staring at Lee, waiting on the platform for the act's end.

The pyramid swayed. Carl called sharply to his brother. Herman stiffened and snapped his eyes back on the sight. The pyramids straightened up once more. The cyclists moved slowly back to the platform and safety. It was clear that the high wire act and the divorce could not mix.

Tonight Herman kept his eyes grimly on the sight.

Yank Couple Finds It's Not So Easy to Be Wed in Italy

NAPLES, Italy, April 15 (AP).—Precisely at 4 p. m. today Mary Chandler, of Malden, Mass., became the bride of Capt. Max Marple of Pawhuska, Okla., in a little Neapolitan Presbyterian church — whereupon both bride and groom emitted strictly unnewlywed-like sighs of relief.

Mary Chandler.

The whole thing has been extremely complicated. The wedding was authorized by: The United States government, the United States army, the North African theater of operations of the United States army air force, American Red Cross [Mediterranean theater], the Italian government, the Neapolitan municipal government, and the Presbyterian churches of both Italy and America.

Then after months of getting the wedding approved, Max's dress uniforms failed to arrive; the matron of honor sent word she couldn't be present; Mary couldn't find the kind of camelias she wanted for her bouquet, and the best man failed to show up until just before the ceremony.

Honeymoon on Capri.

But finally the ceremony went off practically on schedule, after which the happy couple headed for a honeymoon on the Isle of Capri.

It started back in October when Max, who is an air force public relations officer and once edited the Pawhuska Daily Journal-Capital, appeared at the Red Cross office in Algiers about a little business loan. He was referred to Mary

He got the loan, but having fallen for blonde Mary, he decided to "show off" by paying it back in eight days—the quickest I ever paid back a loan in my life."

By December the couple, both in their late 20s, decided to try to get married despite the discouraging red tape placed in the path of all overseas matrimony by frowning officials.

Getting permission of various superior officers thru channels "all the way to the theater commander" required hundreds of pages of paper work. They were supposed to wait 90 days after this was done, but managed to get that shortened somewhat.

Army Wedding Not Recognized.

At the Neapolitan city hall they were told only "tourists" could be married. In addition, a strictly army wedding is not recognized here. On the other hand, a Neapolitan wedding is no good except in seven states back home, due to some legal quirk.

"Massachusetts is not one of those seven," grinned Mary.

So they decided to have a dual wedding with a Neapolitan preacher and an army chaplain saying the necessary words simultaneously. They got Chaplain William P. Maxwell, Hartselle, Ala., plus a local Presbyterian preacher, plus an interpreter.

Thus armed with official preparations they returned to the city hall and were issued a marriage permit. The "tourist license" cost seven lira and 80 centimes, which is the equivalent of seven and four-fifths cents. Max didn't have any change. Mary bought the license.

"Now she is having the 20 centimes change made into a charm bracelet to always remind me I didn't have the money to buy the license," mourned Max.

THEY FIGHT THE CIVIL WAR, TOO, ON THIS CARRIER

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

PEARL HARBOR, April 15.—There's a southern rebellion among the members of one carrier's crew whose pilots are mostly southerners. On the trip to Palau a Texas plane dispatcher took to using the Lone Star flag of Texas instead of the usual checkered sendoff flag to dispatch planes from the carrier.

One day he switched to the stars and bars of the confederacy, and two or three planes took off before noticing it. Then one Yankee pilot looked out from the cockpit, put his thumb down, and signaled "no." The dispatcher kept waving him off until he had to go.

That afternoon indignant northerners demanded a return to the official checkered flag. The ship's ticker system called for "all men who love the Union to trample the flag of Jeff Davis in the dust." But the "rebellion" is still fomenting.

TIED TO A DESK JOB, MAJ. BONG WANTS TO FIGHT

Moans He Will 'Go Nuts' if Grounded.

Rick Hails Bong

New York, April 15 (AP).—To Maj. Richard I. Bong in the Southwest Pacific went this congratulatory message from Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker today:

"Just received good news that you are the first one to break my record in World War I. by bringing down 27 planes in combat, as well as your promotion so justly deserved. I hasten to offer my sincere congratulations with the hope you will double or treble this number. But in trying use the same cool, calculating technique that has brought you results to date for we will need your kind back home after this war is over. My promise of a case of Scotch still holds good. So be on the lookout for it."

AN ADVANCED ALLIED AIR BASE, New Guinea, April 15 (AP).—Wings clipped by a "grounded indefinitely" order, Maj. Richard I. Bong, American air ace of the Southwest Pacific, says he will "go nuts" if he cannot continue combat flying.

With a record of 27 Jap planes to his credit—not counting nine probables—the Poplar, Wis., major was ordered grounded after he shot down two Jap planes at Hollandia, New Guinea, last Wednesday. The two raised his official record past the World War I. mark of 26 aircraft set by Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker.

Now Working at Desk.

When Maj. Bong returned from home leave last February he was given an official job here but continued combat flying. After Wednesday's flight, however, he was ordered grounded without explanation and today the bemedaled air hero worked only at his desk. He has hopes that "indefinitely" does not mean his air combat days are over.

The major, during an interview with newsmen, winced when they suggested he might be headed for home to face microphones and war bond sales rallies. He said:

"I'd go nuts if I couldn't keep on flying in combat."

Asked how he felt since breaking the Rickenbacker record the major said:

"I don't feel a damn bit different, except that I'm pretty miffed over all this—especially over all this business" [of being interviewed].

His Is a "Paste-Up" Girl.

One reason he was miffed, he admitted, was that he had planned to paste a new photograph of his girl on the nose of his fighter plane this afternoon.

"I'd be doing it right now if it wasn't for you guys," he told the newsmen.

Bong's sweetheart is Marjorie Vattendahl, Superior [Wis.] State Teachers' college student. The last plane on which he had pasted her picture was lost by another pilot.

Bong's pilot friends say he is almost nerveless in combat and Bong admits he has never been "bothered" in combat since he shot down his first plane Dec. 12, 1942.

How He Bags Planes.

"All I do is make a pass at them and try to knock them down," he said. "Of course, I try to get above them if I can. Wednesday when I got my last two I must have made 14 passes before I shot one down."

Maj. Gen. Ennis Whitehead, deputy commander of the 5th air force, said Bong's record was all the more notable because he flew long missions to gain each victory.

On Thursday Whitehead telephoned Bong and read him a telegram of congratulations from Gen. MacArthur. After Whitehead finished the message, he added:

"Oh, yes, it says here at the bottom that effective as of today you are a major."

[Turn to today's picture section for a photo of Maj. Bong. When the caption was written he was a captain and had just shot down 25 planes. He since has added two and been promoted. Ace's family celebrates in Poplar, Wis., home. Story on page 3.]

OPA Official's Firm Violates Price Ceilings

Rae E. Walters, Chicago regional administrator of the office of price administration, announced yesterday that he had uncovered violations of OPA price ceiling regulations in his own business. He said that he had made voluntary settlement of $761.61 for overcharges on corn sales made at four grain elevators he owns in Iowa. The violations were "inadvertent," he said, and explained that the sales were transacted by Burdett Lundberg, who manages his business while he serves with the OPA.

Rae E. Walters.

Walters said that the settlement was made thru the Omaha [Neb.] OPA district office. The transactions on which the overcharges were made were conducted by his manager thru W. M. Bell & Co., grain brokers, of Cedar Rapids, Ia., he said.

Records Are Presented.

According to Walters, he learned only Friday night of the "possible overcharges" thru the OPA office in Des Moines, Ia., where records indicated that dealings of the brokerage firm contained sales in excess of OPA ceilings. He said he telephoned his manager and his attorney, Lyle Higgins, at Harlan, Ia., where Walters has his home, and advised them to go to the Omaha OPA office and present all records on corn transactions made thru the Bell company.

Both the Omaha and Des Moines OPA offices are in Walters' Chicago regional territory.

An examination of the records, Walters related, disclosed evident overcharges of 1 to 2½ cents a bushel on approximately 24,000 bushels of corn. Settlement was made at once, he said.

"I am confident that the overcharges were made inadvertently," asserted Walters. "I have every confidence in Burdett Lundberg, who has been in complete charge of my business interests for the last 66 weeks.

Outlines His Policy.

"I have always insisted that violations, whether willful or inadvertent, must be called to account, and that holds with any business in which I myself have any connections."

Walters turned over management of his several business interests to Lundberg when he took over the chairmanship of the local Harlan ration board. Later he was appointed head of the Des Moines district OPA office, and became regional administrator early last February. In addition to his grain elevators—one in Harlan, one in Elkhorn, Ia., and two in Corley, Ia.—Walters owns the Harlan Rendering company, a feed and seed business in Harlan, and two 270 acre farms in Shelby county, Ia.

A DEAD WOMAN'S EYES TELL WHO GETS HER CASH

Milton, Del., April 15 (AP).—A banker placed a coin on each of a dead woman's eyes today.

He said he had her written promise that if the coins—1894 quarters—still were in place 12 hours later he would receive "a substantial amount of money" from her estate.

Should the coins drop, he said, he will receive nothing.

The banker is 68 year old Joseph M. Lank, vice president and cashier of the Sussex Trust company and president of the town council.

Mayor Joseph D. Robbins stood beside him when he carefully placed the coins at 10 a. m. in an undertaking parlor.

Lank and Robbins returned at 10 p. m. and in the presence of witnesses removed the coins.

Lank said he wasn't interested in the money but that he wanted to keep the promise he made to the woman, Mrs. Lydia Johnson, 86, last November. Mrs. Johnson died yesterday.

The banker said he had no idea why Mrs. Johnson imposed the strang condition. He said Mrs. Johnson, a recluse, "suddenly took a fancy to me as her business manager" about a year ago.

Denmark's King Christian Reported Seriously Ill

RUSSIANS PUSH WITHIN 3½ MILES OF CRIMEA PORT

LONDON, April 16 [Sunday]—(AP).—Russian troops smashing thru Sevastopol's outer defenses yesterday captured points on a broad front only three and one-half miles north of that burning Crimean citadel, Moscow announced early today. In old Poland another Red army crushed the 16,000 man axis garrison at Tarnopol on the southern invasion route to Berlin after a three week siege.

The fall of Sevastopol appeared to be near.

A midnight soviet bulletin said soviet warships and planes were sinking evacuation boats; thousands of Germans and Rumanians were giving up without a fight; and large groups of other enemy troops were trapped in the mountains along the southern coast east of Alushta, which is 45 miles east of Sevastopol.

Nazis from France in Battle.

The Russians also said units of the 10th German SS tank division had "just arrived from France" to shore up sagging axis lines in former Poland. The late announcement said these had been badly mauled by Russian troops attacking in an area 40 miles south of captured Tarnopol.

Surging down the Crimean west coast thru a fortified area which took the Germans eight months to crack in their 1941-42 siege of Sevastopol, the Red army captured Lyubimovka just above the Chornaya estuary between them and the prize city, the Moscow bulletin said.

Inflict Heavy Casualties.

On three widely separated fronts, the Russians said, heavy casualties were inflicted on the Germans and Rumanians. The soviet high command gave these totals and summaries of the fighting:

TARNOPOL—The entire garrison of 16,000 Germans was crushed after a three week siege of the city 75 miles southeast of Lwow. The remnants of four divisions and other units were killed, except 2,400 who surrendered.

ODESSA—Between March 25 and April 12, Gen. Rodion Y. Malinovsky's Ukraine army killed 26,800 enemy troops and captured 10,680 in operations which liberated Odessa on the Black sea and sent axis remnants fleeing across the Dniester estuary into lower Bessarabia. In addition, immense stores of axis equipment were destroyed or captured.

37,000 Nazis Surrender.

CRIMEA—Another 6,000 Germans and Rumanians surrendered Friday to boost the seven day total to 37,000.

The Russians struck 24 miles down the western Crimean coast to reach Lyubimovka—within easy artillery range of thousands of axis troops who had fled into Sevastopol.

Other units striking from the northeast captured Dovankoi, only nine miles outside Sevastopol. Gains also were made in the east and south. The troops moving in on the port could see Russian aircraft carrying out mass raids Friday night. The Russian war bulletin said explosions occurred in fuel dumps and fires broke out at the rail station.

Reds Seize 60 Towns.

Sixty more towns and villages were taken by the merged armies of Generals Feodor I. Tolbukhin and Andrei I. Yeremenko in the Crimea, and less than a tenth of the huge peninsula which is about the size of Maryland remained in German hands.

Making little effort to screen the enormity of the Crimean retreat, the German high command said that "in the Crimea German and Rumanian troops retreated farther to the southwest while fighting continuously against enemy formations in hot pursuit."

CHICAGO LABOR WARNED: IDLING MAY LOSE WAR

Somervell Cites Peril in Critical Days Ahead.

Lt. Gen. Brehon B. Somervell, commanding the army services forces, appealed directly to war workers in the Chicago area yesterday to stay on the job to prevent possible military catastrophe. He urged them to stop shifting from one job to another and to eliminate absenteeism.

In issuing his plea, he cited the fact that 23 million man hours were lost in the Chicago area in March from absences and job turnover. The time losses in March alone represent the labor involved in building 1,000 four engine bombers, 500 medium bombers and 500 fighter planes, he said.

Letter Sent to Cleary.

Reducing that loss by one-fourth would be equivalent to adding 30,000 workers to the city's war plants. Lack of 30,000 workers caused Chicago to be designated as a critical labor shortage area.

Gen. Somervell's plea was contained in a letter to James M. Cleary, chairman of the mayor's committee for patriotic action.

"We are now entering the most critical phase of the war," Gen. Somervell wrote. "Any slowing up of our effort on either the battle lines or the production lines not only will prolong the conflict and increase our casualties . . . it easily can result in catastrophe.

Soldier Dare Not Relax.

"The war is far from won. We still can lose, and we will lose, if we relax our efforts. The soldier on the front must stick at his job day and night, without rest or recreation. He dare not shift from job to job. . . . He has been trained to do his individual part and he must continue to do that part no matter how tired, no matter how discouraged he becomes.

"What is true of the soldier in the fighting line is just as true of the worker in the supply line. The worker's responsibility is just as great; he must keep everlastingly at the job for which he has been trained; he must permit nothing to distract him from it.

"Worker and soldier together, faithfully sticking to their tasks, unselfishly giving the best they have and all they have of skill and experience and courage and knowhow, can shorten the conflict and insure the victory. Anything less than all-out effort is not enough."

CAMERA AND JEWELRY STOLEN.

CANADA TO CALL DEFERRED MEN FOR WAR DUTY

Industry Now Has 50,000 Eligibles.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

OTTAWA, Ont., April 15.—While Australia's decision to cut her army by 90,000 men undoubtedly will be reflected in the Canadian parliament in representations from French Canadian political elements which think Canada has over-reached herself in the war, this country will increase its call-up of men from the deferred classes. There are about 50,000 active service eligibles in industry with top rating priorities.

A survey of industry, intended to indicate how many men may be withdrawn, is nearly complete and probably will be presented at the resumption of parliament on April 18. Industry has been training many repatriates and low category men and women for the jobs now held by the active service eligibles.

Expect Big Increase.

Canada expects a much heavier enlistment for the armed forces. Labor Minister Humphrey Mitchell told parliament recently "that with the increase in the tempo in the war in Europe there will be greater and greater call ups of men in the age groups liable for military service. Let there be no mistake about that."

Canada, a nation of 11½ million persons, will spend roughly 100 million dollars a week on the war during the next year, Graham F. Towers, governor of the Bank of Canada and chairman of the national war finance committee, announced in appealing for support for sixth victory loan.

Cost Doubles in Year.

To impress upon Canadians the need for the lending of every spare dollar, Canada's "big money man" announced that it cost 8 million dollars a week to operate the Canadian navy—now the equivalent of the British navy of pre-war days—and the merchant marine; 30 million dollars a week to maintain the heavily mechanized army units; 21 million dollars a week to maintain the Canadian air force, now fourth strongest in the world. He said the cost of war equipment and supplies produced in Canada last year "was about double the whole amount which Canada spent in the first World war, including the demobilization period."

Saw Steel Bars and Take Liquor Valued at $3,000

Mrs. Rose Rubin, owner of a liquor store at 4937 Sheridan rd., reported to police yesterday that burglars who sawed thru steel bars on the rear window of the store took 65 cases of liquor valued at $3,000.

A. U. S. AIR BASE IN ENGLAND, April 15 (AP).—Fighter Ace Capt. Don S. Gentile's crash landing accident occurred Thursday on his return from an escort mission to the German industrial city of Schweinfurt, it was disclosed today.

Gentile, who has shot down 23 enemy planes in combat and destroyed seven on the ground to take the lead among American aces in the European theater, was described "as chipper as ever" today.

He was released yesterday from the base hospital where he was treated for shock. He is expected to remain close to quarters for the next few days while army doctors keep a routine check on him.

He had disclosed before he took off Thursday that it would be his last operational fighter flight. Gentile's chief concern today was to reassure his parents at Piqua, O., that he had not been injured.

YANKS IN BRITAIN DEMAND BIGGER TRIBUNE SUPPLY

BY LARRY RUE.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 15.—Altho it is now almost a month since the first deliveries of the Overseas TRIBUNE reached this theater of war for distribution thru post exchanges to American soldiers, the number available in proportion to the demand was so small that THE TRIBUNE still is being bombarded by requests for copies. Yet many PX's at important bases either were not supplied or were unable to meet the demand.

An official here explained that it would take some weeks before full returns could be compiled which would enable them to judge the needs of the various units distributed thruout Britain. The overseas edition has been praised for its selection of local topics which the boys, homesick for Chicagoland, want to read.

All Like the Comics.

The reception accorded the Overseas TRIBUNE proved that the famous features and comics, which appear in THE TRIBUNE and more than 100 other American newspapers, give the overseas edition an attraction which does not limit interest to soldiers coming from any one section of the United States. Among those who want to buy it are soldiers from Maine, New York, Texas, California, or any other state you want to mention. The features and comics are distributed by the News Syndicate Co., Inc.

The GI readers like it and say that the selectively covered news gives them what they want and not what somebody else thinks they ought to read. The most often heard comment, however, is one of gratitude that they finally can get the comics they have been asking for ever since the war started.

Sports Section Is a Hit.

The American headlines and the succinct, graphic presentation of the news also are subjects of praise, as are the selection of photographs and the descriptive captions.

SOLDIER SON'S PHOTO STOLEN.

Mrs. Adeline Weiss, 42, of 3201 Argyle st. reported to police last night that a pocketbook, containing $36 and a picture of her soldier son, were stolen from her purse while she was shopping in a food store at 4724 N. Kedzie av.

WMC ANNOUNCES PLAN TO PROVIDE LAKE SHIP CREWS

A new plan to assure Great Lakes steamships of adequate crews for the 1944 navigation season was received yesterday by the Chicago regional office of the war man power commission from Man Power Director McNutt in Washington, D. C. Under the program, full responsibility for providing crews is given to the United States employment service.

McNutt said that crews were needed for 400 or more lake ships to carry more than 90 million tons of iron ore and other war materials during the navigation season now getting under way.

The USES of the Great Lakes region will receive orders from and refer seamen to either the masters of boats in ports, shore side offices, or companies operating lake ships.

BONG'S FAMILY PRAYS WHILE IT HAILS NEW RANK

They Want Him Home Safe and Are Confident of It.

Poplar, Wis., April 15 [Special].—With praise on their lips and prayers in their hearts, the family of Maj. Richard Ira Bong, 23, America's newest ace of aces, gathered in their farm home near here tonight to celebrate the flyer's promotion from captain on Thursday.

The praise was for the 27 Jap plane record of the son and brother they call "Bud" and their prayers were for his safety and ultimate return. Even Sparks, Maj. Bong's 12 year old dog, who was the first to greet him when he came home on leave last November, wagged his tail as if he knew what was going on.

On the dining room table, proudly displayed by the family, was a telegram from Wisconsin's Gov. Goodland which read:

"Wisconsin and its citizens are proud of the gallant record of your famous son."

Called "Fightin'est Fighter."

There were many other messages of congratulation and the Superior American Legion post sent a copy of a cable to Maj. Bong hailing him as its "fightin'est fighter."

Family members at the celebration included the ace's parents, his brothers, Carl Jr., 17, and Jimmie, 4; his five sisters, Nelda, 21; Geraldine, Joyce, 15; Barbara, 12; and Sue, 10, and Grandma Brice, who lives with the family. Absent because of a trip to Chicago was Bong's pretty sweetheart, Marjorie Vattendahl, Superior State Teachers college sophomore whose picture adorns his Lightning fighter plane.

Scotch? He Doesn't Drink!

Speaking of the case of Scotch whisky that Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker has promised to present to her son for breaking his World War I. record of 26 German aircraft destroyed, Mrs. Bong said:

"Dick never took a drink at home and he doesn't even dance. Poplar morals are pretty strict. He just doesn't drink."

Revealing one of the reasons Bong has been able to shoot down 27 Jap planes, his mother said his eyesight is so keen that he can see very well in the dark and that army tests found his vision "better than perfect." She said she never worries about the major because "he was always able to look after himself," adding:

"Dick will be all right. And he plans to keep right on flying after the war."

Glad Son Was Grounded.

Informed her son had been grounded, Mrs. Bong said she was "very happy" but didn't think Maj. Bong would like it. However, she added:

"He is a good soldier and will abide by the order. Altho I never have worried about Dick, it has been a great strain and the knowledge that he will be comparatively safe is great relief."

Mrs. Bong and Carl Sr., who came to northern Wisconsin from Sweden when he was a boy, were married just before World War I. broke out. After serving in the war, the elder Bong returned to Wisconsin and he and his wife bought the farm they now tend and rebuilt the stuccoed house. The farm is located three miles out of Poplar on the Coolidge highway.

Prior to the fete at the Bong home, most of the residents of Poplar crowded into the Grymala grocery store and restaurant to help the family make a recording for a Chicago radio station. Villagers sat on the counter, bales, boxes, and pickle barrels to listen to the record, a transcription of which will be sent to the ace. Tomorrow recordings of hymns and prayers will be made in the Lutheran Sunday school, which he attended as a boy. They also will be forwarded to him.

In addition to the home party today, the Henry S. Blomberg post No. 847 of the Veterans of Foreign Wars in nearby Superior celebrated the major's triumph. Both Dick and his father are members of the post.

But the most serene joy of all reigned in the Bong dining room, where the family gathered to read their telegrams before a portrait of handsome Maj. Bong on the piano.

Claims Cousin in R. A. F. Shot Down 40 Planes

REGINA, Sask., April 15 (AP). — Leonard W. Carey of Regina today questioned whether Group Capt. A. G. Malan is the ranking fighter pilot of the R. A. F. He said his cousin, Group Capt. Frank R. Carey, now reported fighting in Burma, was credited with 40 enemy planes destroyed two years ago. Malan, now on ground duty, is credited with 32 planes.

[Records in London showed Carey in March, 1942, was listed as unofficial R. A. F. leader with 40 victories, which included 15 unconfirmed probables.]

ARNOLD SENDS SOFT DRINKS TO BONG BY PLANE

Washington, D. C., April 15 (AP).—Two cartons of soft drinks are en route by air to Maj. Richard Bong, ace fighter pilot in the Southwest Pacific, accompanied by a message from Gen. H. H. Arnold saying "I understand you prefer this type of refreshment to others." Bong, with a tally of 27 enemy planes destroyed, has exceeded the World War I. record of Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, who had pledged a case of Scotch whisky to the first pilot in the Southwest Pacific area who exceeded his record. Bong, it was learned, does not drink Scotch, having expressed the preference for a soft drink.

Wants Scotch for Pals.

AN ADVANCED ALLIED AIR BASE New Guinea, April 15 (AP).—Capt. Rickenbacker, send that case of Scotch along right away. Maj. Richard Ira Bong, thinking solely of his friends out here, expressed that sentiment today. "Many, many thanks; please rush it out here for the boys," the major messages via this dispatch. A night club proprietor in Nogales, Ariz., offered Rickenbacker a case of the hard-to-get liquor to send Bong.

AUTO AGE 'SIXTH SENSE' MAKING ACES OF FLYERS

BY ROY GIBBONS.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 15.—A mechanical sixth sense bred by the automobile age into members of the present generation is one of the principal reasons for the numerous American aces emerging from the present war, Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, famed combat flyer and president of Eastern Airlines, said today in an interview.

Rickenbacker shot down 26 German aircraft to become the top American ace of World War I.

The two American fighter pilots who have beaten Rick's record are Capt. Don S. Gentile of Piqua, O., who has 30 German planes, including seven destroyed on the ground, to his credit, and Maj. Richard I. Bong of Poplar, Wis., now hailed as the nation's "ace of aces," whose 27 Jap "kills" were scored in the air.

Record Equaled Twice.

Other "kills" of 26 planes each, equaling Rickenbacker's record, have been scored against the Japs by two Southwest Pacific aces—Majors Joe Foss of Sioux Falls, S. D., and Gregory [Pappy] Boyington of Okanogan, Wash., the latter now missing in action.

"I expect my record to be beaten many, many more times," Rickenbacker said. "The fighter pilots in this war were practically born behind the steering wheel of an automobile.

"This early familiarity with engines and driving has made them so mechanically minded that they have the instant reflex action and judgment of speed necessary for success in the air."

Need Cool Mentality.

Knowledge and experience backed by a "cool and calculating mentality" are prime requisites for the man who would be a good fighter pilot, Rickenbacker explained.

"To become an ace, a pilot, must realize that he must hold his fire until he is within range of the enemy. He must realize that the sky is an awfully big place in which it is easy to waste ammunition.

"The ace also must have perfect coördination of mind and body, and learn not to exert his plane needlessly. He should remember that the reserve of the plane will be needed at a crucial time. He should husband that reserve until the moment is at hand to use it."

It is also best for the aspirant ace to be a teetotaler, abstaining from alcoholic drink simply because he has a big job to do, Rickenbacker said.

Gives Sense of Power.

"Doing without alcohol has a psychological success effect on the fighter pilot," he asserted. "His abstinence gives him a sense of power by letting him know he has gone the limits without the aid of stimulants."

It also is necessary for a fighter pilot to know his limitations, Rickenbacker added.

"It is just as dangerous for a pilot to stop before he has reached his limitations as it is for him to go beyond them," he said. "The best illustration of this in civilian life happens while driving an automobile. Probably as many accidents occur when the driver fails to act on his original impulse as when he makes a decision and then changes his mind.

"The fighter pilot should be like a Texas Ranger. His reflexes should be so lightning fast and automatic he can shoot from the hip without pausing to consider."

Sports help make the fighter pilot, who may come from either a big or a small town and usually does not hate his enemy personally as does the foot soldier, Rickenbacker said.

ALLIES STUDYING WAYS TO SPARE ROME, HULL SAYS

Consider Bridges' Plan for Commission.

Washington, D. C., April 15 (AP).—The whole question of the status of Rome is again being actively considered, Secretary Hull disclosed today. Attention will be given a suggestion that the city be demilitarized by a joint allied-axis commission under the chairmanship of Pope Pius XII.

Sen. Bridges.

In a letter to Sen. Bridges [R., N. H.], dated April 14, the secretary made known that new studies are under way to spare Rome from the ravages of war.

"You, of course, realize that important military considerations are involved and that our allies in the Italian campaign must be consulted," Hull said.

A week ago Bridges proposed in a letter to President Roosevelt that this country take the lead in a move to demilitarize the Italian capital because of its cultural, historic and religious importance.

Proposed Military Commission.

He suggested Mr. Roosevelt propose a special commission composed of two or more military representatives of the allied nations and an equal number of military representatives of the enemy, with the pope as impartial chairman, to make arrangements whereby neither side would make any military use of the city.

"If the Germans failed to accept the proposal," Bridges said, "it would show very clearly their utter disregard for Rome and the unique place it holds in the religious world."

Hull said Mr. Roosevelt, who is away from Washington for a rest, had asked him to acknowledge the letter and he told the senator:

"I am grateful to you for your interest and the concrete proposal which you have made. I wish to assure you that it will be considered and that the whole question of the status of Rome is again being actively considered by the interested governments and their military authorities."

Pope Asked Aid.

Pope Pius appealed to allied and German leaders on March 12 to spare Rome from becoming a battleground and at that time Hull said it was the hope of the allies that this could be done.

The secretary of state declared the blame would be on the Germans if Rome suffered and pointed to the announced allied policy of avoiding damage to cultural and religious monuments except when the Nazis turned them to military use.

Press Hails Italy's Adieu to Fascist Balcony Slang

BARI, Italy, April 15 (AP).—The newspaper La Gazzetta del Mezzo-Giorno today hailed the demise of "Fascist slang" and the return to the "real Italian language—bound to noble origins and noble traditions. To the new generation the new language must sound strange," the newspaper said. "They never heard it. It is the voice of Italian culture and not the breath of a puppet shouting showy expressions from a balcony."

REDS GIVE SOFIA 4 DAYS TO PICK SIDES, REPORT

[By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.]

BERNE, Switzerland, April 15.—Sitting in emergency session, the Bulgarian Regency council is understood to be examining the text of an urgent Russian communication brought from Moscow by plane today by the soviet envoy Lavrichiew, as well as a second communication from Berlin.

The Russian note is believed to contain a virtual ultimatum under the terms of which Bulgaria is given until next Wednesday to "define its foreign political position."

Generals Hold Parley.

Simultaneously Gen. Markov, who has just been removed from his Bulgarian command in Jugo-Slavia after being implicated in creating an army opposition against the government's pro-axis activities, has arrived at Marshal Ivan S. Konev's headquarters in Bessarabia for discussions regarding Bulgaria's obligations toward Germany.

What connection exists between the two reports and the German military occupation in Bulgaria could not be ascertained.

Gestapo Agents in Sofia.

Dr. Bogdan Philov's refusal to come to the Vienna conference of Quisling puppet government leaders this week is believed to have caused a serious Bulgaro-German crisis.

One report was that the Germans had moved Gestapo agents into the capital, where a roundup of anti-Nazi elements is expected. Elite troops from both Rumania and Greece have assumed the "reinforcement" of all Bulgaria's Black sea ports.

INJURED IN ELEVATOR.

Robert Henry, 17, of 51 E. Marquette rd., an attendant at the Chicago Service Parking company, was crushed between the floor of the company's hoist elevator and the third floor door in an accident yesterday. He was taken to Alexian Brothers hospital.

RUSSIANS FIND ROAD TO CRIMEA IN SHALLOW SEA

Area Left Lightly Guarded by Germans.

[This is the first of two articles analyzing new developments in the war.]

BY COL. CONRAD H. LANZA.

Important developments have occurred during the last two weeks. These have centered on a continuous Russian advance in the south and no advance elsewhere.

A new Russian campaign developed in the Crimea. After a succession of attacks, at rather frequent intervals since last September, which had no important success, the Russians have broken into the Crimea. Previous attempts to do so had been over the Perekop isthmus, and by amphibious operations in the vicinity of Kerch. The latter had succeeded only in capturing a beachhead.

Crossed Shallow Sea.

While repeating the attacks at the old stands, an entirely new one was added. This was across the Sivash, a shallow salt sea on the north side of the Crimea. The south shore, held up to now by the Germans and Rumanians, is full of lakes and ponds. It is a difficult area to attack over. Perhaps for this reason it was only slightly guarded. It was here that the Russians made their penetration of the axis lines.

After 24 hours of fighting, the Germans found themselves unable to remedy the situation. The Russian advance threatened to cut off both the axis troops near Kerch and those on the Perekop isthmus. Not having sufficient troops to stop the Russians, the axis abandoned all of the main part of the Crimea, and withdrew toward Sevastopol.

In Eight Month Siege.

Sevastopol is a first class fortress and a naval and air base. The Russians held it against a German siege for eight months. At the end they were able to save a part of the garrison by withdrawing it by water. It would seem quite possible that Germans will be able to do the same.

Whether the axis will defend Sevastopol to the end or abandon it will depend upon how badly the axis troops in the Crimea are needed elsewhere. At the present time it would seem that the axis could withdraw at least most of the troops by sea if it so desired, or might defend Sevastopol for some time.

The axis strength in the Crimea has been estimated as around a dozen divisions. This is a guess, but it seems reasonable. To defend Sevastopol, a minimum of six to eight divisions would be needed. If the axis does have 12 divisions present, they might withdraw some now, while leaving a sufficient garrison to hold the place. As long as sea transportation is available, the axis, within limits, will be able to withdraw from or reënforce the garrison.

Rule East of Dniester.

North of Odessa the Russians have about cleaned out the axis forces east of the Dniester river, which was the boundary of Russia, prior to the Russian seizure of Bessarabia in 1940.

In central Rumania, the axis line, anchored at Jassy, has not changed much for a week. In places the Russians have advanced, in others the axis has. The axis may desire to hold this line until after its troops withdrawing from the Odessa region have had time to withdraw to the rear of the Danube and Prut rivers. A withdrawal after these troops are safe may then occur. However, if the Russians let up on their pressure no axis retreat would be required.

Farther north the Russians have made a substantial advance and they are practically on a line joining their force north of Jassy and continuing it on to the Carpathian mountains.

TWO DAY SMASH BLASTS KURILES FOR 40TH TIME

Islands Bombed 16 Times in Five Days.

U. S. PACIFIC FLEET HDQ., PEARL HARBOR, April 15 (AP).—Repulse of the first Japanese attempt in five weeks to strike against an American Central Pacific base, and additional United States air attacks on Japan's Kurile Islands were reported by Adm. Chester W. Nimitz today.

The announcement said marine night fighters intercepted Japanese bombers attacking the American base on Eniwetok atoll in the Marshalls. The bombers were turned back as the marine pilots shot down two and probably accounted for a third. All of the Japanese bombs fell in the water, Nimitz said.

40th Raid on Kuriles.

Steady hammering of the Kuriles was continued Thursday night and Friday. Search planes unloaded explosives on Paramushiro and Shumshu. The same night Liberators struck Paramushiro and Onnekotan. The Japanese sent up only meager anti-aircraft fire.

The assaults bring to 40 the number of attacks on the Kuriles by American bombers and to 16 the number of times they have struck in the last five days.

Adm. Nimitz announced important changes in the Central Pacific air high command in forward areas. Maj. Gen. Willis H. Hale will take command of the shore based air force forward area, while Rear Adm. John H. Hoover will become commander of the forward area, including shore based air forces. Gen. Hale succeeds Adm. Hoover in direction of operations and logistics support for all shore based army, navy, and marine corps combat aviation.

The changes, effective May 1, give Brig. Gen. R. W. Douglas the post of acting commander of the 7th air-force.

3,000 Slain in Admiralties.

ALLIED HDQ., Southwest Pacific, April 16 [Sunday]—(AP).—Three thousand Japanese have been killed in the Admiralty Islands since the American 1st cavalry division landed there Feb. 29, headquarters announced today.

Gen. MacArthur's bulletin today told of raids Thursday on Wewak, New Guinea, where five grounded enemy planes were destroyed. Rabaul, New Britain, and Kavieng, New Ireland.

Two allied planes were shot down and others were damaged by anti-aircraft fire.

WE'LL FIGHT ON IN FULL UNITY, AXIS DECLARES

Aids Hold Talks with Tojo in Tokio.

LONDON, April 15 (AP).—The axis announced that an important council of war was held at Premier Tojo's home in Tokio today and the conferees, after discussing the allied offensive of the past year and the promised invasion of the west, proclaimed a firm determination to fight together to the end.

Statements were reported made by both Tojo and German Ambassador Heinrich Stahmer stressing axis unity in such terms as to suggest that recent allied progress and the invasion prospect had spread fears among enemy peoples that the axis partnership, already darkened by Italy's surrender, might be crumbling further.

In particular the axis version of the parley, broadcast by Berlin, stressed the theme that the European satellites were not wavering.

Service Chiefs at Parley.

The Berlin and Tokio radio indicated that top leaders available in Tokio attended the unusual meeting, with the technical committee of the axis supplemented by generals and admirals, Foreign Minister Shigemitsu, Naval Minister Shimada, "and a number of army and navy experts and other official personages." Delegates also were said to have represented the Italian puppet fascist regime.

After reviewing the general war situation, Tojo was quoted as saying the United States and Britain had "launched a counter-attack from all sides" and had concentrated "all their energies and resources in attacking the periphery of the axis powers' territories in the east as well as in the west."

"They nowhere succeeded, however, in shaking our firm position," Tojo was quoted. "On the contrary, faith in the final victory of our nations and in the invincibility of our position has grown day by day. . . .

Pledge United Battle.

"We are determined to foil enemy plans and not to down arms before [victory]. Altho we are fighting separately in the east and the west, we will and we shall still further deepen our coöperation and fight the common enemy with united forces.

"We shall frustrate every attempt made by the enemy to divide us. I know that this conception is shared by Germany and Italy."

The announcement painted a rosy picture of the axis military position, including statements that "the attack on London has been resumed on a large scale" and that "it seems quite possible" that the allies' promise of a western invasion "will again prove to be one of the usual empty Anglo Saxon propaganda phrases." Germany was declared to be ready for the assault.

LOOKING FOR A NEW WINTER RESORT? GO TO BOUGAINVILLE ISLE

Washington, D. C., April 15 (AP).—Bougainville Island now is "like a city park," with broad, hard surfaced roads; Maj. Gen. Ross E. Rowell, commanding general, marine aircraft wings, Pacific fleet, told a news conference today.

"With proper publicity," he added, "it could take the place of many now popular resorts."

In contrast to good conditions under which American troops there are fighting, he said the Japanese, cut off from supplies, are "underfed and in desparate straits for food."

PROBATION FOR 7 IN LAKE COUNTY.

Seven Highland Park and Highwood young men who confessed the theft of $100 worth of articles from Fort Sheridan and Highwood homes were placed on probation yesterday by Judge Perry L. Persons in Lake county Juvenile court at Waukegan.

ALLIES REPEL NAZI ATTACK ON ITALIAN LINE

ALLIED HDQ., Naples, April 15 (AP).—German ground forces were intensifying their activity in the upper Garigliano sector of the main Italian front today. Headquarters said enemy guns shelled one area for more than two hours yesterday while German attempts to infiltrate the allied lines were broken up.

[The British radio quoted a dispatch from Algiers saying 5th army forces "have captured the town of Tremensuoli about two miles west of Minturno and close to the Tyrrhenean coast."]

In the last week, the quietest yet experienced by the allied ground forces, the allied air forces flew 8,500 sorties in attacks on Austria, Hungary, and Nazi communications in Italy. All rail lines in central Italy have been cut since March 28. Daily raids were made thruout the week despite bad weather, in order to keep the lines cut.

YANKS IN NORTHERN BURMA FIGHT ALONG WITH NATIVE TROOPS

WITH GEN. STILWELL'S FORCES IN THE MOGAUNG VALLEY, North Burma, April 14 [Delayed]—(AP).—In an area that extends 75 miles across north Burma, Chinese troops, American raiders, British Gurkhas, and native Kachin levies are exerting southward pressure on the Japanese in a battle against time.

In the center is the main Mogaung valley push in which the Chinese are now on an 8 mile line in the valley's center, 2 miles above Warasup.

In the mountains east of the Mogaung, the Americans who have renamed themselves "the Burma raiders," along with the Kachins and Gurkhas have been fighting around Tiang Zap on the main southward trail 50 miles above Myitkyina, which, incidentally, is pronounced "Mituhinaw."

NEWS OF UNREST IN JAPAN LEAKS THRU CENSORS

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 15.—Hope that among Japan's 80 million people there is a formidable basis for an underground movement to help the allies was expressed in the London Star yesterday by E. G. Osborn, a resident of the orient for 20 years.

Osborn pointed to two issues of the Osaka Mainichi, a daily newspaper financed by the powerful Mitsui family of industrialists, which reached him here. Despite the strictest censorship, calculated to keep from the outside world the slightest information on the state of affairs inside Japan, these papers report serious internal troubles in November.

Food Riots Reported.

The papers were allowed to report food riots in Kogoshima, the suppression of the Japanese Farmers' union, and the publication of imperial decrees disbanding the new Shakai, or workers' party, after it held a meeting in Ueno park in Tokio at which 40,000 persons were present.

A food riot story disclosed that 160 persons had been arrested up to Nov. 8, 1943, with the disorders still not subsiding. Those arrested included a member of parliament and the leader of the Farmers' union, the oldest labor movement in Japan. In 1927 the union had 3,000,000 members, including 36 members of parliament.

67 Policemen Injured.

The Ueno park meeting resulted in injuries to 67 policemen, of whom 11 were seriously hurt. Demonstrators' banners weighing one and one-half tons were burned.

Osborn said there are many workers, intelligent traveled Japanese, and a few thousand intellectuals who would help the allies overthrow the Japanese government if given the opportunity.

Navy Hunts Jap Fleet—King We'll Bomb Tokio Soon—Hale

Must Smash Empire

Washington, D. C., April 15 (AP).—Japan's war fleet is damaged so that she never can hope to make up losses, and heavy new blows at it may be expected in the next few months, Adm. Ernest J. King, navy commander in chief, said today.

"We are seeking opportunities to strike whenever we can get within range of their warships or bases," he said, "and we shall create these opportunities."

As examples he cited recent attacks on Palau, Yap, and Woleai islands in the Caroline Islands, then added:

"We have reduced Japan's merchant fleet to not more than two-thirds of what it was when we were attacked. We have sunk over 2,000,000 tons of her cargo tonnage, and have so seriously damaged her fleet of warships that she can never hope to make up losses by building new fighting ships or repairing those that we have damaged.

Must Dissolve Empire.

"She cannot stand such a rate of loss for any length of time and keep her empire together. The dissolution of that empire, of course, is one of the primary objectives of this war."

He was addressing the graduating class of the federal bureau of investigation's police academy. He described Japanese reasoning as holding that by retaining possession of the "inner portion" of seized territory Japan has "won the war," and continued:

"The outer ring of islands they occupy serves chiefly as their fighting front. Thru their persistence in holding these islands they hope to make our advance so costly that we will give up the effort to break into their inner defense.

Meet Each Situation.

"We must deliver the heaviest attacks of which we are capable, as frequently as we are able, where they will hurt the most. The Japs will learn that we are not relying on orthodox methods of warfare.

"We are meeting each situation as it arises or as we can create situations, and our enemies are finding that when we strike we now have the force behind us to carry the strike thru to a finish."

Praises Yank Ingenuity.

Lt. Gen. Alexander A. Vandegrift, marine corps commandant, told the graduates that "the law enforcement officer, like a good soldiering man, should derive from his training—and his common sense—an intuitive faculty which enables himself to adjust quickly to any situation in which he finds himself, and, when he is on his own, to make his own decisions."

"This faculty seems to be one of the greatest advantages the American fighting man holds over the average Japanese soldier facing him," Vandegrift said.

Foe Defeated in Air

SEVENTH ARMY AIR FORCE HDQ., April 15 (AP).—"It will not be long before you are over Tokio," Maj. Gen. Willis H. Hale told the members of his 7th army air force today in bidding them farewell. Gen. Hale has been named commander of land-based air forces at forward areas in the Central Pacific.

"The objective of our aerial war is to place our heavy bombers within range of the major war production centers of Japan," Gen. Hale said.

He pointed out that in five months of a sustained air offensive the 7th A. A. F. has advanced heavy bomber bases nearest Japan 1,330 nautical miles westward. The most advanced base now is 1,800 nautical miles from Tokio.

Japs Defeated in Air.

"No other air force has advanced its heavy bomber bases so far in such a short time," he said. "It is just seven and a half months since we made our landing in our first Central Pacific island and started to lay an air strip. Truk then looked as far away almost as Tokio. Today it is right in our front yard."

He said the Japanese appear to have been defeated in the air.

"When the enemy cannot stop our bombers he is being defeated, perhaps gradually, but nevertheless certainly," he said at a press conference.

"Our great Pacific fleet has been able to defy Japanese air power to penetrate 1,000 to 1,500 miles into an area which was fully alerted and which should have been a hornet's nest of viciously attacking planes."

Cites Low United States Losses.

"The Japanese never will have a better opportunity to strike at our navy than they have had in the last few weeks. They did not do it because they did not have what it takes."

Unless the Japanese can greatly reënforce their air arm, Gen. Hale observed, "our future progress in the Central Pacific air war will be determined in Washington and not to any extent in Tokio."

He reported strikingly low losses for recent operations.

"In all our bombings of the Marshalls from November to now, the 7th A. A. F. has lost 33 men killed, 135 wounded, and 215 missing," he said. He said the 7th has destroyed 206 enemy planes and probably 128 more and sunk or damaged 108 enemy ships.

BRITISH PREPARE FOR SHOWDOWN BATTLE IN INDIA

Troops Reinforced to Hurl Out Jap Invaders.

BY CLAY GOWRAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ALLIED HDQ. IN NEW DELHI, India, April 15.—The showdown battle which has been looming ever since the Japanese first thrust their three-pronged offensive into India apparently is now imminent. British and Indian divisions which have been fighting for time since the Japs crossed the frontier into the Manipur state now are reinforced and ready for an attempt to drive the enemy back toward Burma, according to a military spokesman here.

The coming attempt promises to be a bloody contest. British military authorities concede that the Japs have 30,000 troops in Manipur and have brought light tanks, trucks, and artillery thru the jungle to support their fighting units. The British and Indian troops have fought a defensive, delaying action while waiting for reinforcements and for the Japs to come out into the open and fight on ground selected by the British commanders. But this the Japs have as yet been unwilling to do. Ever since their troops first crossed the frontier the offensive has been in their hands.

Surround British Force.

Advance patrols of three Jap columns first were discovered in Manipur March 12 apparently converging toward Imphal. Almost immediately the village of Tiddim, 100 miles south of Imphal, was cut off. The 17th Indian division, based at Tiddim, was forced to cut its way toward Imphal thru Japanese road blocks, burning Tiddim before leaving the town. The village of Tamu, southeast of Imphal, was abandoned to another Jap column about 10 days later and the Japs now are reported within 8 to 10 miles of Imphal on the Tamu-Imphal road. The Japs used tanks at both Tiddim and Tamu.

North of Imphal action has been more spirited. To the northeast is the small hill village of Ukhrul. Here the British assigned to delay the sweep of another Jap column into upper Manipur inflicted—but also suffered—heavy casualties. British forces in Kohima, 90 miles due north of Imphal, were surrounded by the Japs a week ago.

Tiddim, Tamu, and Ukhrul have been evacuated and Kohima surrounded.

Road to Railway Cut.

Imphal, itself, with strong Jap forces to the south, east, and north, and impassable country on the west of the city, is cut off from ground communication with other allied forces. Most important, the all-weather road leading from the Assam-Bengal railroad at Dimapur, 136 miles north of Imphal, is cut where it passes thru Kohima. This is the only good road leading to Imphal.

[Adm. Mountbatten's bulletin yesterday admitted that the 35 mile Dimapur-Kohima road had been blocked by the Japs, and said the enemy also still holds stretches of the Bishenpur-Silchar road, which also connects with the railroad. The Tokio radio said heavy fighting is under way along the latter road, adding that the British have thrown in heavy reënforcements.]

The British have huge supplies built up at Imphal and planes operate daily from Assam. Even daily civilian airmail planes still are maintained.

The question has been asked why the Japanese ever were allowed to invade India after the British had almost two years to prepare a frontier defense. The British reply is that Manipur is a hilly jungle difficult to defend without huge forces.

130 MORE YANK FLYERS INTERNED BY SWITZERLAND

Crews of 13 Bombers Are Taken to Resort.

BERNE, Switzerland, April 15 (AP).—One hundred and thirty Americans, comprising the crews of 12 bombers which landed in Switzerland and of another bomber shot down by the Swiss, arrived today at the mountain resort of Adelboden for internment.

The bomber that was shot down was attacked by the Swiss after it failed to respond to landing signals Thursday, when United States planes attacked nine targets in Germany and occupied Europe. The other 12 bombers obeyed Swiss orders to land.

The entire crew of the destroyed plane parachuted to safety as the craft fell near Siebnen, southeast of Zurich. Investigation has not yet established why the plane did not observe the signal to land. Three of the crew, slightly injured, were hospitalized.

500 Yanks in Switzerland.

There now are approximately 400 uniformed American internees at Adelboden, and nearly 100 others who escaped from Germany are at the city of Klosters. Those who escaped into Switzerland wear civilian clothes. Seventeen American flyers are buried in Switzerland. Thirteen of them died in crashes last fall and four of injuries sustained in combat over Germany.

The internees get board and room and $15 monthly, plus use of a credit system for purchases of such items as clothing and cigarets. Those escaping from Germany draw full pay.

In signaling and guiding planes to a landing, Swiss aircraft, well marked for identification, approach the bombers from an angle at which it would be difficult to attack, thus establishing they are not enemy planes seeking combat.

Rocket Signals Given.

Rockets are set off and are supplemented by hand signals for the bombers to follow to a field. The signals are repeated until the bomber complies. If it ignores the signals it becomes subject to attack. The Swiss thus far have announced downing two.

Upon landing, the flyers are taken to barracks where their names, and other pertinent data, are recorded on forms which are given to the American attache. The flyers then are taken to Adelboden and installed in hotels leased by the American government.

14 Flyers Reach Sweden.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, April 15 (AP).—Fourteen American flyers, forced down in Denmark or on Danish isles recently, reached Sweden today after hazardous small boat flights from the Germans.

As refugees the flyers are not subject to internment and will be returned to England when transportation is available.

Sweden announced that one of about 50 foreign planes which passed over southern Sweden today crashed and burned near Laholm and that one man in an American uniform was killed. The fate of the others in the crew was not known. Sweden also announced one American was killed by anti-aircraft fire Tuesday when 10 bombers were forced to land in Sweden.

Two Planes Land in Jugo-Slavia.

New York, April 15 (AP).—Two American planes have been shot down or made forced landings in Jugo-Slavia and their crews rescued, Gen. Draja Mihailovitch's headquarters reported today.

LT. BARMACK, 24, KILLED IN BOMB RAID ON NAZIS

Lt. Gerald L. Barmack, 24, son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Barmack, 7520 Yates ave., was killed March 29 in a bombing raid over Germany, the family has been notified by the war department. Lt. Barmack was navigator on a Flying Fortress and had participated in six missions over Europe, according to his last letter, dated March 26 and received by his parents a few days ago. He was born in Chicago and was graduated from Hirsch High school, Wilson Junior college, and the University of Chicago. He entered the army air force in November, 1941, and for the last 13 weeks had been stationed in England.

YANKS RIP NAZIS FROM 2 SIDES; HIT NEAR BERLIN

Bucharest and Ploesti Among Targets.

LONDON, April 15 (AP).—Powerful American aerial forces struck from Britain and Italy today against German air fields and transportation facilities, the Rumanian capital of Bucharest and the Ploesti oil center in blows that assisted the Red army.

Flying from British bases, United States Lightning, Thunderbolt, and Mustang fighters swept over 10 German and Nazi occupied air fields. Some formations penetrated to the vicinity of Berlin.

Thirty American fighters failed to return. This constituted the largest loss of American fighters in one day's operation. The previous record loss was 24 at Brunswick a week ago.

Chicagolanders Bag Planes.

The fighters, which possibly totaled between 500 to 750, shot down 18 German planes and destroyed many on the ground.

Flyers who destroyed Nazi planes included Lt. Russell Sobieskie, Cicero, Ill.; Lt. Charles F. Anderson, Gary, Ind.; Flight Officer Samuel Lowman, Warsaw, Ind.; Capt. Raymond Care, Angola, Ind., and Lt. William Rautenbush, Weyauwega, Wis.

The assaults today broke a one day lull in the heavy blows being rained on Hitler's aerial defenses and supply lines. Heavy bombers, however, were idle for the second day in a row. The British based operations, which ranged over central and northern Germany, constituted one of the greatest mass fighter attacks ever launched. The targets, however, were not named.

Strike Near Russian Front.

In the assault from Italian bases probably 700 American heavy bombers and 500 fighters penetrated to within 150 miles of the Russian-German front.

The concentrated effort by the British based fighters and Italian based bombers was the third two-directional assault in four days.

Flying Fortresses made the attack on Ploesti and Liberators hammered Bucharest. These strategic targets, 35 miles apart, are important supply hubs for axis forces battling the Russians.

NATION AWAITS SMEAR INSPIRED SEDITION TRIAL

Hearing to Bare Seamy Side of New Deal.

government pay rollers on the trial jury.

The sedition case originated in a smear campaign by the Roosevelt administration and Eugene Meyer's Washington Post to link pre-war noninterventionist members of congress with German agents and anti-Jewish propagandists. The theory of the smear was that because the anti-interventionist speeches of senators and representatives were circulated by German agents and anti-Semites who were indicted for sedition the members of congress were seditious.

In order to entrap defendants into a seditious act in the District of Columbia a Post reporter named Dillard Stokes posed as fictitious Jefferson Breem, 3917 Pennsylvania av., S. E., which was Stokes' residence, and also as Adam Quigley, Box 219, Ben Franklin station, Washington, D. C.

Signing himself Breem in some cases and Quigley in others, the Post reporter, breathing a plausible degree of anti-Semitism, wrote to numerous anti-Semitic agitators seeking samples of their outgivings. Five took the bait and presently found themselves indicted for the "overt act" of causing "to be delivered to the postoffice establishment of the United States a copy" of their propaganda "addressed to Jefferson Breem."

Two Indictments Faulty.

The notorious methods employed caused such a protest in congress that Atty. Gen. Biddle removed his assistant, William Power Maloney, from the case and retained O. John Rogge to reorganize the prosecution on a more respectable plane. The first two indictments were found faulty by the courts and Rogge finally obtained the third indictment on the new ground of a conspiracy to establish a Nazi form of government in the United States. Eleven persons named in the first two indictments were omitted in the third and eight new defendants added.

The 30 defendants are:

Joseph E. McWilliams of New York City and Chicago, organizer of the Christian Mobilizers and publisher of the Christian Mobilizer.

Lawrence Dennis, New York City, publisher of the Weekly Foreign Letter and author of the "Dynamics of War and Revolution."

E. J. Parker Sage and Garland L. Alderman, Detroit, Mich., officers of the National Workers' league, which published the Nationalist Newsletter.

Gerhard Wilhelm Kunze, New York City, national leader of the German-American bund, now serving 15 years in prison for espionage.

August Klapprott, New York City, deputy leader of the bund, now serving five years for evading the draft.

Ernest Frederick Elmhurst, New York City, author of "The World Hoax."

George E. Deatherage, St. Albans, W. Va., organizer of the Knights of the White Camellia.

Silver Shirt Leader.

William Dudley Pelley, Noblesville, Ind., leader of the Silver Shirts, serving 15 years for violating the sedition act.

James True, Washington, D. C., publisher of industrial control reports.

Edward James Smythe, New York City, publisher of Our Common Cause.

H. Victor Broenstrupp, Washington and New York City, attorney for Pelley.

Robert Edward Edmondson, Grass Valley, Cal., head of Edmondson Economic Research service.

William Robert Lyman Jr., Detroit, officer of the National Workers' league.

Gerald B. Winrod, Wichita, Kas., publisher of the Defender.

Charles B. Hudson, Omaha, Neb., publisher of America in Danger.

Elmer J. Garner, Wichita, Kas., editor of Publicity.

George Sylvester Viereck, New York City, now serving a sentence of from one to five years for violating the foreign agents registration act.

Prescott Freese Dennett, Washington, who with Viereck and others organized the Make Europe Pay War Debts committee.

Herman Max Schwinn, Los Angeles, west coast leader of the German-American bund.

Distributed Films.

Franz K. Ferenz, Los Angeles, active in the Friends of Progress and in the distribution of Nazi propaganda films, now serving a prison sentence for violating the California anti-subversive law.

Robert Noble and Ellis O. Jones, Los Angeles, organizers of the Friends of Progress, convicted of violating the California sedition law and sentenced to five and four years' imprisonment, respectively.

David J. Baxter, San Bernardino, Cal., organizer of the Social Republic society.

Indictment Lists Statements.

The indictment charges that in carrying out the conspiracy the defendants disseminated the following statements:

"1. Democracy is decadent; a national socialist or fascist form of government should be established in the United States,

"2. A national socialist revolution is inevitable if we are to rid our country of its decadent democracy.

"3. The government of the United States, the congress, and public officials are controled by Communists, international Jews, and plutocrats.

"4. The Democratic and Republican parties and their candidates for public office are tools of international Jewry and do not represent the will of the American people.

"5. The acts, proclamations, and orders of the public officials of the United States and the laws of congress are illegal, corrupt, traitorous, and in direct violation of the Constitution of the United States.

"6. The United States is governed, not by the duly elected representatives of the people, but by a group of alien minded persons opposed to American principles and ideas and seeking to overthrow the Constitution of the United States.

Belittle Axis Threat.

"7. The activities and territorial acquisitions and plans of the axis powers constitute no real danger to the national existence and security of the United States or any of its territorial possessions.

"8. The axis powers are fighting to free the world from domination by communism and international Jewry, and to save Christianity, hence the United States should give no aid and comfort to the enemies of the axis.

"9. The cause of the axis is the cause of justice and morality; they have committed no aggressive act against any nation and are fighting a solely defensive war against British imperialism, American capitalists, and the desire of American public officials to rule the world, hence any act of war against them is unjust and immoral on the part of the United States.

"10. The public officials of the United States of America are trying deliberately to provoke war with peaceful nations, such as Germany, Italy, and Japan, which are seeking only to live at peace with the rest of the world.

"11. President Roosevelt and congress, thru a surreptitious and illegal war program against the axis powers, sold out the United States and forced the axis powers to wage war upon us.

Charge Unpreparedness.

"12. As the result of incompetence and corruption in public office, the United states is unprepared to wage war against the axis powers, who have the best equipped and most powerful military establishment in the world.

"13. The present war is a dishonest war waged at the expense and measured in the blood and dollars of the people of the United States solely for the benefit of and to insure the continuance of world domination by 'international bankers,' 'international capitalists,' 'Mongolian Jews,' 'Communists,' and 'international Jewry.'

"14. The Japanese attack upon Pearl Harbor was deliberately invited by the public officials of the United States, in order to involve the United States in a foreign war.

"15. The war with Japan was deliberately provoked by the insane, unjust, aggressive, and traitorous policies of officials of the United States.

"16. An honorable and just peace could be brought about speedily were it not for the opposition of Communists, international Jewry, and war profiteers."

CHICAGO SKY DRAGON DIES AS PLANE HITS A MOUNTAIN IN CHINA

Sgt. R. J. Conroy.

Word was received yesterday of the death of Sgt. Robert J. Conroy, a member of Maj. Gen. Claire L. Chennault's Sky Dragons, who had previously been reported as missing. A letter to his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Conroy, 515 W. 31st st., informed her that her son, a turret gunner, had been instantly killed with all the other members of his crew when a plane crashed into a mountain side on Jan. 15 while returning from a mission over eastern China. The letter added that the bodies were being taken by the Chinese to an advanced base for burial. Sgt. Conroy was 20 years old and a graduate of Calumet High school. He was employed by the Pullman company prior to his enlistment on Dec. 8, 1942.

CAPITAL ASKING 'WHAT'S DEWEY'S FOREIGN POLICY?'

Study Past Statements for Position.

BY ARTHUR SEARS HENNING

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 15.—Where Gov. Dewey stands on American post-war foreign policy has become a matter of increasing interest as the demand for his nomination for President gathers apparently irresistible momentum while he continues to maintain silence on the issues of the hour on the ground that he is not a candidate.

What is known of his position on these questions is gleaned from fragmentary public utterances by the governor since the United States entered the war.

In 1942 Mr. Dewey contributed a plank to the New York Republican state platform which advocated international coöperation to preserve peace "by force if necessary," language which later was borrowed by Secretary of State Hull to set forth his own conception of post-war measures to prevent a recurrence of aggression. The force might be supplied by an international police force or by some less formal arrangement.

Text of Dewey Plank.

The text of the Dewey plank follows:

"Out of the sufferings and horror of this war there must rise, with God's help, the foundations of a lasting peace, a peace which will give to all peoples of the world the right to live and worship as they please without fear of prosecution and to minorities the fullest protection of inalienable rights as free human beings.

"To that end the United States must be prepared to undertake new obligations and responsibilities in the community of nations. We must coöperate with other nations to promote the wider international exchange of goods and services, to broaden access to raw materials, to achieve monetary and economic stability, and thus discourage the growth of rampant nationalism and its spawn, economic and military aggression. As a further safeguard, we must join with other nations to secure the peace of the world, by force if necessary, against any future outbreak of international gangsterism."

Helped at Mackinac.

A year later Dewey had a hand in framing the declaration of the Republican post-war advisory council at Mackinac Island in favor of international collaboration to prevent aggression and preserve peace without surrender of American sovereignty. It mentioned the use of force only indirectly when it urged that "peace and security ought to be ultimately established upon other sanctions than force."

Dewey approved the preliminary draft of this declaration when it was submitted to him in advance of the Mackinac Island meeting in September, 1943, by Sen. Vandenberg [R., Mich.], its author, and subsequently chairman of the committee which produced the final draft. Incidentally Sen. Vandenberg figures prominently in the speculation on the secretary of state Dewey will choose, if elected President. Others mentioned in this connection are former President Hoover, an active behind the scenes promoter of Dewey for President, and John Foster Dulles, a New York lawyer and internationalist, a close friend of the governor credited with influencing him profoundly on foreign policy.

Declares for Alliance.

It was at a press conference upon his arrival at Mackinac Island that Dewey declared for a military alliance with Great Britain. He was asked his views of suggestions of an alliance which Prime Minister Churchill had thrown out at a gathering in Washington a few days before.

"We have had a de facto military alliance with Great Britain practically ever since the war of 1812," Mr. Dewey said. "In the two principal cases since, when war was made on Britain, we went to her defense."

"Do we understand you to think it likely that the United States and Great Britain will continue that alliance, and on a more formal basis, after this war?" a correspondent asked.

Sees Benefit to U. S.

"I should think that would be very likely and would be in our interest," he replied.

"Will you advocate a statement to that effect at this conference?" another questioner asked.

"I am not ready to announce now whether I will advocate it or not," he said. "I emphasize, tho that we have had a close relationship in fact with Great Britain for the last 120 years. The American people never before had such a shock as the one they had when they realized that Germany might capture the British fleet. You in this room remember as well as I do how every one was chilled."

"Would you include Russia and China in such an alliance?" some one else asked.

Might Include Russia.

"I would hope that in the working out of the peace Russia and China might be included," he replied. "The 'world's alliance' is too often a catch word, however."

Gov. Dewey said he was not disturbed about United States surrender of any of its sovereignty by joining in an international arrangement for preservation of peace.

In a Lincoln's birthday speech last February Gov. Dewey hailed the Mackinac Island declaration as the model of the declaration of Moscow engineered by Secretary Hull and of the Connally resolution later adopted overwhelmingly by the senate.

"Any one who gratuitously raises so much as a doubt as to the unswerving determination of our party to build a great peace trifles with the truth and with his country's future. I was present at Mackinac Island," he said, "when the Republican governors and Republican leaders in the sente an dthe house of congress deliberated upon the principles which must guide us in bringing about a lasting pesee. There was not one person present who was not moved by the tremendous opportunity to state the principles by which it was to be approached and inspired by the vision of what lies ahead of us as a nation.

Terms It Constructive.

"It was that group of Republicans who drew the Mackinac charter, which was translated into action by our distinguished secretary of state at Moscow. It was that result which was embodied in the Connally resolution, adopted by a bipartisan majority of the senate. Here was the first concrete, constructive achievement in our foreign policy of the future, and its framework was advanced by the Republican party at Mackinac Island."

"The people of the United States were turning to the Republican party even before the war broke out. They have been turning to it at an accelerated pace since we entered the war because they are so desperately anxious that we shall build well and strongly in international coöperation after this war.

"The people know that the Republican party has been devoted since the day of its birth to responsible constitutional government. They know they cannot hope for world peace unless that peace is built upon the firm rock of truly representative government. They know that with a self-willed executive who wars at every turn with the congress they will have a repetition of the same catastrophe which happened in 1919."

"No Paper Peace!"

On March 1 last Dewey, in a New York speech, warned that the building of the peace will just have commenced when the peace treaty is signed, that the document "must be no paper peace." He said it must not be a rigid, inflexible thing, but must "provide peoples everywhere with simple, understandable means orf bringing an end to the horror of war."

"It must be constant, daily beneficiary of the labors of men of good-will, striving to make it work and sacrificing to make it endure," the governor asserted. "Most of all, it must be based upon a growing sense of fellowship between peoples. It must be built so strong that neither discouragement, selfishness, nor the arrogant mouthings of ambitious men can again lead them into wars of conquest."

Vets Told How to Replace Lost Discharge Buttons

Discharged soldiers who have damaged their lapel buttons denoting their honorable separation from the army may obtain replacements by presenting damaged buttons at any army post, Maj. Gen. H. S. Aurand, commanding general of the 6th service command, said yesterday. If the button has been lost, a new one will be issued if documentary evidence of its loss is presented, the general added.

WARD STRIKERS LOSE FIRST PLEA ON PICKET CURB

Judge Lupe Refuses to Quash Injunction.

A petition to quash a temporary injunction forbidding violence and limiting the picket line of the Montgomery Ward & Co. strikers to 42 was denied by Judge John J. Lupe in Superior court yesterday. A hearing on an amended petition was set for Tuesday.

Atty. Francis Heisler, representing the union, charged in his petition that the company had openly defied the laws of the United States and the war labor board in refusing to obey orders. He said he was against violence of any kind, but did not believe the strikers were to blame. Forty-two pickets are not enough to talk to the 4,500 persons going in and out of the two buildings during the rush hours, he said.

Pickets Can Move, Judge Says.

Advising Heisler to expand on the orders given the company by the WLB in his amended petition, Judge Lupe explained that the pickets were not required to stay at the entrances of the buildings, but could circulate freely.

The strike followed refusal of the company to comply with a WLB order to extend a contract with the United Mail Order, Warehouse, and Retail Employes' union, Local 20 [CIO]. Executives at Ward's contend the WLB lacks the power to order an employer to enter into a closed shop contract.

The 42 pickets at the building entrances conducted themselves in orderly fashion yesterday after the court sustained order limiting their number. This was in contrast to a scene Friday when a police captain described the pickets as an "unruly mob" and two patrol wagons stood by ready for any outbreak.

Trainmen Refuse to Act.

Trainmen will handle no new business at Ward's, A. H. Whitney, international president of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, telegraphed Walter Christensen, business manager of Lodge 119, B. of R. T.

Leonard Levy, executive vice president of the international union of United Retail, Wholesale, and Department Store Employes of America, denounced THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE and charged that it "was manufacturing and spreading lies to smear Ward workers who are striking to end Sewell Avery's defiance of the national government." Avery is board chairman and president of Ward's.

Nicholas M. DiPietro, executive secretary of the Chicago Printing Trades council, yesterday lauded "the courage of the striking union" in calling the strike. American Federation of Labor teamsters and independent drivers who arrive at the Ward picket line have refused to drive thru the line.

3,000 Pairs of Silk Hose on Trucks Stolen; 5 Held

Three drivers for Freight, Inc., 2925 Calumet av., were held at the detective bureau yesterday in connection with the theft of 3,000 pairs of women's silk hose, valued at $850, from company trucks. The three are Rocco Dicianni, Lake Zurich; Frank Ingo, 907 S. Seeley av., and Michael Landando, 2426 Filmore st. All gave their ages as 28. Also held were Celestine Ambrosio, 27, 1118 S. Hamilton av., and John Giusti, 29, 1012 S. Claremont av., who, police said, had received 1,900 pairs of the hose.

RADIO STATION REPORTS STRIKE WILL BE ENDED

Ralph Atlass, president of radio station WJJD, said last night he had been given assurance that 10 striking musicians employed in the studio would return to work today. The men, he said, had been ordered not to report to work Friday when the union's demand for the hiring of an additional 10 men was refused.

An appeal to the American Federation of Musicians, he said, brought the response that the Chicago local would be instructed to order its members back to the job pending arbitration.

Atlass, who assailed the demands as an unjustified and unpatriotic waste of man power, said the striking musicians work—turning and changing recording discs—had been performed by five office girls.

FADED MEMORIES OF WILLKIE DOT WISCONSIN HILLS

Posters in Tatters; Rains Finish the Washout.

'Didn't Trust Him'

Madison, Wis., April 15 [Special].—Wisconsin voters rejected Wendell Willkie as a Presidential candidate in the April 4 primary because they "didn't believe or trust him," the Progressive, a weekly published at Madison, asserted today. The publication was founded by the late Sen. Robert M. La Follette.

"The rejection of Willkie was not confined to the politicians, but included the rank and file—the plain people of the state," the paper said, adding:

"On foreign policy, many Wisconsin voters who desire genuine coöperation with other nations to enforce an honorable peace could not shake the impression that Willkie's internationalism was an 'America Last' program."

BY MAXWELL MURPHY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Milwaukee, Wis., April 15.—Still dotting the Wisconsin landscape is a multitude of signboards which bear the brave legend, "Willkie for President," but whose melancholy tatters now serve to mark the political grave of the Wall street lawyer who tried to blitz Wisconsin as he blitzed the Republican national convention of 1940.

These once brave shields, flaunting the national colors for an internationalist, are dimmed now by spring's storms. Yet they are vivid reminders of the Willkie political circus with the modern Barnum at its head, which invaded the state on March 18 and burned the unrationed gasoline of desperation in a motorcade of 14 automobiles for 13 days.

Watch in Silence.

The sturdy nationalists of Wisconsin, reared in the Republican tradition, stared at the spectacle of Willkie feverishly seeking the office which had always hitherto sought the man.

They stood silently as that motorcade, crammed with "foreign" newspaper men from such strange and unfamiliar journals as PM, the New York Herald-Tribune, the New York Evening Post, the Chicago Sun, the Chicago Times, Time magazine, and a new breed of "expert" known as columnists, sped by on its vote getting mission. They wondered at this array, whose typewriters, at every step, clattered the fulsome praises of One Man Willkie, recording his every word and gesture for all except the man and woman who were to do the voting.

This latter minor role in the great Willkie parade was left for representatives of the Milwaukee Journal and Madison State Journal, while the Madison Capital-Times and the Sheboygan Press cupped their ears for the echo. Objective reporting? Who ever heard of that? "One Man, One World Willkie"—so went the chorus.

Off in Full Cry.

With John R. [Jack] Kimberly, vice president of the Kimberly-Clark company of Neenah, a master of the hounds who knows his business, blowing the horn of plenty, and Lem Jones, Willkie's personal manager, as whipper-in, away they went in full cry, up the Fox River valley, down Lake Michigan's shore, across southern Wisconsin, and up the blue hills of western Wisconsin, while Badgers took to their political holes.

Curious citizens, attracted by the Willkie calliope, attended his meetings in the estimated number of 70,000. They heard him denounce traditional things, urge the abandonment of customary things, revile familiar things.

They heard him condemn in unmeasured and intemperate language, patriotic Americans who exercise the constitutional right of free speech.

They saw his familiar gestures of leaning on the podium with his rump stuck out, or, wrapping his arms about his stalwart torso, as he told them in glowing tones about himself, his close personal acquaintance with the great and the near great of the United States, and his intimate knowledge of the heads of European and Asiatic states "any one of which might well have come right out of this town of Green Bay," or Kenosha, or Wisconsin Rapids.

Some of them, looking up during the minister's opening prayer, as at Waukesha, saw him counting and estimating the house.

Again and again they heard him say: "I could not have gotten from the mud flats of Indiana to where I am if I was a nut."

"Anvil Chorus" on Job.

Always below him in the press row, with but few notable exceptions, they saw the anvil chorus of the smear brigade, an angel's chorus for Willkie and Roosevelt only, which looked up with rapt face while it feverishly jotted down the banalities it had heard a hundred times.

"No intention of boondoggling the world. . . . Have been accused of everything from beating my wife—up and down the list. . . . Told by many since I came to Wisconsin I can win the Wisconsin delegation if I will call off the war and bring the boys home. . . . Not a Communist or a millionaire. . . . Freedom is my fetish which even governs my physical reactions. . . . Opponents are subversive men without honor. . . . Republican party must be reformed. . . . Would rather see it lose as presently constituted. . . . People allowing themselves to be governed by hatred of Roosevelt." So it went.

In such Democratic territory as Green Bay and Sheboygan, voters heard Willkie plead for the help of Democrats to reform the Republican party.

Once having accorded Willkie the applause of hospitality, most of the audiences heard him out in silence. Time and again during his speeches he would reach a climax and pause for applause only to be disappointed. People were politely attentive and at times, mildly approving. That was all.

Seated with him upon every platform and always presented to the audience for a word or a bow was Vernon W. Thomson, Richland Center, speaker of the assembly, Willkie's candidate for delegate at large. Willkie himself was not on the Presidential preference ballot so Thomson was his hope.

The people dispersed and the motorcade moved to its terminus at Superior. Election day came on April 4, and the rest is political history.

About 70,000 people went to hear Willkie in Wisconsin but only 50,000 voted for his man Thomson at the polls. Willkie read noted Republicans out of the party in his Wisconsin speeches but the voters of Wisconsin blew him out of it.

Most of the members of the smear brigade are back at their typewriters in the shadow of Wall street or under the wing of the New Deal burocracy.

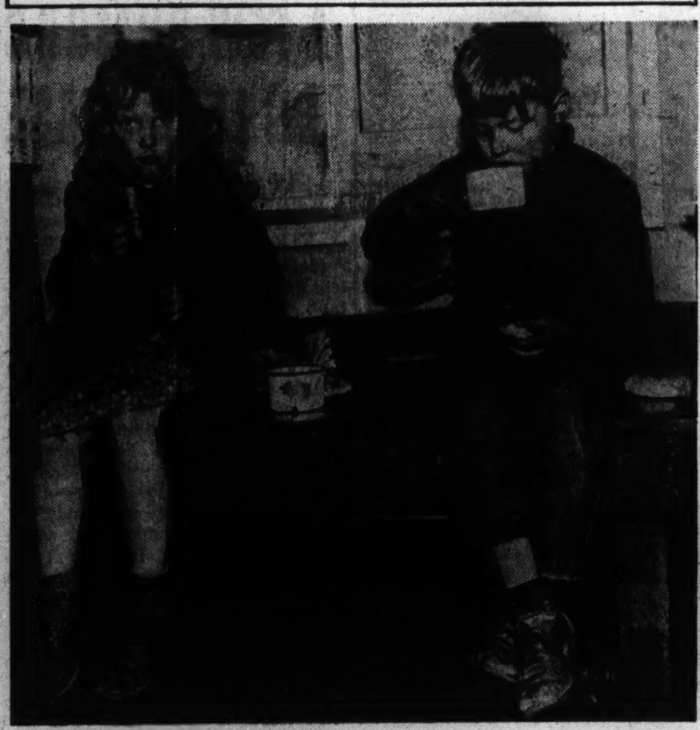
Donohue Children After Wanderings



[TRIBUNE Photo.]

Sally Donohue, 7, and brother, Richard, 8, hungry and unkempt, in Hudson av. police station yesterday after three days of wandering. They said they left grandfather's home to hitch-hike to mother in Florida.

Fate Up to Court

Richard and Sally Donohue, 8 and 7 years old, respectively, who were missing from their grandfather's home, 5725 Kerbs av., from Wednesday until yesterday, are recuperating in the juvenile detention home, 2240 Roosevelt rd. Disposition of the children will be decided by the Juvenile court this week. Their three day wandering on the north and northwest sides included visits to playgrounds and movie theaters, and sleep in parked cars.

Their mother, Mrs. Fern Donohue, is on her way home from Florida, where she has been with her second husband, Sgt. John Donohue, for two and a half weeks. She was asked to return in a telegram sent yesterday by the children's grandfather, John Metz. Richard said that he and Sally were on their way to Florida to see their mother. A brother, 10 years old, remained at home.

Corp. James Seiwart, father of the three children, was granted an emergency furlough from Camp Grant when notified of the children's disappearance. Metz said his daughter divorced Seiwart three years ago and was awarded custody of the children.

Wounded Hero

Coast Guardsman Charles Giamonna exhibits pieces of shapnel taken from his body. One thousand still remain under his skin.

A thousand shell fragments still are lodged in the hands, arms, and legs of Coast Guardsman Charles Giamonna, 21, of 6823 Wood st. But it doesn't bother him a bit. In Chicago on furlough to visit his guardians, Mr. and Mrs. Vito Mattera, Giamonna said:

"Boy, am I playing the field! My best girl gave me the brush-off after the invasion of Salerno, but there are a lot of others around, and I'm gonna have a swell furlough."

Wounded when a German shell struck his invasion barge off Salerno, Giamonna's body absorbed 1,300 fragments of "a shell that didn't whistle." Three hundred were removed before doctors decided to let the rest work out by themselves.

"I keep pulling fragments out of my hands every few days," the coast guardsman said yesterday, "but they don't hurt at all. After my furlough, I have to return to the United States Marine hospital on Staten Island, so that doctors can work on my numb left arm. Then I hope to get into active service again."

Giamonna still walks with a slight limp. Physicians estimate it will take two years for all the fragments to work out of his body.

EASTER DRESS STOLEN.

Mrs. Eva Cooper, 5480 Cornell av., reported yesterday to police that an Easter dress that she had not yet worn was among things taken from her home.

CROWLEY SPIKES A FEW RUMORS ON LEND-LEASE

Washington, D. C., April 15 [Special].—Foreign Economics Director Crowley has taken cognizance of rumors concerning misuse of lend-lease goods sent abroad to the extent of listing a number of them and branding them as false, it was disclosed here today.

In a report to the house foreign affairs committee, Crowley said it isn't so that Russian soldiers are using lend-lease butter to polish their boots or that 40,000 civilian radios have been shipped to Britain.

Rumors of this kind were characterized by Crowley as "lend-lease fiction." He said many of them have their origin in axis radio propaganda and are designed to foster distrust among the allied nations.

He specifically denied that:

Nylon hose is being lend-leased to Australian women.

The English have been removing labels from lend-lease articles and substituting their own, thereafter trans-shipping the goods and taking the credit.

The Russians are trading airplanes received from us under lend-lease to the Japanese for rubber.

We are selling gasoline to foreign governments at 2 cents a gallon which the army is buying back at 42 cents.

Denies Paying Party Bill.

Alcohol lend-leased to Britain is being converted into whisky and sold back to us.

Lend-lease is paying freight charges for shipment to the middle east of such things as beer and spirits, tobacco, lipstick, and women's dresses.

Lend-lease has footed the bill for a Washington party given by an allied purchasing mission.

Crowley said such lend-lease items as foodstuffs are shipped in packages with the maker's name and location clearly stamped on the container, usually with an American flag. Goods shipped in bags, boxes, or barrels have standard lend-lease labels, he said.

Alcohol Used for War.

All alcohol shipped to Britain has been used for munitions, he asserted, adding that no whisky has been manufactured in the United Kingdom since May, 1943. He blamed the Australian nylon hose story on a canard "planted" by political opponents on an Australian member of parliament up for reëlection.

The house will begin consideration next week of legislation to continue the lend-lease program.

U. S. Squadron Destroys 47 Jap Planes in Month

CALCUTTA, India, April 15 (AP).—An American fighter squadron in four weeks has destroyed 34 Japanese fighter planes and 13 bombers, it was disclosed today at headquarters of Air Marshal John Baldwin's 3d tactical air force. The Americans lost three planes in the 33 operations involving 278 sorties, mostly against enemy air fields.

GERMANS RETAIN RIGID FORMALITY IN PRISON CAMP

Fanatical Precision Seen Even in Mess Hall.

BY FRANK STURDY.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Camp McClellan, Ala., April 15.—The mess hall of the German prisoner of war camp here is an exhibit of the stiff precision and unyielding attention to detail of the typical German soldier.

Plain wood tables and benches line each wall. On each table is a plate, cup, knife, fork, and spoon for every man. Looking down the precise row of tables with their utensils in alignment is an experience akin to sighting a rifle.

On every table plates are balanced at each seat against deviation. Fruit, bread, platters, bottles of milk, water jugs, all are spotted as tho the man who put them there measured the spaces with a ruler.

What is behind this fanatic habit only the ones who have it can tell. Officers in charge of the camp say the Germans find pleasure in this burdensome, impeccable business an exaggeration of their admirable attention to their whole constricted quarters. Certainly the camp would seem to provide plenty of less trivial outlets for their energies.

2,736 in Camp.

There are 2,736 prisoners here. Most of them are Germans, but there are a few Austrians, Czechs, and Poles.

For some time after they arrived there were no facilities for giving them work outside their own compound. They planted grass, made a rock garden, lined street with stones, moved tons of dirt to improve a recreation ground. They have made excellent furniture out of rough lumber for a clubroom and four professional painters and a number of amateurs have their paintings and drawings hanging in a picture gallery.

An outdoor theater is now going up in the compound. The prisoners operate their own supply store, stocked with toilet articles, small items of clothing, candy, jewelry, knicknacks, and watches. None is permitted to have money. They are paid in coupons. Enlisted men receive 10 cents a day. Officers are paid at the rate of $20 a month for lieutenants, $30 for captains, and $40 for majors and those of higher rank. For an eight hour working day the prisoners are paid 80 cents. These are terms of Geneva Convention, strictly observed by war department.

Work Outside Camp.

More than 1,200 of the prisoners are employed outside the camp and the number will increase as the war man power commission and department of agriculture certify the need for them. Large numbers will go to work on farms, officers said.

Their food is the same as served American troops. They are allowed to have radios, but none is capable of short wave reception or surreptitious conversation.

The prisoners prefer reading matter printed in German, principally novels. For news they read a German language newspaper printed in New York. Their favorite American newspaper is a New York daily which prints the daily communiques of all sides in the war.

Begin to Fear Defeat.

These men are beginning to believe in the inevitability of German defeat, but still cling to the stiff arm salute of the Nazi party. They stand rigidly at attention in the doors of their barracks, raising their arms as officers pass. Official German admissions of losses and information gained from American papers is weakening their conviction in German victory.

Level of education in the camp is about equal to that of the American high school. Most of the prisoners are farmers. There are a few lawyers, doctors, bridgetenders, locksmiths, bricklayers, chimney sweeps, and a dozen other vocations.

From WAC to Iceman

Virginia Zieroth, honorably discharged from the WAC because of mother's illness, takes job as "iceman" in New York. Carrying 100 pound blocks is no harder than driving 10 ton army truck, she says.

ASKS IF BRITAIN IS TO BECOME A VASSAL OF U. S.

KILMARNOCK, Scotland, April 15 (AP).—Emanuel Shinwell, Labor member of parliament, asked in a speech here today whether Great Britain was becoming an "economic vassal of America."

He said in answer that there will never be real friendship between the two countries if Britain is "placed in the position of a junior partner, and what is worse, a poor relation."

"Consultations between our government and representatives of the United States government on civil aviation, foreign affairs, and commercial matters are making many people ask what is being arranged for the future of this country behind our backs," Shinwell said.

"Already we have been informed by Lord Beaverbrook [lord privy seal] that he has made concessions to America on the subject of civil aviation, altho parliament has never been consulted. There are rumors that a commercial and monetary agreement is likely to be reached and we do know that Mr. Stettinius [American undersecretary of state] is here to discuss foreign affairs, which no doubt include our relations with Europe."

"Does it mean," Shinwell asked, "that we are to become the economic vassal of America and that our future foreign and economic policy will be determined by the United States?"

Shinwell urged the government to inform the people what is being done.

AIR GENERAL DECORATED.

ALLIED HDQ., Naples, April 15 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Robert M. Webster of Washington, D. C., commander of a B-26 Marauder wing, has been awarded the silver star for "superior leadership and gallantry in action" during the first attack on Rome July 19. His planes attacked airdromes at the southern edge of Rome despite heavy opposition.

U. S. FLYERS LINK EAST AND WEST OVER JAP BASES

Close Gap Between India and Australia.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 15.—Winging over Japanese controled territory between India and Australia, American airmen today were completing the final link in the army's global airway, which will carry anything from a bottle of blood plasma to a piece of field artillery to the other side of the world.

The India-Australia route has been made possible by American radio engineering, which has developed radio beams, weather reporting, and blind landing devices to a point where a bomber flying from Washington to Calcutta is controled as exactly as a streamliner traveling from Chicago to Omaha.

Radio controls of the army airways are the responsibility of the army airways communication service [AACS], which operates control towers to direct local traffic, high frequency radio stations to maintain contact with planes, radio beams to guide planes over sea and land, homing transmitters to lead lost airmen to airports, and special equipment for blind landings.

Toil All Over World.

The 20,000 soldiers of the AACS are on duty at major airports in the United States, at isolated radio shacks in Greenland and the African jungle, and on newly occupied Pacific atolls. They serve at 613 locations in this country and 52 foreign nations. They operate nearly 600,000 miles of radio circuits thru 2,346 transmitters and 4,561 receiving stations.

The terminals of the India-Australia airway are military secrets, but it is obvious that Japanese radio observers along the route from Burma to New Guinea are listening to the jargon of the AACS as American transport planes roar between the China-India war theater and Gen. MacArthur's South Pacific forces.

If the Nipponese try to "jam" the radio signals used to guide the planes, AACS engineers are expected to forestall their efforts with special equipment that thwarted similar attempts by the Germans to lead transatlantic planes off their courses.

Serve Other Nations.

AACS installations are used not only to guide air transport command, army air force, navy, and commercial planes, but also to serve the British, Canadians, and Russians. No other nation has developed as thoro a system of radio beacons and air communications as the United States, AACS officers assert.

Already commercial aviation authorities are wondering what will become of the 200 million dollar investment in AACS equipment after the war, together with the system of airports financed by the United States on foreign territory thruout the world.

FLYER MISSING AFTER 28 RAIDS, AUNT INFORMED

Mrs. M. V. Toohey of 832 S. Maple st., Oak Park, has been notified that her nephew, Flight Officer Edward J. Downey, has been reported officially as missing in action after a recent mission to Germany.

On his 28th combat mission to continental Europe, Flight Officer Downey failed to return from the day's operations with his Thunderbolt fighter group which was furnishing withdrawal support to a large formation of Flying Fortresses and Liberators bombing targets in a German industrial town.

Downey had been on combat status since early last fall. He possessed the air medal with oak leaf clusters. Downey, 22, attended West Aurora High school. He was in the royal Canadian air force more than two years before transferring to the United States army air forces.

25TH BIRTHDAY TO BE OBSERVED BY AEF DIVISION

The 25th anniversary of the organizataion of the 2d division, American expeditionary force, will be observed by the Chicago chapter of the Second Division association Thursday night with a dinner in the Army and Navy club, 410 S. Michigan av.

The division was on duty in Germany as part of the army of occupation in 1919, when the division commander, Maj. Gen. John A. Lejeune, who later became commandant of the marine corps, suggested a social organization to carry on after the war.

Paul T. Cunningham, vice president of the chapter, is in charge of the anniversary program, which will include reading the roll of sons and daughters of members now in service. President Emil Schraps is general chairman of the occasion.

SEEK REHEARING ON INVALIDATION OF AIRPORT ACT

Springfield, Ill., April 15 (AP).—The state Supreme court was asked today to consider "points misapprehended and overlooked" in its March 21 opinion invalidating the entire 1943 airport authorities act, under which at least 25 Illinois cities planned to build new or expand old landing fields.

No action on the petition for rehearing is expected until after the tribunal reconvenes May 8. The petition was filed by attorneys for the Springfield airport authority, whose power were challenged by several taxpayers.

The Illinois Supreme court held airports operated under the challenged legislation would be private rather than public in purpose and that therefore taxing, bond issue, and other powers granted under the act are unconstitutional.

The city of Chicago has asked permission to file briefs contending that the opinion cast constitutional doubts upon other airport enabling legislation, including the revised cities and villages act under which Chicago's huge field is operated.

After all, Pretty Lady...
this has gone far enough!

SURE, we know how it is: With so many cake-making cautions flung at you; no wonder you're on the mental merry-go-round! Whose recipe is whose? Which method is what? It's high time somebody came right out and told you this:

Good cakes DO NOT depend upon trick methods. Good cakes DO depend upon quality of ingredients—and care in measuring and handling.

Hearing and reading about this quick method; then that one; you are sort of encouraged to get the idea that each new method works only with the cake flour advertising it. Look: Maybe we are adding to the confusion—by presenting our new "Either-Way" recipes and Quick-Whip method. But the point is this. You can bake a good cake by our new method whether you use Pillsbury's Sno Sheen or ANY OTHER good cake flour. Sure: And you can bake a good cake with Sno Sheen whether you use the old tried-and-true method; our new Quick-Whip method or any of the quick methods you may have heard about.

Naturally; we think that Sno Sheen is the finest cake flour you can buy: In fact, we're so sure of it, ladies—we'll make you a little proposition:

STARTLING OFFER. With Pillsbury's Sno Sheen Cake Flour, bake the Gold Cake pictured below. Mix and bake by either of the two methods shown. If your husband doesn't agree that your Sno Sheen Cake looks and tastes and is as good as any you ever baked, you take him out, the very next evening for a fine meal at a good restaurant in your city—topped off with an excellent dessert! Total cost not to exceed $4.00. Then drop a note to Pillsbury's Home Service Department, Minneapolis—enclosing the top of your Sno Sheen box, if you will—and a duplicate of the dinner check. Pillsbury will promptly pay you back the full amount of that check! This offer expires April 29, 1944.

Pillsbury's GOLDEN GLOW Cake

Makes two 8-inch layers

- 2 cups sifted PILLSBURY'S SNO SHEEN CAKE FLOUR
- 3¾ teaspoons baking powder (or 2½ teaspoons double-acting)
- ¾ teaspoon salt
- 1¼ cups sugar
- ½ cup shortening
- ¾ cup milk
- 2 eggs
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

The STANDARD Method

Sift flour, baking powder, and salt three times. Cream shortening; add sugar gradually, creaming well. Add eggs, one at a time, beating about one minute after each addition. Add dry ingredients alternately with combined milk and flavoring; beat well after each addition.

Pour into well-greased and floured layer cake pans. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) for about 30 minutes.

The QUICK-WHIP Method

Have all the ingredients at room temperature with the shortening soft but not melted.

Sift all of the dry ingredients into mixing bowl. Add shortening and ⅔ of the milk. Beat until batter is well blended and glossy (about 1½ minutes). Add remaining milk, eggs and flavoring. Beat until smooth (about 1½ minutes). Pour into well-greased and floured layer cake pans. Bake in moderate oven (350° F.) for about 30 minutes.

PAROLE SYSTEM FOR VIOLATORS OF DRAFT TOLD

Prisoners to Be Given a Chance at Service.

Washington, D. C., April 15 (AP).—The national selective serivce today disclosed plans to parole as many as possible of the 2,700 imprisoned draft violators and place them in military services or in jobs which would relieve the man power shortage.

Arrangements have been made with the federal bureau of prisons to give each draft law violator an opportunity to enter the army or nacy, or—if religious beliefs forbid fighting—to work in public service camps, war plants, hospitals, and other institutions.

600 Conscientious Objectors.

Only about 600 claim to be conscientious objectors on religious grounds, the spokesman said, altho another 1,000 are members of Jehovah's Witnesses, who claim to be ordained ministers. The 600 refused to go to the camps set up for conscientious objectors, or deserted from the camps.

A special panel of the local draft board in each community where a prison is located will make recommendations in the case of each prisoner who has been held more than 60 days, without waiting application for parole.

If the prisoner is willing to go into military service a recommendation will be made by the selective service to the United States attorney general.

Map Induction Procedure.

Conscientious objectors normally will refuse to go into the army or navy, the spokesman said, but the rest will go thru induction procedure like other registrants. If they fail in their physical examination, they will be classed 4-F and paroled into a war job or farm.

Those who refuse to do any work aiding the war may be paroled to mental or other institutions as attendants or in other work.

Ordinary violators must indicate their willingness to fight before parole will be granted.

LORETTA NAZAR.

Loretta Nazar, United Air Lines stewardess who was acclaimed as the nation's first flying war bond saleswoman, will marry Ensign Jerry Greer on May 5 in Chicago. Miss Nazar, a native of Toledo, O., joined United in March, 1942, as the company's first "co-ed" stewardess. She became a bond saleswoman in August, 1943, and since that time has sold over $75,000 in war bonds and stamps aboard United's Mainliners. Ensign Greer, a navy flyer, is based at the naval air station at Bunker Hill, Ind. The couple will live in Peru, Ind.

$1,500,000 A WEEK RED CROSS GOAL TO WIND UP DRIVE

Martin H. Kennelly, general chairman of the Red Cross war fund, said yesterday the drive must yield approximately 3 million dollars in the next two weeks to reach the 12 million dollar goal.

"That means we must realize $1,500,000 a week before April 30," Kennelly said. "Our percentage of progress is somewhat lower than the national average."

Kennelly quoted a letter from Sgt. Richard D. Sinsheimer, 5242 Greenwood av., lauding the Red Cross work in war zones. "They have done a bang-up job, really wonderful," Sgt. Sinsheimer wrote his father, Allen Sinsheimer. He asked his father to send the Red Cross $5 on "my account."

BARRETT HOLDS CITY ELIGIBLE FOR STATE AID

Chicago's allotment of state relief funds will not be affected by County Assessor Clark's 100 per cent valuation policy, Atty. Gen. Barrett ruled yesterday at the request of the Illinois public aid commission.

Some 37,000 Chicago families receiving $400,000 monthly are beneficiaries of city relief funds, which are raised by a 3 mill tax.

Raymond M. Hilliard, director of the state aid commission, said he was in doubt as to whether, in view of the changed valuation rate, the city of Chicago was eligible to receive state relief money to add to its own funds.

Barrett held that the legislature intended the city or any similar government dispensing relief should have a share of state money when it had exhausted its own taxing power for that purpose.

TWO BROTHERS FROM CHICAGO MEET IN ITALY

Two Chicago brothers, Sgt. Philip Carroll and Corp. John Carroll, met recently "somewhere in Italy," they advised their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Carroll, 7034 Bishop st., who said the younger son did not know his brother was overseas.

"The boys met when the plane in which Philip was flying landed for service," Mrs. Carroll said. "Altho the visit was short it thrilled us to know the boys had seen each other. We hope they arranged to meet again for a longer visit."

FAVOR MARTIN AS PERMANENT G. O. P. CHAIRMAN

Sentiment on Convention Keynoter Divided.

Rep. Martin [R., Mass.] house minority leader and former national chairman, appeared last night to have the inside track to become permanent chairman of the Republican national convention as members of the committee on arrangements began arriving here for their meeting Wednesday.

More divided sentiment was indicated on the selection of the temporary chairman, who will deliver the keynote address. Advance discussion seemed to center on Rep. Halleck of Indiana, now chairman of the national congressional campaign committee, and Sen. Revercomb of West Virginia, altho committee members insisted choice of the keynoter was still "wide open."

Rep. Luce Is Proposed.

J. Kenneth Bradley, Republican national committeeman for Connecticut, announced in Bridgeport last night he would recommend to the arrangements committee that it choose Rep. Clare Boothe Luce as keynoter.

Bradley, who helped the playwright gain the distinction in 1942 of being the first woman to keynote a Connecticut state convention and represent the state in congress, said he had appealed in a letter to the 11 women on the arrangements committee to work for her selection as the first woman keynoter of a national Republican convention.

No opposition was reported to naming Martin to the post he held at Philadelphia in 1940. Martin served as national chairman in the 1940 campaign, retaining that office until December, 1942, when he resigned and was replaced by Harrison Spangler. Martin is the leading candidate for speaker of the house when the Republicans regain control, which they are confident they will do in this year's elections.

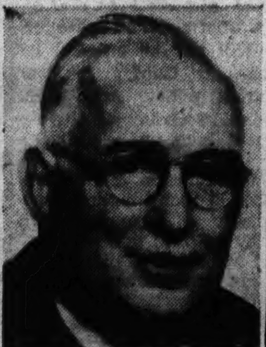
Halleck in Demand as Speaker.

Halleck has been congressman from the 2d Indiana district since 1935. His address before the national committee here in January brought much favorable comment and he has been in demand thruout the nation as a party speaker. Revercomb is serving his first term, having been elected in 1942, but has gained considerable fame as a Republican orator.

Chairman Hallanan of the committee on arrangements was among early arrivals. Subcommittees will meet Tuesday and report the next day to the 23 members of the committee.

Chairman Spangler, Vice Chairman Harold W. Mason of Vermont, and Henry P. Fletcher, general counsel of the committee, are ex-officio members of the committee and will join in the selection of temporary and permanent chairmen, sergeant at arms, and other convention officials.

Sketches of New G. O. P. Ward Committeemen



DR. JOSEPH C. ROSS.

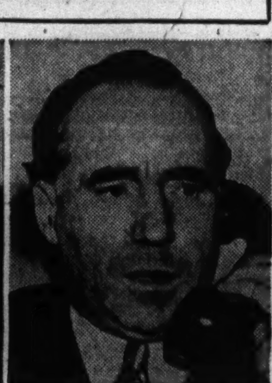
Dr. Joseph C. Ross, who defeated Committeeman C. Herman Johnson for Republican committeeman of the 40th ward, was alderman of the ward from 1929 until last year. He has practiced medicine in Chicago more than 30 years, and his present office is at 3225 Lawrence av. While in the city council he gave much attention to public health matters. He was one of the first to demand clearing up of confusion over the use of paper milk bottles. He urged appropriations for rat killing and for city ambulances. When he ran for coroner on the Republican ticket in 1932 he was indorsed by the Chicago and Illinois Medical associations. In his first term in the council he was commended by the Municipal Voters league for taking a stout stand against overloading the city budget.

JOSEPH F. GUBBINS.

Joseph F. Gubbins won election as 36th ward Republican committeeman by a narrow margin over Eden T. Brekke, who beat Gubbins for the place in a close contest in 1940. The two once were political allies, but broke five years ago. Gubbins is 51 years old. He served in France with the 20th Engineers in World War I. He was made assistant secretary of the state commerce commission when the Green administration entered office in 1941, and has held that place since. Prior to his appointment he was in the real estate and insurance business. He was a deputy coroner nine years, and assistant superintendent of city streets under civil service three years. He is married and lives at 2049 N. Lavergne av.

HOMER G. SAILOR.

Homer G. Sailor, who succeeds Henry D. Lindblad as Republican committeeman of the 17th ward, which takes in Englewood east of Halsted st., contended with Lindblad four years ago and lost. Sailor is an architect, with his office at 733 W. 64th st. He was graduated from Armour Tech, and for a time taught in Harrison High school. He was born in Akron, O., and was brought to Chicago by his parents 50 years ago, when he was 6. He has lived ever since then at 417 W. 61st st. Sailor has been interested in politics since he became a voter. He was precinct captain in the Deneen organization 32 years. This is his first elective office. He is married and has one son, who is in the navy.



ANDREW J. FLANDO.

Andrew J. Flando, winner of the 25th ward seat on the Republican county committee, was virtually unknown outside his own neighborhood until he challenged Committeeman William Parrillo, member of the state commerce commission. Parrillo, backed by Gov. Green, charged Flando was entered by the old Capone syndicate, and after election declared Flando had had the help of gang money and muscle men. In the campaign the opposition charged Flando had been convicted of vote fraud in 1929 and twice previously of bootlegging. He was once a worker in Parrillo's ward organization, and also worked for him in the Meadowmoor dairy. Flando is 43 years old, and lives at 918 S. Bell av.

NEWS FACILITIES LINED UP FOR 2 CONVENTIONS

Press and Radio to Serve World.

Arranging space for representatives of more than 800 newspapers, press associations, radio stations, and national networks is the biggest job confronting committees completing details for the Republican and Democratic national conventions. The Republican session will open here June 26 and the Democrats will convene July 19.

Arthur M. Wirtz, general manager of the Chicago Stadium, informed representatives of the two parties yesterday that accommodations for delegates, alternates, and visitors virtually had been completed, but that considerable work was entailed in providing seating and working space for the press and radio.

World Interest in Conventions.

"These are the conventions that, literally, will be heard 'round the world," Wirtz said. "Greater worldwide interest is being shown than in any previous national convention.

Wirtz conferred at the stadium with Walter S. Hallanan, chairman of the Republican committee on arrangements; Werner W. Schroeder, Republican national committeeman from Illinois; Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the citizens committee which is raising funds for both conventions; William J. Hennessy, committee secretary, and Thomas D. Garry, representing Mayor Kelly.

Democratic Leader Here Today.

Ambrose O'Connell, Democratic executive vice chairman, did not reach Chicago in time for the conference, but is expected to go over convention details with Wirtz today.

Wirtz said he anticipated little difficulty in getting material and equipment because of priorities. Such equipment as microphones will be borrowed from radio stations and the national networks.

ARIZONA G. O. P. UNIT INDICATES LEANING TOWARD GOV. DEWEY

Phoenix, Ariz., April 15 (AP).—Arizona's eight member delegation to the Republican national convention in Chicago will go uninstructed, but with "leanings" toward Gov. Thomas E. Dewey for President.

The state convention that named the delegation refrained from expressing a preference for a Presidential candidate, but Clarence Budington Kelland, a Dewey supporter who was reëlected unanimously as national committeeman, said the group "will have definite leanings toward Dewey."

Kelland said Arizona would favor Gov. Earl Warren of California for second place on the ticket.

TWO VIRGINIA DISTRICTS GIVE DEWEY BACKING

Roanoke, Va., April 15 (AP).—Republicans of the 6th Virginia congressional district today joined the 8th district in indorsing Gov. Dewey of New York as Republican candidate for the Presidency, and instructed the two 6th district delegates to vote for his nomination at the national convention.

The 8th district's two delegates, chosen at Culpeper earlier this week, are not definitely instructed, but the district meeting went on record as favoring Dewey.

Chicago Sunday Tribune
THE 'WORLD'S GREATEST NEWSPAPER
THE TRIBUNE COMPANY, PUBLISHER.
ENTERED AS SECOND CLASS MATTER MAY 14, 1903, AT THE POSTOFFICE AT CHICAGO, ILL., UNDER ACT OF MARCH 3, 1879.

All unsolicited articles, manuscripts, letters, and pictures sent to The Tribune are sent at the owner's risk, and The Tribune company expressly repudiates any liability or responsibility for their safe custody or return.

The entire and absolute freedom of the press is essential to the preservation of government on the basis of a free constitution. —Daniel Webster.

THE PEOPLE DID IT.

We have received a number of letters from our readers, some of which have appeared in the Voice of the People, congratulating THE TRIBUNE on the outcome of the primaries in Wisconsin and Illinois. Some of our friends have been so flattering as to give us credit for the results. That is laying it on too thick. We aren't that good.

If we had spoken with the tongues of angels, and had written in letters of amber with pens of gold, that still would not have amassed the astounding majority that buried Mr. Willkie in Wisconsin and the pipsqueak candidates who tried to take over the Republican party in Illinois in the interests of allenism and the fourth term. Mr. Willkie was routed and the Illinois internationalists were made ridiculous by the people of the two states.

THE TRIBUNE's chief contribution to the victory has been its steadfastness. The people of Chicago are familiar with the attempts to build up New Deal influence in this city by the purchase or subsidizing of newspapers. They have witnessed the deterioration of the influence of the publications that so prostituted their independence. If the third circulation in the city was deemed worth a cabinet post, what price was offered, and spurned, for the first? At any rate, we were not for sale and we could not be terrorized.

Our independence has not been maintained without risk. It has brought political persecution upon THE TRIBUNE, and a studied and continuous campaign of opprobrium, voiced by Roosevelt himself, by his noisome and rabid Vice President, by members of his cabinet, and by other individuals and publications that he controls. None of this has caused us to retreat or weaken.

THE TRIBUNE is not omniscient, but we were confident of the outcome in the recent contests. We knew that internationalism has been rejected by the voters of the whole country every time it has been presented to them in the last quarter century and that nowhere has it been more thoroly repudiated than in the middle western citadel of Americanism.

We were confident because we know the middle west. THE TRIBUNE is bone and sinew of the middle west. Its editors and the vast majority of its employes were bred in the middle west, the sons and grandsons of middle westerners. If we speak for this heart of America, as we hope to do always, it is because we are part of it.

THE TRIBUNE is not always on the winning side. We have not swerved from what we believed right because it was expedient to swerve. We fought prohibition when it was politically profitable to truckle to the dry tyranny, and we fought Roosevelt when Roosevelt was sweeping elections in Chicago and Illinois. We bore the sneers of our opponents that THE TRIBUNE's indorsement was a political kiss of death with such patience as we could muster.

We have been stubborn and persistent because we were convinced that we were right. We have maintained our course when the people of our region did not agree with us because we knew those people and felt confident, because we knew them and trusted their judgment, that in time they would swing back to our side, as they generally have. On the issue of American independence, of course, they never have disagreed with us, even for a brief period.

The issue in Wisconsin, as posed by Willkie himself, was Willkie against THE TRIBUNE. The issue in Illinois was Roosevelt against THE TRIBUNE. We didn't determine the outcome. The people did that. Their verdict is written for the whole world to see.

WHERE THE BRAINS COME FROM.

Stories of shipwrecked and castaway sailors are full of references to men who, because of unbearable thirst, go mad from drinking salt water. But now seamen of our navy and merchant marine can drink sea water with safety. A chemical process has been developed which removes the salt from the water and makes it fit for emergency use. This is but one of the scientific discoveries in this war discussed the other day by Dr. Andrew C. Ivy, professor of physiology at Northwestern university.

He told also about a cream which men on warships use to protect themselves against the terrific heat of bomb flashes. With a mosquito repellent added, it is also invaluable to protect tropical fighters against sunburn and insects. He mentioned work on diets that conserve moisture in the bodies of shipwrecked men, progress in preventing the crippling torture of the "bends" which attack men subjected to sudden changes of atmospheric pressure in the stratosphere or underneath the sea, and other developments that make fighting a safer job.

The public has heard about some of these developments thru announcements by the navy. The naval press agents have taken considerable pride in the work that has been done at the Naval Medical Research institute at Bethesda, Md. While the navy has sponsored the work, the discoveries have largely been made by civilian scientists. Dr. Ivy is one of the bright stars of the scientific faculties of the universities in Chicagoland. He is only one of hundreds of scientists, gifted in a score of fields, whom those universities have made available to the government for war time research. At Bethesda, as in nearly every other scientific research project sponsored by the government, the navy has posed the problems. The civilian scientists have solved them.

This is a fact of importance. The colleges and universities of the country are under great temporary stress because the draft has drained their campuses of almost every able bodied male student. Many of them are having difficulty keeping their doors open. Forces are working in Washington that would take advantage of this temporary distress and regiment the colleges under some federal system of control maintained by government subsidies. That, if it happens, will be fatal to American education and American scientific research. Bethesda itself, with all its brilliant accomplishments, is the best proof of this.

The government built the research center, but when it looked for the brains to make it useful it had to go to the privately endowed and state supported universities of the country. This was not accidental. Government bureaus develop an occasional good scientist, but their contributions are minor compared with those of the universities. If the government starts running the colleges the burocrats will stifle them.

THE CORN CRISIS.

The price of corn is fixed by the government and is again far out of line, as is evidenced by the fact that practically no corn is coming to market. In consequence, the corn processing industries are being forced to restrict their operations for lack of raw material. Many of their products are needed by war industries and others contribute importantly to the nation's food and feed supply. If something isn't done pretty soon, the production of the war factories will suffer, because corn products are widely used in foundry processes and in the manufacture of cloth [for uniforms] and containers [for shells].

Nothing is being done, partly because the big shots of OPA are unwilling to confess error and partly because they fear the political consequences of doing the right thing. The fundamental trouble, of course, is that a farmer can get something like $1.40 a bushel for his corn if he feeds it to a hog, but only $1.16 for the same corn delivered in Chicago. Naturally the corn is being held on the farm. If the price of corn is allowed to rise, the farmers will sell, but the spokesmen of labor will then cry that the government is discriminating in favor of the farmer and against the industrial worker. If the support price of hogs is lowered, the farmers will charge that they have been double crossed and they can prove it. If corn is imported from the Argentine, which has a surplus, ships will have to be taken from war routes and there will be widespread complaint thruout the corn belt against the invasion of the home market.

That is why nothing is being done. The reasons are political in the worst sense of the term. In the planned society, as this illustration shows, the planners are under no pressure to correct their mistakes unless important elements in the voting population have been adversely affected. As only insignificant numbers of people are employed in corn processing, they can be disregarded. The national welfare suffers, but what is the national welfare among burocrats?

MORE NEW DEAL CONTROL.

The federal government has taken over control of all production contracts in the Chicago area and has ruled that there shall be no increase in the production of civilian goods for several months. War plant operators have replied that the move was unnecessary and that the New Dealers are overemphasizing the man power shortage. They say that every employer would like to be able to get more good help, but that most of them should be able to get enough workers to get by, and that they prefer to work out their own problems without government interference.

The New Deal's efforts to socialize business and production under the guise of war emergency have created a vast amount of confusion and a vast number of federal jobs for ambitious payrollers. To maintain themselves in these jobs after the so-called emergency is past, and after production quotas are met, the payrollers have to create new controls under the guise of new emergencies. Chicago was placed in a No. 1 critical labor shortage classification for no other apparent reason. Competent spokesmen for both labor and management testified that essential industries could get all the workers they needed without any such government control, and even the local head of the war man power commission was cool to the idea.

The more recent control over production contracts and the ban on civilian goods production come out of the same basket. Chicago manufacturers who lead the nation in the production of war goods do not owe their records to what the New Dealers have done for them, nor do the working men who made those records possible. Labor and management, if left alone, could have exceeded any quotas the Roosevelt administrators set. They know it, and so do most of the rest of the people in the country.

OLD BUILDINGS.

Unsightly ruins, hulks of buildings, some of them vacant and others occupied on a marginal basis, dot Chicago's landscape in a good many sections. There is a valid reason for not repairing or rebuilding now, because war time priorities have halted virtually all construction not vital to the emergency production program. There is no reason, however, why these wrecks could not be torn down and leveled, removing a neighborhood hazard as well as an eyesore. Many of them would furnish salvageable materials that are now scarce. Construction of new buildings must wait until after the war, but the post-war building boom will be given a start if the old structures are torn down and the sites prepared.

WEBSTER ON USURPATION

[Following is the address delivered last night by Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE TRIBUNE, on the Chicago Theater of the Air, over W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual Broadcasting system.]

BY COL. ROBERT R. McCORMICK.

Some weeks ago I read to you a speech that Abraham Lincoln delivered in 1838, which had been sent to me by a listener.

Tonight I will read you a speech delivered by Daniel Webster in 1835, which was sent to me by Mr. J. L. Kuck of St. Paul, Minn.:

"The Constitution of the United States, gentlemen, has appeared to me to have been formed and adopted for two grand objects. The first is the Union of the States. It is the bond of that union, and it states and defines its terms. Who can speak in terms warm enough and high enough of its importance in this respect, or the admirable wisdom with which it is formed? Or who, when he shall have stated the benefits and blessings which it has conferred upon the states most strongly, will venture to say that he has done it justice?

"For one, I am not sanguine enough to believe that, if this bond of union were dissolved, any other tie uniting all the states would take its place for generations to come. It requires no common skill, it is no piece of ordinary political journey-work, to form a system which shall hold together four-and-twenty separate state sovereignties, the line of whose united territories runs down all the parallels of latitude from New Brunswick to the Gulf of Mexico, and whose connected breadth stretches from the sea far beyond the Mississippi.

"Nor are all times or all occasions suited to such great operations. It is only under the most favorable circumstances, and only when great men are called on to meet great exigencies, only once in centuries, that such fortunate political results are to be attained. Whoever, therefore, undervalues this national union, whoever deprecates it, whoever accustoms himself to consider how the people might get on without it, appears to me to encourage sentiments subversive of the foundations of our prosperity.

"It is true that these 24 states are, more or less, different in climate, productions, and local pursuits. There are planting states, grain growing states, manufacturing states, and commercial states. But those several interests, if not identical, are not, therefore, inconsistent and hostile. Far from it. They unite, on the contrary, to promote an aggregate result of unrivaled national happiness. It is not precisely a case in which

but it is a case in which variety of climate and condition, and diversities of pursuits and productions, all unite to exhibit one harmonious, grand, and magnificent whole, to which the world may be proudly challenged to show an equal. In my opinion, no man, in any corner of any one of these states, can stand up and declare, that he is less prosperous or less happy than if the general government had never existed. Entertaining these sentiments, and feeling their force most deeply, I regard it as the bounden duty of every good citizen, in public and in private life, to follow the admonition of Washington, and to cherish that Union which makes us one people. I most earnestly deprecate, therefore, whatever occurs, in the government or out of it, calculated to endanger the Union or disturb the basis on which it rests.

"Another object of the Constitution I take to be such as is common to all written constitutions of free governments; that is, to fix limits to delegated authority, or, in other words, to impose constitutional restraints on political power. Some, who esteem themselves republicans, seem to think no other security for public liberty necessary than a provision for a popular choice of rulers. If political power be delegated power, they entertain little fear of its being abused. The people's servants and favorites, they think, may be safely trusted. Our fathers, certainly, were not of this school. They sought to make assurance doubly sure, by providing, in the first place, for the election of political agents by the people themselves, at short intervals, and, in the next place, by prescribing constitutional restraints on all branches of this delegated authority. It is not among the circumstances of the times most ominous for good that a diminished estimate appears to be placed on those constitutional securities. A disposition is but too prevalent to substitute personal confidence for legal restraint; to put trust in men rather than in principles, and this disposition being strongest, as it most obviously is, whenever party spirit prevails to the greatest extent, it is not without reason that fears are entertained of the existence of a spirit tending strongly to an unlimited, if it be but an elective, government.

"Surely, gentlemen, this government can go thru no such change. Long before that change could take place, the Constitution would be shattered to pieces, and the Union of the States become matter of past history. To the Union, therefore, as well as to civil liberty, to every interest which we enjoy and value, to all that makes us proud of our country, or which renders our country lovely in our own eyes, or dear to our own hearts, nothing can be more repugnant, nothing more hostile, nothing more directly destructive, than excessive, unlimited, unconstitutional confidence in men; nothing worse than the doctrine that official agents may interpret the public will in their own way, in defiance of the Constitution and the laws; or that they may set up anything for the declaration of that will except the Constitution and the laws themselves; or that any public officer, high or low, should undertake to constitute himself or to call himself the representative of the people, except so far as the Constitution and the laws create and denominate him such representative. There is no usurpation so dangerous as that which comes in the borrowed name of the people. If from some other authority, or other source, prerogatives be attempted to be enforced upon the people, they naturally oppose and resist it. It is an open enemy, and they can easily subdue it. But that which professes to act in their own name, and by their own authority, that which calls itself their servant, altho it exercises their power without legal right or constitutional sanction, requires something more of vigilance to detect, and something more of stern patriotism to repress; and if it be not seasonably both detected and repressed, then the republic is already in the downward path of those which have gone before it.

"I hold, therefore, gentlemen, that a strict submission, by every branch of the government, to the limitations and restraints of the Constitution, is, of the very essence of all security for the preservation of liberty; and that no one can be a true and intelligent friend of that liberty, who will consent that any man in public station, whatever he may think of the honesty of his motives, shall assume to exercise an authority above the Constitution and the laws. Whatever government is not a government of laws is a despotism, let it be called what it may."

Editorial of the Day

TIRE INSPECTION ENDED.

[The Detroit News.]

Having caught up with the fact that most automobile drivers are doing their utmost to save tire wear, the office of price administration no longer requires inspection of passenger car tires. By keeping their eyes open, the war agencies are likely to find more chances of pleasing the public by doing away with unnecessary and troublesome red tape.

Keep your tire records, nevertheless; they will still be used in the rationing program.

RUBBISH THEORIES ABOUT VISION.

PERFECT vision is a blessing but it cannot come about by mere wishing. The eyes are placed within hollow cavities of bone [a part of the skull] and are moved about by means of delicate muscles which respond with extreme accuracy. Thus we can fix the gaze on an object or transfer it to neighboring scenes at will. The perfect synchronization of both organs is one of the wonders of nature.

With many of us, the structures are too small from front to back [hypermetropic]. Others are slightly flattened so that the curvature is not true—leading to astigmatism. Still others are too long [myopic]. These are individual characteristics and we are born with them.

To the question, "will any sort of exercise correct these deformities so that one can do without glasses?" the reply is—"No." Despite the dictum of Aldous Huxley, who has revived the discarded theories of Bates, we cannot alter the contour of the globe.

But there are some measures that will be helpful. Inasmuch as myopia [shortsightedness] tends to increase as the child grows up he may be drilled in how to save vision. He can employ books with large type and his parents can give strict attention to outdoor activity, which will improve general health.

Squint, or cross-eye, is another matter entirely and here exercises with special lenses may be used to advantage. The object is to re-train the external muscles so that the orbs will operate in unison. But even here the plan must not be pursued too long if improvement is not observed. A simple operation at the hands of an expert may be better.

One common misconception, which is actually taught in some quarters, is that looking at the sun is beneficial. This is about as fallacious a doctrine as one can imagine. Nature will do everything possible to protect us against bright sources of illumination. The lids will close mechanically and this very fact constitutes our best answer. Furthermore, the pupils will contract sharply so as to reduce the quantity which will penetrate to the retina.

A single glance at Old Sol on a clear day is about all one needs to be convinced that it is an unsafe thing to do. The victim will notice a dark spot on any white surface for hours thereafter. No one should try the experiment as occasionally actual damage will be suffered. This is a hazard that welders are obliged to guard against and explains why they use goggles of great filtering power.

How can blinking aid our seeing ability? Well, it cannot. Our optics are on the move constantly when we are active and awake. Probably they are more alert than any other mechanism of the body except the heart. We do not wink consciously. The operation is automatic. The more intense we are, the more times per minute will we indulge. The rate will vary from three to as many as 30 each 60 seconds. But to assume that the more frequently we open and shut the lids, the keener will sight become, is sheer nonsense.

For the one who requires spectacles, there is no reason why they should not be utilized. Visual power is too precious to be sacrificed ignorantly, if an error of refraction can be corrected with suitable lenses. They prevent fatigue and compensate for odd shaped structures. If they are properly adjusted, they never do harm. They are not cure-alls, however, and will not remedy defects due to disease.

SPOTTED.

H. S. writes: Does the occasional outbreak of red blotches on the face signify high blood pressure?

REPLY.

No connection. Probably a manifestation of hives or skin sensitivity. The cutaneous capillaries dilate irregularly. This is different from blushing, which produces an all-over flush. If the countenance is florid all of the time, both the blood and the pressure should be checked.

STOMACH POSITION.

C. N. writes: Can a person live normally with an upside down stomach?

REPLY.

The "breadbasket" seems to be able to function fairly well, regardless of its position. It really is not upside down. This term is used when a portion of the organ has wandered thru a weak spot in the diaphragm.

CABBAGE.

R. S. writes: Is very well cooked cabbage more digestible than that boiled for 10 or 15 minutes?

REPLY.

Quick cooking under pressure [7 to 8 minutes] is advised. This preserves the soluble carbohydrates and sulfur. At the same time it softens the fiber [cellulose].

VERTIGO.

Mrs. H. W. writes: My sister had pneumonia last fall. Since then she has been troubled with constant dizziness. Could her lung illness be responsible?

REPLY.

The infection no doubt has disturbed the circulation and, in turn, the balancing apparatus of the inner ear.

A FUNGUS.

N. S. writes: Is ringworm a skin disease or is it caused by impure blood?

REPLY.

The culprit is a plant parasite which invades the skin. Impure blood would probably discourage the visitor.

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

Writers should confine themselves to 200 or 300 words. Give full names and addresses. No manuscripts can be returned. Space for letters is obviously limited. Incoming mail far exceeds it. If a letter is not printed attribute it to lack of room. Address letters to Voice of the People, THE TRIBUNE.

FROM SEN. WHEELER.

Washington, D. C., April 10.—I want to congratulate you on the grand work that your paper did in the Wisconsin primary.

As I see it, it was not a Dewey victory as much as it was a complete rout for Mr. Willkie.

The international crowd, led by Life, Time, Fortune, the New York Times, and the Herald Tribune, should feel very much humiliated.

The cartoon by Parrish on the Willkie knockout was a gem. I heard much favorable comment about it in Cincinnati and in Washington.

BURTON K. WHEELER.

A SHOT IN THE ARM.

Chicago, April 8.—Today's article by Frank Sturdy advocating a lake front airport is most encouraging.

The question of finances should not be permitted to prevent Chicago from having the finest airport in the world. Chicago's strategic location will make it the air center of the world as it now is the railroad center of America. However, this will only happen if the proper facilities are available.

I have closely followed the airport developments for many years and have found that the only opposition to a lake front airport has come from those who seek to serve special interests. Chicago as a whole will benefit greatly from a lake front airport and it should seem possible to revive the Chicago pioneer spirit of our forefathers who built our great city to make its financing possible.

As every thinking student of civic developments knows, the growth of downtown Chicago has not kept pace with the growth of other cities and of Chicago's own outlying and suburban centers. This is clearly obvious from the assessor's recent revaluation of downtown real estate. Store and office building rentals have constantly declined in the last 15 years and the downtown area is rapidly becoming one studded with open air parking lots and deteriorated buildings. Downtown Chicago needs a "shot in the arm" and the lake front airport will give it just that. Keep up the good work of advocating a lake front airport in the hope that another Charles H. Wacker or another Rufus Dawes will arise to show the world that Chicago is still a growing and progressive city.

OTTO K. EITEL.

WASTE PAPER PRICES.

Chicago, April 10.—In answer to M. D.'s letter of April 3 regarding the waste paper situation, waste paper today is the nation's No. 1 critical war raw material and will become increasingly so as long as hostilities continue.

The acute shortage of supply has created confusion within the industry, necessitating many firms to operate without profit and even at a loss. This situation is probably accountable for the price fluctuations referred to in M. D.'s letter.

Under the existing ceiling price structure, it is not possible for a waste paper collector to pay more than 40 to 50 cents for 100 pounds, depending upon conditions of collection, and make a legitimate profit, taking into consideration the cost of hauling, handling, labor, and processing.

It is quite apparent a great many people are entirely too price conscious in this all important contribution to the war, which, after all, should be motivated primarily by patriotism rather than any monetary return. This is particularly true at the moment in view of the present shortage of sufficient paper containers to carry the necessary food supplies and munitions of war to our armed forces.

J. G. SHELDON,
Executive Secretary for Chicago Metropolitan Area, War Production Board.

LYONS' LEADERSHIP.

Grand Rapids, Mich., April 8.—I was deeply impressed with your recent quotations from an address by Mr. Richard Lyons, prospective Republican candidate for United States senator and particularly the following declaration, which is most worthy of repetition: "I can say one thing to you, which I urge you to remember if you forget every other word of this speech: when in the United States senate I am called upon to vote on any question affecting our domestic policies or international relations, I shall weigh every question on one scale—and one scale only—and that will be the scale that tells me what is best for the United States of America."

This concise, loyal, and patriotic statement is an outstanding example for other Republican congressional candidates to follow. I congratulate the state of Illinois on the anticipated election in November of so able a representative as Mr. Lyons to the upper house of congress.

A. L. WATERMAN.

HE'S WAITING FOR NOVEMBER.

Camp Hood, Tex., April 10.—Public opinion has well affirmed your attitude toward Wendell Willkie. I take this as assurance that the same opinion will be revealed in the November Presidential election.

CORP. G. S.

ADMINISTRATIVE TYRANNY.

Washington, D. C., April 10.—Our government was founded upon the idea that we must have a separation of powers if we were to have freedom, so the legislative, the executive, and the judicial were provided. In the last few years administrative agencies have been created by the score. In these agencies the legislative, the executive, and the judicial are combined into one head. The administrative agency makes its rules, which the courts have held to have the effect of law. The administrative agency prosecutes the case and it sits as a judge to judge the matter. Its findings are held by the courts to be conclusive if there is any evidence at all to support them.

Administrative law as it is enforced today should have no place in our government. It is not safe to allow one man to make a law, prosecute its violations, and sit as judge. There should be a separate agency to act as judge. When cases are appealed to the courts they should go to the trial court for a trial de novo and not to the Court of Appeals.

E. G. F.

NEVER AGAIN.

Three Rivers, Mich., April 9.—A good many Republicans seem to be worrying about what Wendell Willkie will do now that he has withdrawn as a candidate for the Republican nomination and has refused to say whether he would support the candidate nominated by the Republican convention. The only thing for worry, or that can defeat the Republican party in November, is the danger that Willkie may stay put.

It is to be sincerely hoped that he will take a walk. He walked out of the Democratic party in 1939, now let him walk back into it. He belongs with the crackpot New Dealers. Willkie and his platform are a liability to any party. The Republican candidate will have an up-hill drag with Willkie tied to his coat tail.

I have been a life-long Democrat, cast my first vote for Grover Cleveland for President, and have voted three times for Franklin D. Roosevelt. If the Lord forgives me for that, I promise never to do so again.

C. E. G.

GRATEFUL TO THE TRIBUNE.

Des Moines, Ia., April 6.—This letter comes from a grateful heart. We people of the midwest can never repay you for your courage and self-sacrifice. Keep up the good fight. I can show my thanks by getting new subscribers, as I got two lately in Iowa. Roosevelt wants unconditional surrender, as he surrendered unconditionally to Britain and Russia's holy communism. Nice work! We are with you and for you.

AN IOWAN FROM THE EAST.

WILLKIEITES IN CONGRESS.

Chicago, April 5.—Now that Willkie's foreign minded ideas have been exterminated in the Wisconsin election, let us hope that the few Republican congressmen who were playing the Willkie game get back to the American policy of Washington and Jefferson. One country was enough for these men in the old days and the average American today is still a man of one country.

G. G.

SAYS THERE'S NEED.

Ashland, Wis., April 12.—Our United Press wire just carried a story of your plans to start a newspaper in Milwaukee. Mighty glad to hear of this. There sure is a need for it.

JOHN B. CHAPPLE,
Managing Editor, Ashland Daily Press.

THE CORNELIUS STORIES.

Chicago, April 7.—Reading your envisioned articles concerning the six days in Jerusalem has been to me more than an ordinary pleasure in these days which all of us are passing thru.

I thank you from the bottom of my heart for this modernized report of what happened in the Holy City of Jerusalem 2,000 years ago.

V. M. VUKMIROVICH,
Royal Jugo-Slav Consulate General.

Chicago, April 8.—May I express my appreciation for the "Cornelius" articles which appeared this week in THE TRIBUNE. They were well written in a timely style and showed the results of a great deal of research and good scholarship. I am confident that they served a real purpose.

THE REV. RAY FREEMAN JENNEY,
Bryn Mawr Community Church.

Glen Ellyn, Ill., April 7.—Your series of stories on the dramatic events of Holy week viewed in present day newspaper style, is such as to give the readers not only a perspective of conditions of the past, but magnifies conditions in many of our churches of today and world affairs.

In this sin sick world of ours what does the future hold out for us? Thru the darkness, may the living Christ bring light into our souls, where only true happiness, peace, and love abound. I do hope your series of the six stories will be obtainable in book or pamphlet form.

LUCIAN O. GOYETTE.

Wisconsin Rapids, Wis., April 5.—If I had seen last Sunday's TRIBUNE before service I should have advised my congregation to take the paper for the week in order to get your masterful story of Holy week as narrated by Cornelius the Centurion. I considered it the most valuable feature I had seen in THE TRIBUNE in 20 years.

THE REV. JAMES MADISON JOHNSON,
Church of St. John the Evangelist.

Springfield, Ill., April 6.—Nothing that I have read in several years has given me such pleasure as your Centurion's report on the Christ drama. To have produced it for the penitential season is particularly appropriate. But, I hope that the series shall be preserved between covers, for I am sure there are thousands such as myself who will desire to have your Cornelius' observations in permanent form for frequent perusal.

This is masterly reporting, at once simple and dignified, thrillingly dramatic, and spiritually exciting. It has given me quite the same joy I met years ago in first encountering Dr. Cronin's "The Keys to the Kingdom." Thank you for an inspirational experience.

JOHN V. HEFFERNAN.

LACK OF BRAIN POWER.

New Castle, Ind., April 11.—We hear a great deal about lack of man power from Washington but little about lack of brain power in Washington which any schoolboy should know is the crux of our troubles. The egg market is a fair sample. The OPA and WFA apparently entered into an egg-laying contest with the hens. And as a result patriotic poultrymen responding to their country's call for food and producing the greatest volume of edible eggs in history will be lucky this year if they make enough to pay for feed and replacements of laying stock, with nothing left for the overhead. In the face of rising labor and feed costs and lower egg prices, the old hens may have to go down the lane to market. And if so, who will furnish city guys with their nice fresh eggs in 1945?

HENRY HAMMER.

FRIEND OF THE PEOPLE

The volume of Legal Friend mail necessitates printed statements on common questions. No copies or records of the letters or answers are kept. Hence follow-up letters should be complete in themselves. If questions are based on some previously printed problems a clipping of the article should accompany. Most of the replies are mailed. Letters bearing no name and address are disregarded. A self-addressed envelope will expedite handling.

DEATH DOESN'T CANCEL TAXES.

Glen Ellyn, Ill., April 2.—1. Does the death of an insane person, confined against his will, automatically cancel back or unpaid taxes on his home? 2. Would the purchaser of said property have to pay these taxes before a clear title could be obtained? 3. Do the unpaid wages of the caretaker of the property constitute a lien? 4. There was a verbal agreement that the caretaker would inherit the property at the death of the owner.

W. L.

1. No.
2. Yes.
3. No.
4. Under the statute of frauds, such an agreement should, in general, be in writing.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NO COMPOUND INTEREST.

Chicago, March 31.—I hold a note against an estate which bears interest at 6 per cent. Can I also collect compound interest?

M. B. L.

No. TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CORRECTED ANSWER.

Chicago, April 4.—Can a defense bond be re-issued without loss of interest so as to change the beneficiary arrangement?

Yes. While originally the only way to effect a change before death was by surrender followed by a new purchase, the rules have been amended so as to permit free change of the interest of a "beneficiary." This does not hold for the interest of an "owner" or a "co-owner" since to permit free change in those cases would make the bonds salable, with inflation tendencies. Forms may be obtained from the federal reserve bank.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

EXECUTOR'S FEES.

Streator, Ill., March 31.—1. What is an executor entitled to in the way of recompense for services given? 2. Is there any set amount?

M. M.

1. The present Illinois statute does not name a fixed percentage.
2. No. The best way to find out what is customary in your locality would be to talk with the clerk of the Probate court.

ALL A MISTAKE, GUZIK INSISTS OF 'KIDNAPING'

Denies Reports of Huge Ransom Payment.

walking nervously around in the back of the store. Pretty soon he said, 'Where is the phone directory?' He didn't buy a slug so he must have used a dime for an out of town call. I knew I had seen him or his picture somewhere, but I didn't think any more about it until the police telephoned me this morning.

"He didn't have a top coat and was wearing a double breasted blue suit. He was very nervous and had two or three days' beard on his face. He was mussed up and his tie was pulled up under one ear."

Some, who doubted that Guzik had been kidnaped for ransom, speculated on the possibility that he was seized in a shake-up in the racket syndicate control. They said that since Frank Nitti committed suicide and other leaders were sentenced in New York, a younger group has muscled into syndicate affairs.

Guzik, reached by a Tribune reporter, refused comment on the reported syndicate shakeup except to say there had been no change in his business affairs.

Another possibility, also held remote, was the theory that Guzik, a notorious gambler for large stakes, may have been seized to force him to pay a bet. In either of the last two cases, it was held, Guzik was spared execution because the racketeers are eager to get gambling open and for that reason want no killings.

D. A. R. JUNIORS SPEND $10,000 ON SURGERY AID

BY IRENE STEYSKAL.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, April 15.—Purchase of 28 metal locators, at a cost of more than $10,000, for use by the army and navy in war surgery, was reported here today at committee meetings of the junior membership of the Daughters of the American Revolution. The instruments are used by surgeons to locate metal in the body, eliminating the need for painful probing in wounds.

Mrs. Hansel Wilson of Grosse Point, Mich., who reported on this major war project, disclosed that 127 groups in 36 states are participating actively in raising money for locators. The juniors also have given $8,000 since last October for Seeing Eye guide dogs for the blind.

Resolutions Unit Meets.

Their conferences were preliminary to the opening of the 53d continental congress and second war projects meeting of the National D. A. R., opening here Monday with headquarters in the Commodore hotel.

The resolutions committee went into its first conference behind closed doors, with Mrs. Roscoe C. O'Byrne, Brookville, Ind., vice chairman, presiding for the chairman, Mrs. Julien G. Goodhue of Arlington, Va., who is ill and unable to attend the congress. Mrs. Goodhue, formerly of Evanston, Ill., is a member of Fort Dearborn chapter of the society, and was to have served as a delegate for the Evanston group.

Tea Given for Mrs. Pouch.

Mrs. Otto H. Crist of Danville, immediate past regent of Illinois, and Mrs. Vinton Earl Sisson of Chicago, both are members of the resolutions committee.

Highlighting several social gatherings today was a tea given for the retiring president general, Mrs. William H. Pouch, by Mrs. Tryphosa Bates-Batcheller, who was a state regent of the D. A. R. in France.

Among state dinners planned for tomorrow is that of the Illinois delegation, at which Mrs. Samuel James Campbell of Mount Carroll, Illinois candidate for president general, will be the guest.

THIEVES DROP FUR COAT.

WIFE DEMANDS OPA RATION HER MATE'S AMOURS

It's Sample of Headaches Vexing War Officials.

BY CHARLES CHEADLE.

It takes all kinds of questions to make up an office of price administration ration executive's day, many of them queries and demands that not only tax the imagination but weigh heavily on the ration chief's ability to say "no" with equanimity. For example:

"My husband has only an A book but still manages to run around every night with other women. Can you please cancel his gasoline rations so he'll stay home?"

Appeals such as this normally are handled by local boards, but sometimes the local clerks and ration committees pass the buck to James Riley, area OPA ration chief, whose job it is to see that each request is given consideration.

Roast Problem Solved.

"The woman who wanted her husband's amours curbed was only one of a dozen with similar problems," Riley said. "When rationing was started I thought kerosene was used mostly to run tractors and light lamps, but I found out that it takes thousands of gallons a year to keep the bed bug problem under control."

An excited housewife called up and said she had bought a five pound beef roast for dinner, only to to have her husband telephone he was bringing his boss and another man. She posed the problem whether there would be enough meat for seven persons. The OPA put its cooking expert to work and the housewife was assured that while the meat would shrink about 25 per cent, there would be enough for seven—but probably no seconds for junior.

Reduction of A mileage has resulted in hundreds of self promotions by Chicagoans, Riley said. Machinists, service men and engineers are eligible to extra rations for use in their work. So a former soap salesman now classifies himself as a sanitary engineer; a feed salesman is an agricultural technician.

Usher a Crowd Engineer.

Two youths of 16 achieved the ultimate in promotions. One, a theater usher, styled himself a crowd engineer, while a messenger boy became a communications technician.

A west side resident applied for large amounts of gasoline he proposed to use in a tractor, corn planter, and other mechanical equipment in a new farming venture. Pinned down, he said his back yard was pretty large and he thought he ought to go about its cultivation with some certainty that he could do the job right.

Oil was being rationed for use in a Rogers Park building. A routine board investigation revealed the building was unoccupied, and the owner was asked to surrender his fuel oil coupons. "We'll freeze to death," he protested. "Who'll freeze to death?" he was asked. "The Tuesday night poker club," he replied.

They play at home now.

Hops Into Chicago

Flash, the world's champion jumping frog, was in Chicago yesterday, and he was like all other frogs in one respect. You couldn't tell by looking at him how far he could jump.

Flash comes from Angels Camp, Cal., scene of the international frog jumping contests, a traditional event based on Mark Twain's famous story, "The Jumping Frog of Calaveras County," and was en route to New York to participate in exhibition jumps in Manhattan Center under auspices of the combined boys' clubs of that city. Twelve other Calaveras county leapers were in the stables, but they were pushed out of the limelight by the champion whose world record is a leap of 15 feet 10 inches made at Angels Camp in 1942.

A. L. Jermy, a Stockton [Cal.] newspaper man, is taking Flash to New York and will attend the contest to officiate as judge. The champion jumper belongs to Louis Robinson, Stockton [Cal.] soldier.

HIT-RUN AUTO KILLS VICTIM, 60; DRIVER SEIZED

Charles Rimmele, 60, of 7040 Union av., died yesterday in Southtown hospital of injuries suffered when a hit and run driver struck him at 63d st. and Wolcott av. Chicago Lawn police traced the driver, Thomas Hines, 27, of 6212 Kenneth av., after witnesses gave them the license number. Hines said he felt his car strike an object, got out and looked, but was unable to see anything. He was held for the inquest.

John Holland, 35, of 235 Douglas av., Elgin, a recently discharged soldier, and Mrs. Olive Jackson, 30, Negro, were killed when his automobile ran off route 31 a mile north of St. Charles and struck a clump of trees. Mrs. Jackson's husband, Willie, 49, and Miss Henrietta Lewis, 40, both Negroes, were injured. Jackson's and Miss Lewis' homes are in the Mexico City section, north of Elgin.

COOKING OILS AND SHORTENING NOW POINT-FREE

Shortening and rationed salad and cooking oils will be point-free beginning today, OPA Administrator Bowles announced in Washington, D. C., yesterday. The ratio value of all such products has been four red points a pound.

"Current available supplies of lard are at a high level," Bowles said, "and we have enough shortening and salad and cooking oils on hand to meet civilian demands. Thus, there is no need to require point currency as a means of controling movement of these commodities."

Lard was made point-free early in March because of improvement in supplies. Butter and margarine are not affected.

Eligibility for hardship rations of fuel oil was extended by OPA to include nonresidential users, such as churches, schools, war plants, and office buildings.

The extra rations will be granted in cases where, despite efforts to conserve, supplies of oil for heating and hot water have been exhausted.

Because of tight supply, hardship rations have been issued heretofore only to householders. The shortage problem has now been relieved as a result of decreased seasonal demand for oil and continuing large deliveries to the east coast thru new pipe lines.

R. O. T. C. CADETS ARE HONORED AT THEATER OF AIR

Value of Training Cited by Gen. Aurand.

Members of the Reserve Officers' Training corps were honored last night in Medinah temple, where 3,950 cadets, instructors and friends of the corps gathered from eight midwest states to be guests at W-G-N's Chicago Theater of the Air presentation of Franz Lehar's operetta, "The Merry Widow."

Forty-two institutions, including public and Catholic high schools, military academies and universities, were among the schools represented. Military and educational celebrities present included Maj. Gen. H. S. Aurand, commanding general of the 6th service command; Brig Gen. John T. Davis, chief of staff; Col. William F. Morrison, professor of military science and tactics in the Chicago public schools, and Dr. William H. Johnson, superintendent of the city's public schools.

General Commends R. O. T. C.

Gen. Aurand commended the work of the R. O. T. C. and the value of its training during the years, he said, when many persons had lost sight of its worth.

"To the foresight of Col. McCormick," he said, "Maj. Frank L. Beals, Angus Hibbard, and others of the same thought, we owe the continuance of the R. O. T. C. in Chicago during the last waning years of peace."

Col. Morrison told the cadets that members of the corps who have gone into battle have proven themselves well trained and courageous, and said "the country has begun to understand the R. O. T. C. and its value."

Color Guard Opens Program.

A color guard from the regimental staff of the Chicago Public High School R. O. T. C. opened the post-broadcast program with the presentation of the colors. The 740th military police battalion band from Camp Skokie opened the entertainment program with a series of novelty numbers. A highlight was the appearance of nine war dogs from Fort Custer, Mich.

Marion Claire, soprano, was presented in the role of Sonia in the operetta. Gilbert Russell sang the role of Prince Danilo. The part of Baron Popoff was sung by Earl Wilkie. Leading dramatic roles were played by Laurette Fillbrandt, Olan Soule, and John Barclay.

Militia Trophy

One of eight trophies to be given winning units of Illinois reserve militia by the Tribune in drill attendance contest.

Commanders of three Chicago and four downstate regiments of the Illinois reserve militia yesterday expressed determination to win the drill attendance trophy to be presented by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.

Eight trophies are to be given. The rifle company in each of the seven infantry regiments attaining the best attendance record between June 1 and Dec. 1 will receive one. A grand trophy will be given to the regiment which attains the best attendance percentage during the same period. The trophies are offered with a view to spurring the efforts of the citizen-soldiers who took the place of the Illinois National Guard, called into federal service March 5, 1941.

"This will be one of the few times that units of the Illinois reserve militia have received any really worthwhile recognition of their contribution to the war effort," said Brig. Gen. Chester R. POLICE HAVE NO RIGHT TO SET UP UNION: ALLMAN

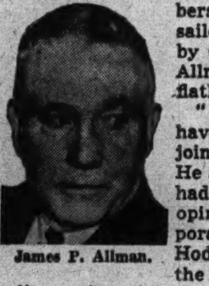
The secret formation of a union of Chicago policemen, reported to have 820 members, was assailed yesterday by Commissioner Allman, who said flatly:



James P. Allman.

"Policemen have no business joining unions." He added that he had requested an opinion from Corporation Counsel Hodes regarding the legality of the policemen's action.

One of the points upon which Hodes has been asked to rule is whether union affiliation, which Allman said implies "blind adherence to union tenets," conflicts with the oath taken by policemen when they join the force.

Allman Poses a Question.

"What's going to happen when a union cop meets a union law violator?" Allman demanded. "Will they shake hands?"

A survey of police officials and patrolmen indicated that affiliation with the union, chartered as the American Federal of Labor's Chicago and Cook County Law Enforcement Officer's union, local 785, was distasteful to many of them.

Lt. Michael J. Ahern of the Rogers Park station, president of the Chicago Police Lieutenants' association, disclosed that his organization was opposed to the new union.

Held "Physical Impossibility."

"We believe that it is a physical impossibility for a policeman to belong to any outside organization or union," he said. He added that Lt. Charles A. Anderson of the Irving Park station, who announced formation of the new union and said he was its president, was not a member of the police lieutenants' association.

Policeman Frank H. Thiese, part time secretary to Capt. John M. Howe of the Sheffield Avenue station, candidate for president of the Chicago Patrolmen's club, said he believed the 4,500 members of that organization are almost unanimously opposed to union affiliation.

Says It Would Tie Hands.

James F. Lee, a patrolman at the Town Hall station, said that he believed it was all right for policemen to join social organizations, but that he "couldn't function efficiently as a policeman if he were a union member."

Patrolman Harold Murphy of the 1st district, said that he understood the department rules and regulations barred union affiliation. Detective Ray Knapp of the detective bureau asserted he had been on the force for 22 years without affiliation with any union, and that he intended to complete his service on that basis.

The secrecy with which the union was formed puzzled policemen and officials alike.

Several members of the department were fearful that union affiliation would mean surrender of their present pension rights. They believe that as union members they would come under the provisions of the social security law, and would draw those lesser retirement benefits. Hodes has been asked to determine this point.

Some police officials were curious as to how union policemen would react to an assignment bidding them to quell a disturbance in a picket line.

"If they were good union members," said one, "they would join the picket line."

They met on Broadway two years ago when Sinclair was directing the stage play "The Wookey," in which Miss Angel played the leading feminine role.

PHONE WORKERS REJECT STRIKE, DROP WLB CASE

The Illinois Union of Telephone Workers, an independent organization, yesterday withdrew petitions to the national and regional war labor boards for rehearing of requests for wage increases for construction, maintenance, and installation workers of the Illinois Bell Telephone company.

Edwin R. Hackett, union attorney, said the union is preparing a complaint to the national labor relations board charging the company with interfering with administration of affairs of the union in violation of the Wagner labor act.

Withdrawal of the petitions followed action of union members Friday in voting 2,178 to 1,990 against a strike to enforce its demands. The strike vote was taken under provisions of the Smith-Connally act after the war labor board rejected requests for a $2 weekly wage increase.

If Back Aches or Ankles Swell, Flush Your Kidneys

If you're feeling out o'sorts, Get Up Nights or suffer from Burning Passages, Backache, Swollen Ankles, Nervousness, Rheumatic Pains, Dizziness, Circles Under Eyes and feel worn-out, the cause may be non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles. Worry, Colds, working too hard, or over-eating or drinking may create an excess of Acids and overload your Kidneys so that they need help to flush out poisonous wastes that might otherwise undermine your health.

Help Kidneys Remove Acids

Nature provides the Kidneys to clean and purify your blood and to remove excess Acids. The Kidneys contain about nine million tiny tubes or filters through which the heart pumps blood about 200 times an hour, night and day, so it's easy to see that they may get tired and slow down when overloaded.

Seventeen years ago a practicing physician's prescription called Cystex was made available to the public through drug stores, making it easy and inexpensive to help thousands suffering from non-organic and non-systemic Kidney and Bladder troubles in these three simple ways: 1. Help the Kidneys remove excess acids which may become poisoning and irritating. 2. To palliate burning and smarting of the urinary passages, and bladder irritation. 3. Help the Kidneys flush out wastes which may become poisonous if allowed to accumulate, thus aiding nature in stimulating an increase of energy, which may easily make you feel years younger.

3 Day Trial Offer

To prove that Cystex may be the very medicine you need make this fair-play trial offer: Get a three-day supply of Cystex from your druggist today for only 35c. Take it exactly as directed and see the results in your own particular case—if not delighted and really surprised, or if not satisfied for any reason at all, simply return the empty package, and your money will be refunded in full. This is guaranteed. You have everything to gain and nothing to lose, so start your Cystex 3-day trial today.

AUTHOR'S NOTE: Cystex is produced under the direction of a licensed physician for The Knox Co., one of the largest drug companies in the world with laboratory connections in the U.S.A., Canada, England, Australia and South America. The guarantee of money back unless satisfied is enforced. 100% and is a dependable form of assurance to all users of Cystex.

The Interior Finish of the Future
NEW in Chicago Today
Plastic-Namel
MODERN CHEMISTRY BRINGS YOU A GLIMPSE OF A BRIGHT NEW WORLD!

It's so easy to use!
You are assured of a successful job. Here's why:

Plastic-Namel THE NEW SCLEROPLAST COATING GLOSS WHITE • 1800 "There is no finer finish" — $5.95 PER GALLON

FLOWS EASILY Plastic-Namel's easier to use than you'd ever dream possible. Just slips off the brush and onto the wall. Not "tight" or draggy; yet does not sag or run.

NO BRUSH-MARKS Plastic-Namel "levels" itself out beautifully, without streaks, brush-marks, or thin spots. Leaves a smooth, even coating.

COVERS WELL IN ONE COAT Has much greater hiding power than old-style paint. Covers spots, stains, etc., much better, leaving a clean, intense white (or ivory) film. One coat usually covers.

FILM OF OLD-STYLE PAINT — FILM OF PLASTIC-NAMEL

EXTREME DURABILITY Plastic-Namel's white retains its brilliant whiteness, does not darken rapidly from oxidation like some old-style paints. That's the particular advantage of the synthetic resins used. The gloss is wonderful for steamy bathrooms and kitchens because it wears away slowly, and holds its luster through repeated washings. Looks like new and gives good protection for a long, long time.

EXCEPTIONAL WASHABILITY Plastic-Namel stays clean much longer. Its hard, smooth surface does not absorb dirt. When it does need washing, it washes easily, stands washing much better, and the gloss holds its luster much longer.

NO OFFENSIVE PAINT ODOR Plastic-Namel has no sharp, offensive paint odor. You work in comfort—no need to open doors and windows wide.

An entirely new type of finish

Tomorrow, says chemistry, is the day of plastics. But that day is already here—in Plastic-Namel—now introduced for the first time in Chicago.

Today, research in plastics opens an entirely new field. Great Lakes chemists find that new alkyd and phenolic resins give a new ease of application, greater hiding power, and a hard, dense coating that lasts much longer.

After hundreds of tests, the chemists have selected those particular synthetic resins and other materials that give the greatest hiding power, and the longest lasting surface.

Synthetic resins are still scarce. There isn't enough Plastic-Namel to go around. So Great Lakes is bringing Plastic-Namel to Chicago first! The progressive paint dealers listed below are ready to supply you.

Plastic-Namel assures success for the home user. Try it! It's the interior finish of tomorrow—here for you today!

CUBS, SOX PLAY IN COMISKEY PARK TODAY

SOX RATED AS TEAM TO BEAT FOR A. L. CROWN

Chances Depend on Play of Webb.

Burns' Selections

AFTER a careful study of the teams during the spring training season, Edward Burns' selections for the 1944 American league pennant race are as follows:

1—Chicago.	5—Detroit.
2—Washington.	6—St. Louis.
3—New York.	7—Boston.
4—Cleveland.	8—Philadelphia.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

Manager Jim Dykes of the Chicago White Sox, a calm and analytical cuss to an extent for greater than most fans imagine, says he would have no luctance about picking his White Sox to win the 1944 American league pennant, if he were sure Skeeter Webb could hold his talent at short and Leroy Schalk could keep going at high speed playing second.

Skeeter Webb.

Manager Dykes says that a team to win a pennant even these days, "must be strong down the middle." He didn't exactly think up this crack, but it is all right for him to apply it as an honest diagnosis of his own pennant prospects. Jim is satisfied with most of his "down the middle" array—the catchers, the pitchers and center fielders appear to be as good as any. The same could be said of the second base combination, except for the fear that Webb is too frail to be at his best day after day and that the second baseman, Schalk, Peter Sharp, Cass Kwiet, or somebody else will suffer when he does not have the support of the Skeeter at his tops.

Trosky, Clarke Add Power.

Despite this so called keystone anxiety, we are inclined to pick the White Sox to win the pennant on the basis of their pitching and their increased hitting power. They will miss the line drive singles of last year's American league batting champion, Luke Appling, but they have added the power of Hal Trosky and Grey Clarke, the latter the American association 1943 batting champion.

They still have Ralph Hodgin, the 1943 American league batting champion, on the basis of performers now operating. Guy Curtright has shown he is ready for another big batting spree, tho he did taper off to a mark under .300 in the closing weeks of the season. Restored to the team after a year in the army is Myril Hoag, best throwing outfielder in the major leagues, and still around is the 1943 base stealing sensation, Wally Moses, and that other speedster, Thurman Tucker.

Senators Look Good.

Main challengers of the Sox will be the three teams that topped them last year, the Yankees, the Washington Senators, and the Cleveland Indians. Despite all the indignation of Joe McCarthy of the Yankees about the way observers have been scoffing at his outfit this spring, we think he is hollering in a rain barrel. He can't be so terribly optimistic.

Of the three main Sox challengers, we would not be surprised to see the Washington Senators gain the top rung. To win, the Sox will have to personally beat the Indians. If they hadn't been pushovers for the Indians last season, the Sox would have finished second in the American league race.

So there you have our guess on the first division of the American league—Chicago, Washington, New York, and Cleveland. And there must be a second division. So put down Detroit, St. Louis, Boston, and Philadelphia—in that order.

STIR UP MADE DERBY FAVORITE AT 4 TO 1 ODDS

St. Louis, Mo., April 15 (AP).—Eighteen horses appear certain to start in the Kentucky Derby, Betting Commissioner James J. Carroll said today in announcing that Stir Up had taken the favorite's spot at 4 to 1 in winter book odds for the race.

Pukka Gin, which had topped the list from the opening of the book, was dropped to second choice at 5 to 1 after being beaten in his first start as a 3 year old this week. Challenge Me, winner of the Arkansas Derby, also was quoted at 5 to 1.

Running in the first division of the experimental free handicap at Jamaica, Pukka Gin was nosed out by Stronghold, a Derby ineligible, while Stir Up won an easy victory in the second section of the handicap, adding to the laurels gained by his Flamingo stakes triumph at Hialeah.

CHICAGO'S BASEBALL STALWARTS SPEND A RAINY DAY

PICK CARDINALS TO WIN PENNANT

Vaughan's Choices

IRVING VAUGHAN'S choices in the 1944 National league flag chase, made after a survey of the eight clubs while in spring training, follow:

1—St. Louis.	5—Chicago.
2—Cincinnati.	6—Boston.
3—Brooklyn.	7—New York.
4—Pittsburgh.	8—Philadelphia.

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.

The National league's 1944 contribution to fun and amusement promises to follow a pattern similar to that of its immediate predecessor; things may change a lot between next Tuesday when the campaign is launched and Oct. 1 when it concludes but eventualities will have to take care of themselves. So on the basis of what the eight flag aspirants have to offer at the start and without figuring on the possible bites taken out of their man power later by Uncle Sam it seems necessary to declare the St. Louis Cardinals have more than a passing chance to weave their third successive pennant.

Who wins the pennant, of course, isn't important except for those who win it and thus cut into the melon. Of greater import, if the two major circuits are to go on to the scheduled finish, is the patronage. An alarming all-round decline at the gate would close the shop quicker than could be done by United States requirements. But even tho the so-called standard of play might be lowered, the customers are hardly likely to give up their favorite outlet for excess vocal steam.

Can Get Replacements.

In the war time process that takes a player from this team and then from that one, etc., the best team naturally stands to lose the most because it has the most to lose. The Cards, the National league's best, have lost as have the others but they remain at this writing the entry that must be beaten.

They have those class AA farm clubs from which to draw replacements as needed and as yet there is no ban against that either from Washington or Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis. The Cards probably won't be as expert as they were last year until the Yankees gave them the business but they'll still be good enough.

Reds May Surprise.

If there is a dark horse concealed among next Tuesday's eight starters it could be Bill McKechnie's Cincinnati Reds. At the moment the Reds are sitting pretty despite their contributions to Uncle Sam. They will experience additional withdrawals as the summer gets on but so will the others and thus the relative strength will remain. So will the Reds' long standing knack for being tough about surrendering runs to the opposition. Boss McKechnie always has been a master of winning much of the time without an undue expenditure of base hits.

There have been stories floating around that the Cubs are going to melt down the seven other clubs to a state of feebleness but it is an old custom to put the load on

BASEBALL GETS GO SIGN FROM THE PRESIDENT

Washington, D. C., April 15 (AP).—Baseball, about to start on its third war time season despite loss of players to the armed services and other difficulties, got an official nod of approval from the White House today.

President Roosevelt, a fan himself, is down south getting some rest and sunshine but his secretary, Stephen Early, spoke for him.

"I know the President is pleased to see baseball continuing," Early told Clark Griffith, president of the Washington ball club. "Everybody knows his feelings in support of sports."

His Annual Chore.

Griffith received this O. K. for the new season when he called at Early's office to leave annual American league passes for the President and Mrs. Roosevelt—a little chore he does each year at this time.

In peace time, it also was an occasion to ask that the President throw out the first ball to open the season.

Mr. Roosevelt has had to decline since the start of the war, however, and Vice President Wallace has taken over that ceremonial task. Wallace will be on hand when the

Clark Shaughnessy Says T Formation Is Quite Simple

BY WILFRID SMITH.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Lafayette, Ind., April 15.—Clark Shaughnessy, University of Pittsburgh coach who is credited with the revival and development of the T formation in collegiate football, denied today before 200 members of Purdue's annual gridiron clinic that the offense requires so many plays that it is difficult to teach it to high school players. While stressing the teachability of the style of attack, Shaughnessy asserted that only 12 fundamental plays are necessary.

"Six plays to the right and six to the left are sufficient," Shaughnessy said. "The attack is based on deception and passing and a back in motion in any direction, is absolutely required otherwise you forfeit at least 50 per cent in effectiveness."

Variations Are Successful.

Shaughnessy pointed out that coaches have successfully taught variations of the system he developed at Stanford to win a national championship. Purdue, Notre Dame, and Illinois had remarkable results last year with the T and Shaughnessy attributed this to the fundamental factors of the offensive maneuvers for which he said no satisfactory defense has been found.

In diagramming his attack Shaughnessy always set up a six man defensive line with two backers-up, the common 6-2-2-1 which he said probably was the best defense. Later, however, he added that a seven man line, particularly if it was unexpected by the exponents of the T attack, might best serve the defenders. Cecil Isbell, Purdue back field coach, a former member of the Green Bay Packers, recalled that this surprise defense helped Green Bay whip the Bears, 16 to 14, in 1941.

Pass Plays Standard.

The Chicago Bears, of course, are the professional advocates of the T attack which Shaughnessy developed with Lt. Comdr. George Halas, Bears' owner. The Bears are reputed to use more than 200 plays from the formation. Shaughnessy said that this is not true unless each variation in line blocking is counted as a separate play.

Shaughnessy asserted that only 12 fundamental plays are required but that changes in line blocking develop individual initiative and give greater satisfaction to the players since intelligence is placed above brawn. He added that the same pattern for blocking for forward passes always is used and this is another proof of the simplicity of the formation.

Shaughnessy's lecture and subsequent question and answer period climaxed Purdue's 13th annual spring football clinic which Guy Mackey, director of athletics, announced was the best of the series.

PORTLAND GIRLS BREAK RECORD IN FREE STYLE

Oakland, Cal., April 15 (AP).—The Multnomah club 400 yard free style relay team of Portland, Ore., broke its record in the N. A. A. U. women's senior swimming meet tonight.

Mary Ann Hanson, Suzanne Zimmerman, Nancy Merki and Brenda Helser, did the 400 in 4 minutes 9.1 seconds—one tenth second faster than the American mark they established in Seattle in 1942.

The Women's Swimming Association team of New York City was second. Third place was taken by the Crystal Palace Plunge of San Francisco and the Medinah Athletic club of Chicago was fourth.

Second Record of Day.

It was the second American record established today. In the 440 yard free style race Ann Curtis trimmed a half second off the 5:27.8 record she set last year in the A. A. U. meet.

In the 100 yard back stroke semifinals Suzanne Zimmerman, 18, Multnomah club of Portland, Ore., stroked to victory in 1:11.2. The second heat was won by 15 year old Muriel Mellon, San Diego, in 1:13.3, and the third by Betty

ILLINOIS PLANS SPORTS ARENA

Building Would Seat 20,000 Persons.

A movement which University of Illinois alumni hope will culminate in the construction of a new sports building on the campus at Urbana was launched at a meeting of members of the athletic committee of the alumni association and their guests in the University club in Chicago yesterday.

The proposed new building would have a seating capacity of approximately 20,000 for basketball and meetings of a general nature. It would provide an adequate indoor swimming pool and housing for other phases of indoor sports, and would consolidate all activities of the university's athletic association under one roof.

Plan Building Financing.

It is planned to have construction of the building financed by appropriation by the Illinois general assembly. In launching the movement, members of the alumni association committee yesterday approved plans for obtaining the appropriation. The plan will be forwarded to the university board of trustees and the appropriation measure will be introduced in the Illinois legislature in January, 1945.

Yesterday's meeting had been called by R. A. Stipes Jr., of Champaign, chairman of the alumni association's athletic committee. Other committee members in attendance were Waldo B. Ames of Chicago, George L. Farnsworth of Ottawa, Burns M. Franklin of St. Louis, Mo., Scott C. Green of Wilmette, C. E. Lovejoy Jr. of Chicago, A. J. Nowack of La Salle, W. K. Pierce of Elgin, and C. D. Jacobs of West Frankfort.

Cite Needs for Building.

Guests of the committee who were present included state educational officials and scholastic and collegiate sports leaders.

At the conclusion of the meeting members of the committee and guests said they deemed construction of the proposed new building necessary because:

It would provide proper housing for the Illinois State High school basketball tournament. Altho the 1944 attendance of 50,129 set a new record, estimates were that three times that number would have attended had seating been available. The university ticket office refunded $18,000 in tournament ticket orders which the limited seating capacity of Huff gymnasium made it impossible to fill.

Could Increase Participation.

It would provide adequate seating for University of Illinois basketball games. Estimates of the university's bureau of institutional research are that enrollment at Illinois probably will reach 18,000 in the immediate post-war period. Because of Huff gymnasium's limited seating capacity the athletic association was unable to fill all student coupon book orders, and thousands of ticket applications were refunded because facilities were exhausted by student tickets.

It would provide facilities for expansion of physical and health training. Prior to the war 3,500 male students were participating in intramural sports at the university, and it is expected that this number will be increased to more than 6,000 after the war. Training for the additional thousands, the committee contended, will be impossible unless the new building is constructed.

The Cubs and White Sox, whose civic baseball affairs were tossed out of Wrigley field yesterday by the weather man, will resume at 2 o'clock this afternoon—at least they are scheduled to resume—in Comiskey park.

The Sox, now leading the so-called city series by 2 to 0 in games played locally, are assured of a tie even tho they might lose today and also in tomorrow's bond battle in Wrigley field, but it is an old custom for them to manhandle the National leaguers so they can be expected to do the best possible about carrying on the long standing tradition.

Erickson Opposes Ross.

Paul Erickson will start for the Cubs today and go seven innings if possible. Buck Ross will serve for the Sox and attempt to prolong the Cubs' batting agonies. In the two games played the latter have responded with a total of only eight hits.

While the Cubs were sad over having relinquished all mathematical chance to take the spring series, there was great rejoicing when Lou Novikoff effected his belated arrival at noon. Lou's power may be needed in the outfield and there is some talk of converting him into a pitcher. Lou, at one time, was rated one of the greatest softball pitchers in America and fears are growing that even good softball pitching would bolster the Cub staff.

Believed in Good Shape.

Besides being a powerful hitter Lou, as all fans know, is a gate attraction. He is also a morale builder among the fellows, what with his jokes and friendly antics.

Novikoff missed spring training this year because his wife was ill and he wished to be near her. Last year he missed the spring training span and several weeks of the season. Then he was a holdout. He has been playing some winter baseball and probably is in as good shape as he would have been had he reported on time, it was said.

Tickets for the Cubs opening game in Chicago next Friday with St. Louis and for the first double header of the season, with the St. Louis Cardinals next Sunday, will go on sale tomorrow at The Hub, 235 S. State st., and at Wrigley field.

Notre Dame Nine Defeats Indiana Twice

Bloomington, Ind., April 15 [Special].—Notre Dame's marine-navy-civilian baseball team opened its 1944 campaign this afternoon by taking a double header from Indiana university, 10 to 5 and 4 to 0. Each game was seven innings by agreement.

The Irish got nine hits off the pitching of Gene Seifert, Indiana sophomore hurler, to win the first game, but it was Seifert's wildness which gave Notre Dame five runs in the fifth to sew up the contest. Seifert, Indiana's only veteran pitcher, walked nine men in the game, five in the fifth.

Six of Notre Dame's runs in the first game were unearned.

Bill Martin, a navy trainee, shut out the Hoosiers in the second game, yielding only two hits, both of them by Dean Bowker, Indiana shortstop, who also had two hits in the first game and the best batting average of the day with four singles in six times at the plate.

The two losses gave Indiana two out of four in preconference competition. The Hoosiers will play a second game with the Marines from Crane naval ammunition depot here Monday.

CHICAGO MAKES PLANS FOR 1944 GOLF TOURNEYS

Prepares for the Busiest Season in History.

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Chicago, the only American golf center to carry on with a war time program of competitive play, is now preparing for its busiest season in history. A full schedule of big time tournaments already has been arranged by the Chicago District Golf association, the Women's Western Golf association, the Chicago Women's District Golf association, and George S. May, Tam o' Shanter's enterprising president. In addition to these organizations, the Illinois section of the Professional Golfers Association of America is mapping a series of events aimed at raising funds for the rehabilitation of war veterans thru golf.

While other associations and cities were abandoning the game completely for the duration of the war, the governing bodies in our town were exerting their energies to even more extensive campaigns as long as they were commensurate with the war. In 1942, the C. D. G. A. inspired and conducted the Hale America Open. George May successfully held his All-American tourneys for professionals, amateurs, and women. The Women's Western also refused to drop out of the picture, reaching a new high with their Open and Amateur tourneys last year.

Resume Western Open.

The Western Golf association, which has its headquarters in Chicago, also has indicated that it will resume its Open championship during the summer, provided a proper bid is made by a member club of its organization. The work of the Chicago groups in sustaining the game is credited in large part with the revival of the recent winter tour, and the resumption of the annual National P. G. A. tournament, which will be held Aug. 14-20 in Spokane, Wash., under the auspices of that city's famed Athletic Round Table.

First of the major events in the Chicago area will be the Women's Western Open championship, set for the Park Ridge Country club for the week of June 19. The W. W. G. A. will follow thru with its amateur tournament the week of Aug. 7 at the Onwentsia club, home club of Mrs. Charles Dennehy, the association's president.

Victory Open Tops List.

Highlight of the year will be the exclusive Chicago Victory National Open championships, a five day production to be decided at the conveniently located Edgewater Golf club, long time home base of the veteran Chick Evans. The show will begin with a two day partners' contest on June 28 and 29, in which leading professionals will be paired in foursomes with a senior, a woman player, and an amateur.

The Victory National Open, to which only those players with proven championship records are eligible for invitation, will be held over 72 holes—18 on June 30, 18 more on July 1, and a final 36 on July 2. Sammy Byrd, the former New York Yankee outfielder, won last year's championship at Beverly. Proceeds of the Victory tournaments will be distributed among a number of war relief organizations.

Baseball Gets Go Sign from the President

Griffith said he was pleased to hear of the President's attitude.

"Baseball is necessary to the war effort," Griffith said. "All the boys overseas say they want to hear our scores."

In recognition of the servicemen's desire for scores, the government has arranged this year to broadcast to men overseas play by play accounts of five games a week.

The opening ceremonies Tuesday and as much of the game itself as can be covered in the first hour will be shortwaved to men overseas.

Said It Before.

Early's expression in behalf of the President was in line with what Mr. Roosevelt said directly when the question of war time baseball was raised in 1942, the first season after Pearl Harbor.

In a letter to Kenesaw Mountain Landis, baseball's high commissioner, Mr. Roosevelt said he thought the sport ought to go on but that players meeting necessary military and naval qualifications should go into the services.

BUCK NEWSOM SIGNS, LOSES HIS ROLE IN OPENER

New York, April 15 (AP).—Connie Mack signed Buck Newsom to a contract with the Philadelphia Athletics today, and then announced that Buck's indifferent work in an exhibition game against the Curtis bay coast guard nine yesterday had cost him the assignment to open the season on the mound against the Washington Senators.

The Athletic pilot also said he was signing the veteran Al Simmons to a contract as a player instead of as a coach. Rookie Pitcher Jack McGillen, who went to the Athletics' camp on a trial basis, also will get a contract.

EXPERTS SHOW HOW IT'S DONE

Members of the Chicago Athletic association were shown some of the tricks of the golf game by these pros at the C. A. A. 20th annual clinic yesterday in the organization's gymnasium. They are, left to right: Errie Ball, former Charlottesville, Va., pro and Southeastern P. G. A. champion; Johnny Revolta, Evanston; Pvt. BY WILLIAM BAYLISS.

IF it were not for the fact that the expression has been used so much in speaking of other industrial plants, sometimes none too truthfully, the perfect description of the setup at the Haber Screw Machine Products company would be to say the force is just a big, happy family. In this case the designation would be correct, for it would be difficult to find a more closely knit industrial organization than the one over which Titus Haffa presides at 864-900 W. North av.

Titus Haffa (seated), president of the Haber Screw Machine Products company, outlines his ideas on plans for the plant's new recreation setup. Standing, left to right, are Edward Ryan, physical director of the North Av.-Larrabee Y. M. C. A., and three members of the Haber recreation committee, August B. Singer, personnel director; Kenneth Weindorf, plant superintendent, and Philip H. Fox, safety director.

The latest example of Haffa's interest in the well being of his workers, of whom there are 800 men and women in the Haber plant, is his plan to set up a complete athletic and recreational program for them. Recognizing the value of a physical training plan to maintain the health and morale of his workers, Haffa some time ago started looking around for a spot where such a program could be instituted. Fortunately, he did not have to look any farther than three blocks, that being the distance between the Haber plant and the North Avenue-Larrabee Y. M. C. A.

Not only is the "Y" building colse, but its physical director, Eddy Ryan, long has been a handball opponent of Haffa on the association courts. Ryan, considerably the younger of the two, says in fact that it's difficult for him to recall a time when he was not playing the Haber company president, who at his peak could take on the best of them. Consequently, Ryan was called in as an expert consultant and helped draw up the program which shortly will be inaugurated, barring unforeseen developments.

Called in to take over the detail work in lining up a company athletic program were four plant representatives: August B. Singer, personnel director; Philip H. Fox, safety director; Kenneth Weindorf, plant superintendent, and Henry Macey, night superintendent.

They have the plan just about ready to put in operation. It calls for the Haber company to purchase a group membership in the North Avenue-Larrabee "Y" which will cover all workers, both men and women. There will be special classes for both day and night shift workers, to be held at hours most convenient to the majority of the group. Supervision of calisthenics, as well as such competitive sports as swimming, boxing, wrestling, handball, tennis, and badminton will be under the supervision of the Y. M. C. A. physical department, which also will organize plant softball, basketball, and volleyball leagues for both men and women as interest develops.

Incidentally, it is a safe bet that one of these evenings after the boss is thru at his office, a late business caller may be told that he can be reached at the Y. M. C. A. If the latter strolls over to that building he well may find Haffa in the midst of an important conference with one of his employes on the handball court. It's a safe bet too that the visitor will have to become a spectator until the boss beats the worker, or vice versa.

The new recreational setup is another of a long series of moves by Haffa for the welfare of his workers. The plant has a system whereby either radio or recorded music is transmitted to all departments. This system recently was used to let the workers hear a talk from the office by Sgt. Barney Ross, one of the marines' heroes at Guadalcanal and a former boxing champion. When one of the former Haber employes now in service comes back on leave, he gets to talk to the gang by the same means, and it also carries news of birthdays, new arrivals in the workers' families and similar news.

IT DOES HAPPEN HERE!
Thirty years ago a young man named Titus Haffa was a hustling newsboy at Halsted st. and North av., earning money for the support of his widowed mother and three small sisters. Today the same Titus Haffa is president of the modern plant of the Haber Screw Machine Products company, within two blocks of that location and also has large interests in other major industries.

Formerly a girl went thru the plant several times daily distributing chewing gum to the personnel, but this practice had to be discontinued when it became impossible to secure a steady supply of gum but coffee and doughnuts are served to the day shift at noon and to the night force at midnight.

Remembers His Workers with 2,000 Baskets of Florida Fruit.

Haffa [most of the employes call him Titus] took time off recently for a short vacation in Florida. That didn't mean, however, that he was forgetting either the plant or the folks who were keeping it operating at a pace which had earned the army-navy E for production. As proof of this fact, each of the 2,000 employes of the Haber plant and two associated industries, Fractional Motors and the Malz Manufacturing company, received a bushel basket of citrus fruit and other delicacies.

Worker's Wife Wins $500 Bond for Naming Plant's Paper.

The plant itself has been rebuilt and modernized in the last year, all alterations being made while production constantly was being stepped up. Haffa has had the establishment for 20 years and the present force is more than three times as large as it was three years ago. As for the product, it is the proud boast of the Haber workers that 95 per cent of the American planes in the air all over the world these days as well as tanks and other machines, carry in some of their most vital parts products of the busy shops on North av. The plant has passed the half million mark in producing poppet valves for use in war planes.

Recently it was decided that the plant should take over a couple of pages in two community papers as its house organ and a contest to select a suitable name was planned. To make it really worthwhile to do a little brain racking, Haffa offered a $500 war bond as first prize, with 20 consolation awards of $25 bonds. The contest was not restricted to plant employes, all residents in the community around the works being eligible. The name chosen was "The Voice of Haber," submitted by Mrs. H. L. Pullman, 543 Fullerton av., whose husband is employed at the plant.

Thordarson Teams Win Titles in Basketball and Bowling.

Thordarson Electric company athletic teams won major titles in two branches of industrial athletics last week. The basketball quintet won the championship in the Y.M.C.A. city-wide industrial basketball tournament Wednesday, beating Illinois Tool Works, 46 to 41, at Lincoln-Belmont Y. The night before, the Thordarson Flashtrons had sewed up the top spot in the Division St. Y.M.C.A. industrial bowling league. The Flashtrons were able to win only one of three games from Milwaukee Av. National Bank, but that one was all they needed to clinch the title for the season which ends this week. In compiling the averages for the previous week, league officials made an error and dropped Les Lesser of Hammond Instrument down to second place in the Division Y league individual standings, when he should have been first with a 177 average, a spot he still holds.

The J. P. Seeburg company recently put on its second employe talent show before a capacity crowd in Lane Tech auditorium . . . Frank L. Haas, director of recreation for Bell & Howell, is a former Purdue university basketball star . . . And Clarence Heuel, the president of the Booster club at the Milwaukee railroad offices at Fullerton and Southport avs., is the same Fat Heuel who during the summer months is one of the leading softball pitchers in the Chicago area.

Paul Calvert held the Reds hitless until Eric Tipton singled with one away in the fifth. The Indians, in their half of the same frame, put one run across on a walk to Mike Rocco, and singles to Roy Cullenbine and Ken Keltner. In the seventh the Tribe took advantage of a three base muff by Gee Walker of Rocco's fly and Paul O'Dea's single to add another run.

the P. K. Wrigley colors. The Cubs did a good job of loading up with talent in a period of scarcity but unfortunately weren't completely successful.

Dodgers, Pirates Hit Hard.

Manager Jim Wilson is going to have his troubles because in the search for fellows either discharged from service or not accepted because of physical faults, not enough of them possessed pitching skill. The Cubs undoubtedly conducted their search on the basis of Claude Passeau, the ace, being available but he is still clinging to his Mississippi plantation.

Both the Brooklyn Dodgers and Pittsburgh Pirates are not much better off than the Cubs, altho there is reason to think that in one way or another they will fill up the first division along with the Cards and Reds. That leaves the Cubs with the prospects of another fifth place conclusion but this arrangement might be changed even as high as first place should the Cubs get the benefit of the Passeau pitching arm.

The remainder of the league—Boston, Giants, and Phillies—will have to do what they can, but is is fairly logical to presume the last named will try to resume its defense of eighth place. All of the above should make them look something like this at the finish:

St. Louis, Cincinnati, Brooklyn, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Boston, New York, Philadelphia.

FISHERMEN HAVE ONE MORE DAY TO ENTER TOURNEY

BY BOB BECKER.

It's getting near the last call for entries in the annual casting tournament sponsored by the Tribune sports department at the International Sportsmen's show April 22-30. Tomorrow is the last day for filing entries.

The first event on the tournament program will be held next Saturday when the International Sportsmen's show opens in the Arena. From that day thru April 30, the final day of the exposition, there will be a contest for rod and reel enthusiasts every day with this newspaper giving prizes to the winners of the various events.

Chance for Fly Casters.

Fly casters are going to take part in this year's tournament along with fishermen using their regular fishing equipment, club casters, boys and girls, and women. The men and women who like to toss bass bugs to catch their fish and those who have mastered the art of dropping a dry fly where they want it, will be called to the casting pool Sunday afternoon, April 30, the last day of the show, for competition. Starting at 1:15 p. m. the bass bug casters are scheduled to compete. As soon as this event is finished the dry fly contestants will run off their competition. A prize will be awarded to the winner of each of these contests. Both men and women are eligible to enter these two events.

The entry blank for the casting tournament, which is printed elsewhere on this page should be clipped, filled out, and mailed to the Casting Editor by contestants in all of the tournament events. When acknowledgment is made of the entry a program of the tournament will be mailed to each entrant.

Tourney Closes April 30.

Club casters are going to compete against each other April 22, 23, and 24. Fishermen then will go into action for three evenings to decide the finalists. Then will come the ladies' casting contest on Friday, April 28, the boys and girls and the fisherman's finals on Saturday, with the tournament closing April 30.

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN.

In commemoration of Chicago's 100th year of thorobred racing, Arlington-Washington Parks' nationally important program for 1944 will be a centennial observance, Executive Director Benjamin F. Lindheimer said yesterday.

Centennial medals are to be presented to winning owners, trainers, and jockeys in the 24 stake races that will be run during the coördinated 70 day meeting from June 19 thru Sept. 7. It includes a week of charity racing [July 3 thru 7] sponsored by The Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., and highlighted by the famous $50,000 added Stars and Stripes handicap on July 4.

THEY DO A GOOD JOB OF RAISING HORSES IN ILLINOIS

[TRIBUNE Photos.]

There are several farms in the Chicago area for the breeding and care of thorobred race horses, one of which, the Lexington Fields near Palatine, has been particularly active during the winter and now is preparing to participate in the 163 day Chicago racing season which opens April 29 at Sportsman's Park. These pictures were taken during the course of a tour of the Palatine layout under the guidance of its owner, M. A. Kern (upper right), a Chicago insurance man. A bunch of brood mares (upper left) is being transferred from one pasture to another. Lower left is Rita J., once a good racing mare, and her 3 week old son out for a bit of exercise. The youngster's daddy is Chieck Rama, a French stakes winner imported by George Widener. Chieck Rama won 66 races on French tracks. Then there's the baby of the farm (lower right), just 10 days old, whose sire also is Chieck Rama and whose mother is Manila, a winning American racing mare.

BREEZING ALONG

ROBERT PERMANE is Broadway's newest star . . . New York fans have gone a mile a minute for the sensational jockey who has fans still talking about his unparallelled achievement of riding 18 winners in four days . . . Jamaica betters have thrown away their dope sheets and bet their scratch on whatever horse he rides. . . . And they're doing all right, too. A $2 straight bet on all of Permane's mounts during the first four days of the New York meeting shows a profit of $35.10. . . . A former vaudeville trouper Permane explained his success of riding five winners on three consecutive days at Tropical Park last week by saying "I was lucky, very lucky."

Roman Sox Takes Purse at Keeneland

Louisville, Ky., April 15 (AP).—Roman Sox of Brolite stables produced a mild upset in the $5,000 added Phoenix handicap on the opening day of Keeneland's race meeting here by defeating Dixiana's odds-on favorite, Amber Light, before a crowd of 16,000.

C. U. Yaeger's Corona Corona was the show horse and Alfred Parker's Derby hopeful, By Jimminy, making its first appearance of the season finished fifth in the field of seven.

Vikings Face Battle from Spartas Today

BY OFFSIDE.

The Vikings, who are awaiting a definite date for their National Open Western division soccer cup title game with the Morgan [Pa.] Strassers, face a stiff warmup test this afternoon at 2:30 p. m. in Sparta stadium when they clash with the Spartas in the feature game of the major division.

The Spartas have been looking forward to another meeting with the Vikings ever since their defeat in the State Peel cup finals. They have brought Frank Keberle, former Olympia star, out of retirement to strengthen the middle line and George Hamous, home on furlough from the army, will also be in the lineup.

Hope to End Streak.

With Joe Silvosky as goalie and Tom Scott and Laddie Mrnka as full backs, the Spartas have hopes of snapping the 23 game undefeated streak of the Vikings.

The league champions, who are still without the services of Winger Bill List, plan one change in the starting lineup which finds Jocke Johanasen returning to his position in the nets.

Use Same Lineup.

The Vikings will use the same lineup, with the exception of Johanasen, as that which beat the Milwaukee Falks a week ago in the Western Open semi-finals with their attack built on the scoring of Jimmy McDermott, a star of the Spartas in past years.

The Major league match between the Linneas and Schwabens at 59th and Paulina sts. headlines the remainder of the day's schedule. The Schwabens, who are in first place due to having played and won more games than the Vikings, have to sweep all remaining league contests to hold their lead.

The Workers and Hakoah-Centers clash in a first division game in Winnemac park stadium with first place at stake and a capacity crowd is expected to attend.

SAN FRANCISCAN BECOMES NEW HEAD OF A. B. C.

Elmer W. Irwin of San Francisco was elevated from the first vice presidency to the presidency of the American Bowling congress as the executive directors concluded their two day meeting yesterday in the Sherman hotel.

Elmer W. Irwin.

Irwin moved up as a result of the resignation of Martin G. Unmacht of Dubuque, Ia., president for the last two years who was to have held office until the next national meeting of the congress. Unmacht resigned because of the press of personal business.

National meetings of the A. B. C. were suspended until after the war following the last tournament and meeting in 1942 and all officers were to have held their posts until the next meeting.

John Canelli Advanced.

John Canelli of Toledo, legal counsel for the A. B. C., was elected to the eighth vice presidency to fill the vacancy caused by the other seven vice presidents moving up.

Terms of Elmer H. Baumgarten of Milwaukee, secretary, and Charles Cushing of Peoria, treasurer, expire in 1946.

The directors approved the proposed opening of an eastern divisional office of the A. B. C. in New York City, but held in abeyance action on a similar proposal for a west coast office. No date was set for the opening of the eastern office.

Vice Presidents Move Up.

The officials heard addresses by Dr. Floyd Eastwood, professor of industrial recreation at Purdue university, and Lee McCullough, regional representative of the office of civilian requirements.

The other vice presidents, each of whom was advanced, were: Gerhard S. Germann, Whitesboro, N. Y., first vice president; William N. Blau, Madison, Wis., second; John O. Martino, Syracuse, N. Y., third; Lester C. Baston, Tulsa, Okla., fourth; John Ackerman, Cleveland, fifth; Carl M. Haslanger, South Bend, sixth, and John L. Sullivan, Louisville, Ky., seventh.

ENGLAND GETS COINS FROM U. S. IN LEND-LEASE

Spending by Yanks Strains Supply.

BY PHILIP WARDEN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 15.—Free spending American soldiers overseas have so strained the currency supplies of Britain and many of the other countries where they are stationed that the United States is lend-leasing these nations silver and silver coins to replenish their supplies.

The foreign economic administration said today more than 100 million ounces of silver have been lend-leased. Recipients of lend-lease silver and American made coins are the United Kingdom, India, the Netherlands, Saudi Arabia, and Australia.

Yanks Paid Native Cash.

The American soldiers are paid in the currencies of the countries in which they are stationed. The soldiers now in Britain, for example, are paid in pounds, shillings, and pence. The man power and metal shortages caught Britain without sufficient coins to meet its own requirements as well as those of hundreds of thousands of Americans. The United States went to its rescue.

Dies were cast and the United States mints started turning out British coins. Under existing agreements, the FEA reported, the silver will be returned to the United States ounce for ounce after the war. Meanwhile the United States has been buying millions of dollars of British currency to meet the [illegible] pay roll for the men in [illegible], and the British in turn are [illegible] the money obtained thru the sale of currency to the United States and using it to buy American gold.

The director of the San Francisco mint announced the issue of 30 million coins for the Australian government which had provided the metal for stamping.

Industry Also Borrows.

Treasury spokesmen said that as of April 6, the United States government owned 2 billion 642 million ounces of silver. In recent months it has lend-leased American industry 899,796,564 ounces. Like the silver going to the foreign governments, this silver must be returned ounce for ounce to the treasury after the war. It is being used in solder, brazing alloys, engine bearings for war planes, and in other products.

The treasury said that in the last several months it has sold outright to industry 32 million ounces. The value of the silver varies. The treasury now pays 71.11 cents per ounce for newly mined silver. Monetary stocks of silver of the treasury are valued at more than 4 billion dollars.

Washington, D. C., April 15 (AP).—The department of commerce estimated tonight that national income last year was 147 billion, 900 million dollars. This was 22 per cent larger than in 1942, more than double that in 1939 and nearly four times the depression low of 40 billions in 1932.

The department reported that four-fifths of the 26 billion, 300 million increase over 1942 occurred in three branches of income—industrial wages and salaries, federal payrolls, including those of the military services, and net income of farmers. The agency said the growth of national income slowed in the last quarter of 1943 with "the approach to full economic mobilization."

Private industry paid 80 billion of total wages and salaries of 102 billion, an increase of more than 20 billion over 1942. A 27 per cent jump in farm income pushed that figure to an unprecedented 12 billion, 300 million. On limited data, corporate profits rising 7 per cent to a record 8 billion, 900 million were indicated, the agency said.

Stored Meat, Lard Supplies Set New High

Stocks of meat and lard in cold storage on April 1 set a record high despite heavier withdrawals for consumption under lowered ration values, the war food administration reported yesterday.

Meat and lard holdings aggregated 1,674,144,000 pounds to surpass the previous record holdings of 1,590,665,000 on Feb. 1, 1919. Holdings on March 1 this year were 1,586,530,000 pounds.

Beef Stocks Increase Most.

The biggest percentage increase was in beef, which totaled 296,380,000 pounds, compared with 97,736,000 a year earlier and 279,654,000 on March 1. Supplies of pork amounted to 784,651,000 pounds, against 591,597,400 a year ago and 792,113,000 a month earlier. Lard holdings totaled 400,999,000 pounds, compared with 120,620,000 a year ago and 340,644,000 on March 1.

The WFA said there was a heavier than normal withdrawal of frozen fruits and vegetables and creamery butter during March. Point values on frozen fruits and vegetables have been removed for April to encourage consumption so storage facilities will be made available for this year's production.

Holdings of Other Items.

Other holdings on April 1 and a year and month earlier were: Frozen fruits, 161,221,000 pounds, 124,392,000, and 186,067,000; frozen vegetables, 129,767,000, 70,478,000, and 153,820,000; butter, 82,038,000, 16,676,000, and 17,560,000; cheese, 149,942,000, 77,615,000, and 171,956,000; shell eggs, 4,416,000 cases, 3,181,000, and 2,008,000, and frozen poultry, 168,036,000 pounds, 58,079,000, and 220,863,000.

DANLY COMPANY WAGE INCREASE REFUSED BY WLB

The regional war labor board yesterday denied a wage increase, but granted maintenance of membership and checkoff of dues in ruling on numerous issues involved in a dispute at the Danly Machine Specialties company, 2130 S. Other decisions included:

Carnegie-Illinois Steel company, Gary, and United Steel Workers of America, CIO, 647 workers involved. Incentive plan approved.

S. Buchsbaum & Co., 1737 S. Michigan av., and International Ladies Handbag, Pocketbook, Belt and Novelty Workers' union, local 44, AFL, 750 workers involved. Vacation and holiday pay plan partially approved.

Edwin I. Guthman & Co., 15 S. Throop st., no union involved, 324 workers affected. New rate ranges approved.

National Tea company, 1000 Crosby st., no union involved, 226 workers affected. New wage rates for office workers.

GLENMORE BUYS DISTILLERY FOR ABOUT 5 MILLION

Louisville, Ky., April 15 (AP).—Taylor and Williams Distilleries and other assets of the Taylor and Williams interests have been sold to the Glenmore Distilleries company for a price estimated between 5 and 6 million dollars by Menefee Wirgman, president of the Fidelity & Columbia Trust company.

The trust company represents the J. B. Dant estate, owner of Taylor and Williams, a holding concern having 51 per cent of the stock of the Taylor and Williams Distilleries.

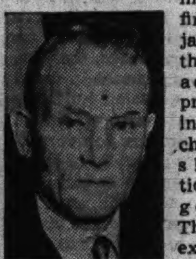
WSA SLASHES FEDERAL SHIP CHARTER RATE

Seeks to Hold Down Earnings, Values.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 15.—The American merchant marine was measured for a financial straitjacket today as the war shipping administration prepared to put into effect new charter rates for ships requisitioned by the government. These rates were expected to cut steamship company earnings to less than one-third of pre-war levels.



Rear Adm. Land.

The new rates, which will take effect April 20, provide for a basic bareboat charter rate of $1.25 per deadweight ton per month for freighters. Bareboat charters are those under which the owner receives a fee for the use of his vessel, with all operating expenses, including crew hire, paid by the government.

Time Rates Trimmed.

Time charter rates, under which the ship owner is compensated not only for the use of his vessel but for operating expenses, will be cut to the bareboat charter rate plus a basic $1.425 per deadweight ton per month.

At the same time, the WSA will set the purchase value for older freighters at a basic level of $56.25 per deadweight ton, compared with the present $65.

The new bareboat and time charter rates will be set 5 to 10 per cent lower than existing rates, WSA officials said. They will bring steamship company earnings for 1944 to a point even lower than the 32 million dollars earned by 28 of the largest companies after taxes in 1943, it was estimated. The 1943 figure was only 28 per cent of the 1941 earnings of 114 million dollars of the same companies.

Rates Constantly Whittled.

Rates and values for shipping services have been constantly whittled down by the maritime commission and WSA to avoid inflation in ship values and to keep earnings from skyrocketing, WSA officials asserted.

"It has been the policy of the maritime commission and the WSA to reduce rates and values of shipping services," Rear Adm. Land, WSA administrator, said in announcing the new rates. "As a result of the measures taken, earnings of steamship companies have been reduced by approximately 66⅔ per cent since we became involved in the war.

"During this period, while steamship company earnings were being reduced, corporate earnings generally have increased over 40 per cent and the earnings of transportation agencies, such as railroads, have increased more than 100 per cent."

Moves Against Devaluation.

A congressional move to maintain values of government owned ships after the war, and to prevent foreign ship owners from picking up bargains in American freighters, has been started by Rep. Bland [D., Va.], chairman of the house merchant marine committee. He recently introduced a bill providing that in determining sale prices depreciation shall be figured at not more than 2½ per cent per year and that not more than 35 per cent shall be allowed for the cost of construction in the United States, compared with the cost of foreign construction.

The new WSA charter rates are based on sliding scales, according to the age of the ship, its tonnage, and its speed. The minimum rates will be increased if ship owners have installed special war time safety equipment. Decreases will be made if the ships taken over are in substandard condition.

WSA officials admitted that some ship owners had objected to the rates decreed by the WSA and said they expected court litigation in some cases. WSA spokesmen said, however, that the rates were based on recommendations made by the advisory board on just compensation, appointed last October by President Roosevelt and headed by Federal Judge Learned Hand of New York.

Motor Chiefs Split on Peace Shift Policies

Washington, D. C., April 15 (AP).—When the automobile industry's first conference on reconversion with war production board officials opens Monday, the manufacturers will lack agreement among themselves on one major issue and with WPB Chairman Nelson on another.

Virtually to a man, the industry's leaders will enter the two day session convinced that all companies should resume passenger car production simultaneously. Nelson, who will conduct the session of 18 executives, has said this is a "physical impossibility," because some companies are deeper in war work than others and some contracts will be canceled before others.

Split on Early Output.

Within the industry, the split is between the big firms and the smaller ones. Larger companies want unrestricted production from the start. Smaller companies believe WPB should regulate early production so that each producer makes approximately the same proportion of total output as he made before the industry went into war work.

The final plan will be scrutinized by Nelson's new "advisory committee on civilian policy" before WPB sets the final reconversion pattern.

Expect Early Retooling.

Manufacturers expect to be granted an early start on retooling for peace time cars even tho the tools must be laid aside until victory is in sight. The proposal has been made that the industry start placing orders for tools soon and thus get set for quick transition. This also would help the machine tool industry meet declining demand.

The question of what present controls must be removed before production can be resumed also will be discussed. The curbs on automobile makers, other than the outright ban on civilian passenger car production, number several thousand.

CORN SHORTAGE HELD THREAT TO DRUG SUPPLIES

Curtailment of production of penicillin, sulfa drugs, surgical dressings, adhesives, vitamins, and other products vital to the war is threatened by a shortage of corn for the drug industry, the war food administration said yesterday in urging farmers to help relieve the situation.

Elevator receipts of corn have dropped from 10 million bushels a week in January to 2½ millions in late March, the WFA said. Only about 10 per cent of the annual crop is going into commercial uses, it asserted.

Asking formers to respond to the need for corn, the midwest regional office of the WFA has begun a campaign thru its field men to contact the farmers to get them to release their stocks.

INJUNCTION SOUGHT TO BAR ARMY RULE OF KEN-RAD PLANTS

Owensboro, Ky., April 15 (AP).—Ken-Rad Tube and Lamp corporation, whose two Owensboro plants were placed under army control by order of President Roosevelt yesterday, filed suit in federal court at Louisville today asking an injunction to restrain the army from operating the plants.

Col. Carroll Badeau, commander of the Lexington signal depot, who was assigned by the war department to direct operations at the plants, said he had been told by Roy Burlew, company president, that the Ken-Rad management had "not receded from its position," in refusing to comply with a war labor board order for a wage increase to 3,200 production and maintenance-workers.

BELL SYSTEM PHONE SERVICE APPLICATION BACKLOG IS 1 MILLION

Applications for telephone service which cannot be filled immediately because of lack of facilities have increased to more than 1 million for the Bell system as a whole, Walter S. Gifford, president of the American Telephone and Telegraph company, reported to stockholders yesterday. All needs for service essential to war activities are being met promptly, he said.

Walter S. Gifford.

The increase in system telephones in service during the quarter ended March 31 was only 47,000, compared with 455,000 a year ago.

The parent company's profit for the March quarter was $40,464,000, equal to $2.14 a share, compared with $42,691,678, or $2.28 a share, a year earlier. In the 12 months ended March 31 net income was below the $9 dividend requirements, amounting to $8.86 a share, against $8.67 in the preceding 12 months. The company's own operating income was lower, but dividend income increased.

WAGES RISE BIG, BUT 'TAKE HOME' GAIN IS SMALL

The average factory worker's weekly wages have increased $18.22 since January, 1941, but his "take-home" wage has gone up only $5.65 a week, John B. Parrish, regional director of the department of labor's bureau of labor statistics, said yesterday.

"The factory worker who earned $26.64 a week in January, 1941, had $26.37 to spend for current living," Parrish said. "However, out of the $44.86 he earned in October, 1943, we must allow for the purchase of war bonds, taxes, and the 23.4 per cent in the cost of living. This leaves him only $32.02 in 'take-home' wages."

PLEDGES TO BAR STRIKE LEADERS FROM FACTORY

Akron, O., April 15 (AP).—J. P. Seiberling, president of Seiberling Rubber company, told the company's 2,000 workers in a letter today that "so long as the war lasts any Seiberling employe who leads a strike, or incites others to strike in our plant, will not be permitted to re-enter or resume work for Seiberling."

Production of military truck tires recently was halted for 2½ days by a work stoppage. Two of the men involved were dismissed by the company and expelled from Local 18 of the CIO-United Rubber Workers of America.

Chicago Bank Clearings Climb to 533 Millions

Chicago bank clearings last week totaled 533 million dollars, compared with $412,800,000 in the preceding week and $521,800,000 a year ago, the Chicago Clearing House association reported yesterday. The figures:

STOCK MARKET PRICES HIGHER; TRADING SLOW

Volume at New Low Since October.

New York, April 15 (AP).—Timid bidding aided scattered steels, motors, rails, and specialties in today's stock market and prices generally were higher.

A little demand cropped up in the two hour session on the belief that drying up of selling indicated the technical reaction had about run its course and that apprehension over market instability that could accompany the allied invasion possibly had been overdone.

The Associated Press 60 stock average was up 0.1. The carrier composite managed to hold a gain of 0.2 despite sizable profit taking in this group during the preceding three sessions. Turnover was the smallest since last October, with volume at 241,860 shares compared with 364,900 last Saturday.

List of Prominent Gainers.

Higher were Pennsylvania Coal and Coke, which touched a 1944 peak; Engineers Public Service, up ⅜ after SEC approval of the company's plan to retire 4 million dollars of preferred stock; Southern Pacific, Chesapeake and Ohio, United States Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, United States Rubber, Sears-Roebuck, International Harvester, Allied Chemical, and General Electric.

On the offside were Great Northern, Western Union A, Standard Oil [New Jersey], Goodrich, Montgomery Ward, Anaconda, American Can, Caterpillar Tractor, Boeing, and Consolidated Edison.

RAIL BONDS CLIMB.

New York, April 15 (AP).—Brisk buying in some sections of the rail list boosted the Associated Press carrier average to a new seven year peak in today's bond market. The composite rose 0.3 to 87.7.

Trading was limited in industrial and utility liens, with industrials down slightly on average and utilities 0.1 higher on the basis of the Associated Press average. Price changes were irregular in the foreign department and United States government issues were steady.

Transactions totaled $5,249,700 against $4,860,850 a week earlier.

CHICAGO STOCKS GAIN.

Prices were stronger in quiet trading on the Chicago Stock exchange yesterday. Peter Fox Brewing advanced 8 points to a record high of 72, compared with a 1943 low of 15. Libby, McNeill & Libby and Peabody Coal B, the volume leaders, made slight gains.

SEEDING DELAYS BOLSTER OATS; WHEAT, RYE OFF

Wet weather, which further delayed seeding of oats, gave a firm undertone to that grain yesterday on the Chicago Board of Trade, but wheat and rye turned easy. Closing prices in oats were unchanged to ¼ cent a bushel higher, the latter on July. Wheat lost ¼ to ½ cent and rye was down ⅛ to ¾ cent. Barley lost ⅜ to ⅞ cent. May wheat, oats, and barley held at ceiling prices.

Commission houses with southwestern connections were aggressive sellers of wheat futures. Altho short covering caused a rally at one time, closing sales were near the bottom. Net losses for the week were 2¼ to 2⅞ cents with prices the lowest in about a month.

National Bank Deposits Rise; Loans Lower

Deposits in Chicago's national banks on April 13 were about 125 million dollars higher than the total on Dec. 31, 1943, indicating that funds taken out for the April 1 tax date have been largely redeposited, it was disclosed yesterday. Responding to a call from the controler of the currency for statements as to condition on April 13 the national banks reported total deposits of $5,267,977,000, compared with $5,142,126,000 on Dec. 31, 1943.

The state banks reported their condition as of March 30 in a call earlier this month.

Deposits Exceed 6½ Billion.

Total deposits for both state and national banks in Chicago were above 6½ billion dollars.

Savings deposits in the national banks totaled $549,138,000 on April 13, compared with $521,719,000 on Dec. 31, 1943. Combined national and state bank savings deposits were more than 815 millions.

Loans and discounts of the national banks decreased to $893,873,000 from $944,667,000 on Dec. 31.

Holdings of government securities by the national banks totaled $3,199,815,000 and holdings of all Chicago banks totaled more than 3 billion 905 millions.

Loans, Total Deposits Shrink.

Among the large downtown banks the Continental Illinois National Bank and Trust company reported decreases in loans and total deposits. Total deposits were $2,151,078 on April 13, compared with $2,173,956,000 last Dec. 31.

The First National bank reported gains in loans and total deposits. The City National Bank and Trust company reported loans were lower, but total deposits increased. The American National Bank and Trust company showed gains in loans and total deposits. All four of the big downtown national banks showed gains in savings deposits and in holdings of government securities.

HINT U.S. BACKS CURB ON WORLD TRADE CONTROL

Plea Is Advanced in Lend-Lease Talks.

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, April 15.—Negotiations to implement the agreement determining benefits to be provided the United States for assistance given Great Britain under lend-lease have been going on for some time and "it may be reasonably supposed that conclusions are beginning to emerge and an agreement is taking shape," the Weekly Economist reports.

Under the agreement, terms of the settlement "shall not burden commerce between the two nations, but promote mutually advantageous economic relations between them and the betterment of world-wide economic relations."

Ask Ban on Discrimination.

Also specified are efforts to eliminate discrimination in international commerce and to reduce tariffs and other trade barriers. "Like minded" nations will be invited to join a drive to attain the economic objectives of the Atlantic Charter.

The United States apparently is urging as little government interference with trade as possible and that all countries be treated exactly alike. Because the United States contends the dominions are separate countries, the agreement is expected to limit, if not eliminate, imperial preferences.

The Economist predicted: "It probably will be made clear that the most mortal of all commercial sins is for a country to use its bulk purchases as a means of obtaining favored treatments for its goods in selling to a country. In short, and to be blunt, Great Britain will be expected to abstain from any use of its importing power to expand its exports."

Tariff Concessions Expected.

The United States, it is believed, will make concessions in tariff reductions. British observers said that unless the United States brings her balance of payment into reasonable equilibrium, she actually will discriminate against purchases from America, because if the supply of dollars is below world demand, it will be difficult to pay for American exports.

The Economist believed the "British government is contemplating the acceptance of three-quarters of the American theses both on currency and commercial policy."

The proposal to drop imperial preferences is said to be unwelcome to all the dominions except Canada and empire free traders such as the Beaverbrook press are not expected to like it either. The National Farmers' union is not pleased by limitation of the right to impose quotas and the Federation of British Industries will not like the restriction on tariff making power. Laborites may object to the prohibition on bulk purchasing.

A SOLUTION FOR POST WAR MARKETING

Post war operation may be a serious problem to many manufacturers who have expanded their production facilities beyond their normal marketing or who are now making products that are foreign in terms of distribution for civilian use to those they made in prewar days. To manufacturers of this type we offer a definite solution to their marketing problem provided their products come within the fields we serve and that they represent more than a $500,0000 annual volume.

We are national distributors of small mechanical devices and electrical and electronic components which are sold on an engineering service basis. Our headquarters are in New York but we maintain sales engineering offices in all large industrial centers and are represented in Europe, Africa and South America. We are in a position to take on national, foreign or restricted territorial distribution. Our engineering development service is available to those we represent.

Our commissions or fees are on the side of prudence. We do not require financing and will exchange financial statements and references with interested parties. We have been in business 15 years and are now doing an annual business in excess of $10,000,000. In distributing this large volume of products for our clients we have established sales contacts and a reputation for engineering service that should be of great value to others provided of course they are not competitive with our present clients.

We have built an engineering development, service and distributing organization while you have built one for efficient manufacturing. Maybe the twain can meet for our mutual profits. Why not get in contact with each other? Your response to this advertisement will be held strictly confidential. Address us in care of our advertising agency, E. M. Freystadt Associates, Inc., 570 Lexington Ave., New York.

Invasion Market Watch Your Step

Sooner or later a day will arrive when the Dow Jones news ticker and all the radios of the world will carry a flash that the invasion or rather the invasions have begun. How will you, and the rest of the investing community, behave?

Sellers Only?

1. Will you shout Hurrah and telephone your broker to buy something which you have of late been hesitating to buy?
2. Or will you ring up and cancel any buying limits you may have had in, just below the market?
3. Or will you take half profits, or full profits, on anything that may be showing profits—regardless of whether you have held it six months?
4. And will you in any case—particularly if there has been a recent sharp rise—lighten your commitments and get partially into cash for the sake of "security"?

Which Way Market Cat?

Alternatively will you, and the public, argue that the expected news which has been holding back the market for months is "now out" . . . and that therefore "now" is the time to buy.

These are the problems confronting investors today. Major Angas analyzes them—and gives his own specific views, with a definite policy—in Digest 130, just off Press. Price $1 □

FEDERAL RULES FORCING SALES OF LIGHT HOGS

Conservation of Grains Is Sought.

BY ARNOLD ERICKSON.

The government's strict control of pork and hog prices, coupled with the grain shortage, is forcing farmers to dispose of hogs at much lighter weights than in 1943. This program is advocated this year by the war food administration to conserve decreasing grain stocks on farms. In the preceding three years farmers were told to make hogs heavier than ever before.

The department of agriculture disclosed yesterday that hogs received at the seven largest markets are averaging 13 pounds lighter than in April last year, the various centers reporting average decreases of 3 to 34 pounds. Farmers are selling hogs in the largest volume in the country's history. Altho hogs on farms Jan. 1 totalled 13.5 per cent more than a year ago, packers under federal inspection in the first quarter of 1944 butchered 55 per cent more than in the first three months of 1943.

Corn Disappears Rapidly.

Corn, the principal hog feed, has been disappearing at the rate of almost 295 million bushels a month since Jan. 1, the fastest rate for the first quarter of any year on record. Unless the rate of disappearance is checked farmers will be completely out of this grain within four months, two months before the 1944 harvest starts. On April 1 farm stocks of corn were down to 1,113,549,000 bushels, compared with 1,996,100,000 on Jan. 1 and 1,374,748,000 a year ago. Holdings were the lowest for April 1 since 1938, altho the number of hogs on farms is above normal for April.

Farmers in some districts are being forced to sell hogs and pigs far below the 200 pound weight, the lightest eligible for the floor price supported by WFA. Some hog raisers say they are "carrying" light hogs on limited feeding of other grains such as oats, wheat, and rye until spring pasture is available.

Farmers Turn to Wheat.

More hog raisers are using wheat for feed than ever before and the drain on wheat stocks has been heavy. On April 1 farmers had 217,684,000 bushels of this grain, compared with 379,121,000 Jan. 1 and 325,387,000 a year ago. Oats stocks shrank from 709,170,000 bushels Jan. 1 to 418,255,000 April 1. Some feeders are attempting to "stretch" diminishing stocks by light feeding until the late summer harvest of small grain, and as a result the quality of pork marketed may deteriorate soon.

RESEARCH AID.

The research burden of the student of money, banking, and government finance is immeasurably lightened by a new book, "Banking and Monetary Statistics," published by the board of governors of the federal reserve system.

The 979 page book was published to make available in one volume, and on a uniform basis, statistics on banking, monetary, and other financial developments, the board explained.

The book contains data on money rates, market prices for securities, production and movement of gold, treasury finances, international financial developments, and extensive statistics on the condition and operation of banks, including earnings, suspensions, debits, and the composition of assets.

Altho most of the statistics cover the period since 1914 when the federal reserve system was established, some go back much further. Data on national banks, for example, begin with 1863, while figures on currency in circulation start with 1860, bank suspensions in 1892, and data on money rates and securities, 1890 and 1900. All of the series end with December, 1941, but later data for most of them are contained in the regular monthly federal reserve bulletins.

Sources of the statistics are the federal reserve system, the treasury department, the controler of the currency, the Federal Deposit Insurance corporation, state banking authorities, and other public and private agencies.

The banking figures for the past and present are described by E. A. Goldenweiser, director of the reserve board's division of research and statistics, as a "treasure trove for the student of financial history." These statistics, together with their projections into the future, are the rock on which credit policy must rest, he adds.

The price is $1.50.

HOUSE CHANGES SOUGHT FOR 'G. I. BILL OF RIGHTS'

Washington, D. C., April 15 (AP).—The prospect developed today of a house overhauling of the senate passed "G. I. Bill of Rights" to tighten up provisions for unemployment compensation.

Both Chairman May [D., Ky.] of the military committee and Chairman Rankin [D., Miss.] of the veterans' committee said in statements they believed safeguards should be written into the bill to prevent what Rankin said "Might be encouragement thru the liberal unemployment compensation provisions, of idleness."

The measure, passed unanimously by the senate before the Easter recess, is pending before Rankin's committee. Both Rankin and May urged speedy action on it.

Provides Long Term Payments.

The senate bill provides for unemployment compensation payments ranging from $15 a week for single men to $25 a week for veterans with three or more children for a maximum of 52 weeks during the first two years after final payment of mustering out compensation.

"This provision, which I shall seek to change, may tend to encourage idleness among some veterans," Rankin said. "Many men may be tempted to remain idle for the entire 52 weeks because of the compensation guarantee in the senate bill. To take care of those men who will not be able quickly to get back to work, I believe we should extend their service pay for perhaps three months, which, coupled with mustering-out payments already provided for, should be adequate for most cases."

See Offset for Bonus.

The two committee heads agreed, however, that a sound veterans' program is contained in the senate measure, provided "proper changes are made."

"If this legislation is drafted properly, it should offset any post-war demands for adjusted compensation, or a bonus," May said. "It provides for government financed hospitalization, education and job finding facilities, in addition to unemployment compensation and loans for the purchase of homes, farms or small business."

Rankin said he did not believe there would be a demand for a bonus "if we handle this legislation properly."

The estimated that the senate bill would cost in the neighborhood of $4,000,000,000 as it now stands.

SKULL 'WINDOW' YIELDS SECRETS OF BRAIN'S WORK

Study Held Vital in Aviation Medicine.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., April 15.—Mysteries of the brain, heretofore unknown, are being unfolded rapidly thru an unusual experiment at the research institute and neurological service of the national medical center of Bethesda, Md., according to a report by four naval medical officers in the Journal of Neurosurgery.

They describe successful substitution of a permanent cap of transparent plastic, called lucite, for the bony covering of the brain in rhesus monkeys. A section of the skull is removed and the area is covered by the plastic window, which is attached by means of four screws.

The brain action then is studied under all kinds of conditions, both with magnifying glasses and thru use of high speed movies.

Effects of Shock Studied.

What the scientists are learning promises to be of inestimable value in many fields of military medicine—perhaps none more so than that of aviation, where the problem of pilot blackout in dives and at high altitude has been a serious impediment to making the most efficient use of the airplane as a weapon, according to military surgeons.

Effects of oxygen insufficiency, drugs, and shock are among those included in these studies.

The technique for replacing permanently the convex portion of the skull has been so perfected that reports from the research laboratories are that most of the monkeys appear unconcerned about the windows. A few pick at the transparent plate, but there has been "no disturbance suggestive of any major cerebral damage," and repeated observations of the animals disclose no behavior problems as a result of their new head covering.

Earlier Windows Temporary.

The idea of employing a window in the brain is not new, according to the naval doctors, as observations of this kind have been reported periodically since 1811. In earlier investigations, however, the windows usually were devised for temporary replacement and were small.

Interest in direct observation of intracranial phenomena resulting from head injuries led to the attempt to devise a cranial window large enough to permit study of both sides of the brain simultaneously, and the permanent cap was the result.

U. S. O. Plans to Amuse U. S. Forces in Brazil

Demand of American service men stationed in Brazil for more and better entertainment will be answered by a United Service Organizations "Flying Hostess' service, and a "U.S.O. Showboat on the Amazon," Dr. Royal H. Burpee, program director of U.S.O. overseas operation, announced yesterday. These diversions will be augmented with troupes of Brazilian professional and amateur entertainers.

Stand Up and Sing

Marjorie Lawrence, soprano opera star who will sing the title role in the Metropolitan Opera's opening performance of "Tristan and Isolde" Monday evening in the Civic Opera House, arrived in Chicago yesterday morning. She was met at the La Salle street station by Sgt. Bob Penprase and Sgt. Jack Burgess, flyers from her native Australia, who are attached as instructors to the Canadian air force and are currently on 15 days' leave in this country.

Miss Lawrence, who was stricken with infantile paralysis two years ago, demonstrated her improvement by standing for photographs.

PART OF STEEL MILL'S FORCE DROPS STRIKE

Eighteen out of 90 cranemen and expediters, whose walkout Wednesday affected 3,200 other persons at the Carnegie-Illinois Steel corporation's Gary merchant mill, went back to work yesterday and plant officials said they believed the entire group would be at work by tonight.

The strike was started after negotiations over incentive plan adjustment had reached the stage of conference between international union officers and the company.

Joseph Goin, subdistrict director of the United Steel Workers of America [CIO], ordered the workers to return under threat of suspension.

TEST GARDINER HOSPITAL'S NEW RADIO SYSTEM

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

Service men convalescing at Gardiner General hospital, 1660 Hyde Park blvd., within a few weeks will be tuning in their favorite radio programs by means of a new type of hospital broadcasting system. The new radio system, carrying five different programs simultaneously thru an ordinary twisted telephone cable, was successfully tested yesterday before Col. John R. Hall, commanding officer of the hospital, and officers from other military hospitals interested in the development.

The system, which will provide headphones and individual control units ultimately for approximately 1,000 beds, is being donated to entertain the soldiers, sailors, and other military patients at the hospital by the South Side lodge, B'nai B'rith, which previously had given a complete recreation lounge and furnished other recreational facilities. One hundred units are to be installed in the next month.

Has Bedside Control.

First man to tune in was John Przybylski, seaman 2d class, of 3609 S. Wood st., who was the only patient in the ward in which the test was conducted. He found that the device provided good reception and predicted all service men would welcome it. The bedside control provides volume control for the earphones and a switch to five positions, allowing a choice of that many stations or programs picked up from the hospital chapel, recreation hall, or recordings from a phonograph unit.

Provision is made for breaking in on all channels with important announcements, fire alarms, or other warnings.

Plan Group Listening.

A central control unit provides for pre-selection of programs by an attendant. Thus, the same radio stations would not necessarily be chosen all of the time. FM as well as standard station programs can be channeled to the bedsides. Provision of loud speakers for group listening is under consideration. Army officers expressed interest in the relatively low cost, expected to be around $15 for each bedside unit.

The system was developed by Harry W. Becker, chief engineer of the Electronic Sound Engineering company of Chicago. A similar system will be installed in the new Vaughan General hospital adjacent to Hines hospital.

Herbert J. Nickelson, chairman of the war service committee of the South Side lodge, initiated the project. Serving with him were Louis J. Ascher, president; Emil Kitsinger, Myron Herzog, and Bernard Roman.

Friend of the Yanks

[The Friend of the Yanks department will answer questions about the draft and military service, both in the daily columns and by mail, if stamped, self-addressed envelopes are sent with the queries.]

R. K. writes: "I have had 10 years' experience in the operation, maintenance, and supervision of heavy construction equipment. My experience includes dragline shovel, Le Tourneau, caterpillar, paver, welder, and all small equipment that is used in highway, bridge, and railway construction. Also I have had five years' experience in precision job machine ship work. Would this experience fit in any way with any of the services?

ANSWER: Men with a good, strong background of diversified experience such as yours would be excellent candidates for the navy ship repair unit officers' program. In this program, men between 21 and 42 who are experienced in the production, installation, maintenance, and operation of mechanical or electrical machinery and radio or telephone equipment will be considered. Men who have had practical experience in the construction of steel structures, tanks, boilers, etc., or practical experience in wood construction such as wood hull construction and repair, also would be considered as qualifying for consideration. There are about 20 of these special billets open on which we have data sheets we will send on request. In addition there are about 40 other billets open, information on which is available at the office of naval officer procurement, Board of Trade, Chicago.

H. McL. writes: "I am 29 years old, married, and have three children. I have been running a cleaning and pressing establishment. I received my pre-induction physical March 27. I was given to understand by my draft board I would be ordered for induction in the next call, perhaps in three or four weeks. In the light of what has been published in recent days about drafting men under 26 and delaying induction of those over 26, can you tell me what are my chances for early induction?"

ANSWER: From all available information it would appear that your chances of early induction remain the same as before Gen. Hershey's statement. Your induction will be determined by your draft board's needs in filling its quota from men it has available for induction. For more general information, we can say that 14 occupations have been listed as critical and local boards have been instructed to be very careful about taking men from these occupations. Next as a possible source of man power are "activities in war production" and the most vulnerable of all are men of any age up to 38 who are engaged in activities in support of the war effort or, like your own, not connected with the war effort. In the last analysis, it is left entirely up to the local boards to interpret the occupational status of each registrant subject to appeal. Illinois selective service has been following a policy of taking all of the youngest "available" men first, hence there are no more available, so any delays in inducting older men are, at best, most temporary and largely nullified in this and surrounding states.

POST-WAR PLANS FOR VALPARAISO EXPANSION TOLD

An announcement of further steps toward the post-war development of a Lutheran university center for Chicago and Valparaiso, Ind., was made yesterday by President Otto P. Kretzmann of Valparaiso university, which has been owned and operated by the Lutheran University Association of America since 1925.

President Kretzmann told of the acquiring of 90 acres in Valparaiso, adjoining the present campus and extending eastward along the new dual highway, U. S. No. 30. The new acreage, he said, adjoins the new gymnasium and will be the site of a residence hall for women, funds for construction of which already have been received. It will be known as Guild hall.

In immediate post-war prospect is the erection of a new library building. Dr. Kretzmann said architects are at work on plans for these structures, as well as for a landscaped plan for the entire development. The Valparaiso site, it was explained, will be mainly for undergraduate liberal arts students, with most of the graduate and professional schools to be developed in Chicago.

WILDCAT STRIKE AT ACME STEEL PLANT GIVEN UP

A wildcat strike of 130 processing department employes of the Acme Steel company's Riverdale plant virtually ended yesterday after 2,200 workers had been made idle, and full operations will be resumed tomorrow, C. S. Traer, president of the company, said. The walkout, which started early in the week, had resulted in a complete shutdown by Friday, Traer said, and involved the right of the company to discharge a nonunion foreman. After 9th district naval industrial relations officers made an appeal the strikers began to return to work.

ILLINOIS C. OF C. GROUPS SUPPORT CURB ON TAXES

A movement started by the Illinois State Chamber of Commerce to bring about a special session of the state legislature for enactment of legislation to clarify the tax muddle in the state, precipitated by Cook county's new 100 per cent valuation basis, yesterday was reported gaining support of local chambers of commerce.

The local chambers, as well as trade organizations, civic groups, and labor organizations, were sent a bulletin pointing out that the problem is state-wide, and not confined to Cook county.

Taxpayers Are Warned.

The bulletin stated that Illinois taxpayers may expect the following consequences:

1. Other counties may change to a 100 per cent valuation base before the end of 1944, thus making it possible to increase greatly future taxes just as the Cook county 1944 taxes have been increased.

2. State aid for poor relief will be lost in many districts.

3. State equalization aid for schools will be lost in many school districts.

4. Millions of dollars of taxes to pay for increased local expenditures will be collected from Illinois taxpayers.

Harry J. Neumiller, president of the state Chamber of Commerce, asserted that a special session could be called if "citizens in every Illinois community immediately will bring the seriousness of the situation to the attention of the governor and of their senators and representatives. The Illinois State Chamber of Commerce is using every resource to bring about, thruout the state, a full understanding of this vital problem."

Tax Ceiling Proposed.

Legislative action urged by the chamber includes the establishment of a ceiling that would limit future tax extensions for each taxing district in Illinois to the amount that could have been collected under the maximum tax rates in effect before the change in assessment ratio took place.

The proposed legislation would provide that an increase above this amount could be voted by the citizens of any such unit and increases due to the assessment of new properties also could be allowed.

Also urged is creation of a commission that would develop a permanent solution to the problems resulting from the assessment change.

BARRINGTON BEAUTIFUL COUNTRY HOME
I AM LOOKING for a man who can afford a nice home, recognize what he wants when he sees it, and make up his mind quickly.
THIS 9 ROOM home has all the advantages of real country living—with none of the usual war time disadvantages. Only reason for selling, owner moving to California on business.
FOUR MASTER BEDROOMS, 4½ baths, maid's room, lots of closets, living room, dining room, library, kitchen, large screened porch; basement playroom with fireplace, new modern heating plant, 2 car garage. House has large living capacity, yet so compactly and efficiently planned it is easy to take care of and live in comfortably with minimum of help.
HOUSE ONLY 6 years old, best of condition. Also attractive kennel building, with extra garage, work shop, storage space, heating plant. Could easily be converted to guest house or playhouse.
9½ BEAUTIFUL acres, nearly all in natural state, with large old oak trees. Only small lawn to mow around house. Creek and frontage on private 75 acre lake with excellent boating and splendid fishing at your back door.
GAS RATIONING has been no problem to us as we are located on concrete highway only 2 miles southwest of Barrington stores, movie, and N. W. suburban station [40 minutes to loop]. School bus stops at door. Also regular Barrington-Elgin-Evanston bus service.
HAVE INVESTED over $50,000 in this place and it is worth more now because dollars were worth a good deal more when this house was built than they are today. However, to wind up my affairs here, for a quick sale will sell direct for $38,500, a real bargain and sound investment. Part cash and terms if desired. Possession on or before June 10. For appointment to see it phone owner, Barrington 169 or Franklin 6373.

ESSENTIAL WORK
TRAINED AND UNTRAINED
Think of the men you serve while working on our war products. We prewarm aircraft engines and cabins with our Ground Heaters. Where would tanks, P. T. boats, the Douglas B-18, and Higgins boats be without our panels!
Think of the big job our lubrication and equipment does for planes, boats, and land vehicles! And then there is the dramatic story of our radar products, our range and direction finding equipment, and our communications equipment.
Working here at the bench on machines, in inspection, in the stock room, or office, you have a fine insurance policy and hospitalization plan.
A convenient credit union, good wages and a 10% bonus on 2d and 3d shift.

ESSENTIAL WORK
TRAINED AND UNTRAINED
Think of the men you serve while working on our war products. We pre-warm aircraft engines and cabins with our ground heaters. Where would tanks, P. T. boats, the Douglas B-18, and Higgins boats be without our panels? Think of the big job our lubrication and equipment does for planes, boats, and land vehicles! And then there is the dramatic story of our radar products, our range and direction finding equipment, and our communications equipment. Working here at the bench on machines, in inspection, in the stock room or office, you have a fine insurance policy and hospitalization plan, a convenient credit union, good wages, and a 10% bonus on 2d and 3d shift.

PLAN TO REDUCE WORKING DAY OF POLLS OFFICIALS

Two Shifts Suggested by Judge Jarecki.

Under the system of paying judges and clerks at the polls $8 for election day if fewer than 300 votes are cast in the precinct and $16 if that number is exceeded, what is likely to happen if 297 ballots are in the box 15 minutes before closing time? Election officials aren't sure in any instance, but they believe an enterprising polls personnel would contrive to round up three more voters in a hurry.

That was one of several situations cited yesterday by County Judge Jarecki as meriting study with the view of amending the election laws. He termed the "over and under" system "foolish," and other election officials agreed with him.

System Complicates Payments.

Besides making the opportunity for some to double the day's wage, the arrangement complicates figuring the checks and delays payment to all polls officials. They cannot be paid for last Tuesday's primary until the official tally is completed, which will be the middle of this week, and then it will be necessary to determine which precinct officials are entitled to $16 and which to only $8.

Judge Jarecki has a plan to eliminate this condition and at the same time to improve efficiency. He suggests having two sets of officials in each precinct, one to be on duty while the polls are open and the other to take over at closing time and count the ballots. Each would be paid $8. The plan is in effect in some other states.

"It is a long enough day when the polls open at 6 and close at 5," he said, "and in precincts where there is a heavy vote, and possibly some disputes, it is a tiring task.

Cites Danger of Error.

When the same officials must count and tally the ballots, which often takes another 11 hours or longer, they become so fatigued it is too much to expect there will be no mistakes."

Harry A. Lipsky, member of the board of election commissioners, agreed with Judge Jarecki's suggestions and said that revisions of the laws affecting judges and clerks appeared especially urgent in war time, when many of the old regulars are in war work and have to be replaced with volunteers. Several thousand served last Tuesday in response to a call by the election board on the basis of patriotism.

Judge Jarecki said he planned to consult Guy Reed, chairman of the Joint Civic Committee on Elections, on a project to make his proposals effective.

PARENTS OF FIVE BEGIN 3D MONTH OF HUNTING FLAT

Quest Brings Aid by United Charities.

A railroad clerk and his wife, recently removed from an active case of tuberculosis, yesterday began their fourth month of searching for living quarters for themselves and their five children. Their search has taken them daily to the landlords of the city's few available apartments. All inquiries have brought the same answer: No children.

Yesterday the United Charities family service bureau stepped into the case to make a plea that apartment managers cooperate with the family, now living in a three room flat at 4240 Kenmore av.

Girls Put in Foster Homes.

Five years ago Mrs. Julia Peterka was found to be the victim of tuberculosis. Her three small daughters were sent to foster homes so she might have rest and quiet. Recently her doctors told her she was well enough to care for her daughters.

The month before the return of the girls was spent in apartment hunting. Mr. and Mrs. Peterka took turns staying with their two sons, John, 3, and Thomas, 1, and answering "for rent" ads in the newspapers. They found a few flats but were told that five children were just five too many.

Given Order to Move.

Cleo, 13; Jean, 10, and Mary Margaret, 8, came back to their mother March 25. When their landlord learned his flat was occupied by two adults and five children, he ordered the family to move.

Yesterday Mrs. Peterka said, "Our children are well mannered and they aren't destructive. A landlord wouldn't be taking a risk by letting us rent his place."

Furniture for the flat which the family hopes to find was given to them thru the United Charities and THE TRIBUNE'S Sally Joy Brown. Because of their delay in finding a home, several promises of furniture already have been withdrawn.

1,000 at Convention

Norman Olson, a student at Maine township High school in Park Ridge, was elected president of the Illinois Association of Student Councils yesterday at the closing meeting of the association's two day convention in Hotel Sherman. More than 1,000 students, representing 130 high schools, were registered.

Other new officers are: Bob Harvey, Highland Park High school; Herrin Zellers, Lanphier High school; June Bickerton, Woodruff High, Peoria, and Kent Yowell, Edinburgh township High school. The retiring president is Bill Scott of South Shore High school.

The convention was under the supervision of W. G. Carlin, chairman of the board, and Miss Dorothy Thompson, a board member. Philip Maxwell, principal of the air of W-G-N's "Citizens of Tomorrow" broadcast, presided at a candidate seminar before the election. The 1945 convention will be held next spring in Peoria, where Morton township High school of Morton, Ill., will be the host school.

OPA Sues Packing Firm for $70,818 on Its Sales

Suit for triple damages was filed in federal District court by the office of price administration yesterday against the Streator Meat Packing company of Streator, seeking $70,818 for alleged sales at over ceiling prices to nine companies and individuals. The violations, the OPA alleged, involved the sale of 500,000 pounds of meat. Largest buyer was the Southern Beef Company of New York, which allegedly overpaid $19,044.

PAINTER FOUND ASPHYXIATED.

Walter Doyle, 42, of 930 Roscoe st., a painter, was found dead in his bedroom yesterday. Police said they found a hose leading from a gas fixture to his mouth.

ACTION AGAINST CANAL EYESORE UP TO CONGRESS

Action to present a bill in congress declaring the abandoned Illinois-Michigan canal a non-navigable stream was started last week by Mayor Kelly in order that the old channel might be used as a garbage dump and later converted into a highway or strip of park land. The canal in its present state, the mayor declared, is an eyesore and its stagnant water a menace to Chicago's health.

Once a thriving waterway between Chicago and Lockport, the canal was abandoned as a water traffic artery in 1901 when the present drainage canal was opened to boats and barges. The canal was completed in 1848 and ran parrallel to the site of the present drainage canal from its source at Ashland av. and 29th st. to Lockport.

Cause of Court Battles.

Since its abandonment it has been the subject of many court battles including a squabble between the state and the city in 1934 when the city used the channel between Damen av. and Western av. as a dump.

The state obtained an injunction preventing the city from further dumping on the ground that such action was a violation of federal law because the stream was still legally navigable and also on the ground that the odd numbered sections of the channel were state property under the terms of the original land grant. Title to the even numbered sections of the land and channel was kept by the federal government when the canal was built and eventually sold to private interests.

Park Outside County.

The city's plan is to fill in the balance of the channel between Western av. and the city limits and then plan for further development, such as a highway which could be constructed with state motor fuel tax funds.

Outside Cook county where the stream is still fed by small creeks which have been allowed to break thru the canal's banks, the land along the route has been converted into a lengthy wild life park by civilian conservation corps work and the action of nature. From Western av. to the city limits the stream is an odorous and unsightly bog.

School Children Start Clean-up Drive Today

Chicago school children are mobilizing again for their annual spring Clean-Up-Paint-Up-Plant-Up, campaign. It begins today and continues thru April 29. This year there will be emphasis on conservation of property and materials and stimulation of public morale thru cleanliness, repair, sanitation, safety, health, fire prevention, neighborhood improvement, and salvage.

KILLED BY TRAIN.

East St. Louis, Ill., April 15 [Special].—Robert L. Padgett, 76, assistant dog catcher at Granite City, seven miles north of here, was killed today when a New York Central passenger train collided with his car at a Granite City crossing.

NHA TO REPORT ITS HOME NEEDS FINDINGS SOON

BY AL CHASE.
[Real Estate Editor.]

The national housing agency will announce shortly results of a comprehensive study of Chicago's need for more war homes which has been under way for the last 90 days. Builders are hopeful the agency will recommend a new quota of construction priorities and that NHA's request will be granted.

Milton M. Bowen.

Federal officials, however, said that with lumber a critical material and common labor scarce, builders may have difficulty in utilizing within scheduled time limits priorities already alloted.

Milton M. Bowen, executive secretary, Metropolitan Chicago Home Builders association, which was instrumental in getting priority quotas for more than 8,000 homes in 1943, said that his association again is campaigning for a further allotment. He said more homes are badly needed and was hopeful that NHA would act favorably.

Home Building Increases.

Home building in the Chicago metropolitan area increased last month 69 per cent in number of units and 84 per cent in value, as compared with the same month last year, the monthly survey of new building by Bell Savings and Loan association showed.

Permits were issued last month in Chicago, its suburbs and in unincorporated areas of Cook, Du Page, Kane, and Lake counties for 461 homes, costing $2,057,401. In March, 1943, 273 permits, valued at $1,117,325, were issued. In the suburbs March permits totaled 222, for homes costing $1,162,355, against 160 homes valued at $839,043 last year. In February 103 permits for homes valued at $522,285 were issued.

Des Plaines Leads Suburbs.

Des Plaines, near the Douglas aircraft plant, led all suburbs in residential building last month, with 62 homes, costing $342,400. Hammond, Ind., was second, with 38 at $200,000. Others were Broadview, 24 at $117,000; Gary, 18 at $75,650; Park Ridge, 15 at $81,000, and Calumet City, 15 at $75,000.

New building of all types, including homes, in the metropolitan area last month totaled $7,834,670. This compares with $13,346,206 on March, 1943, and $5,907,136 in February of this year.

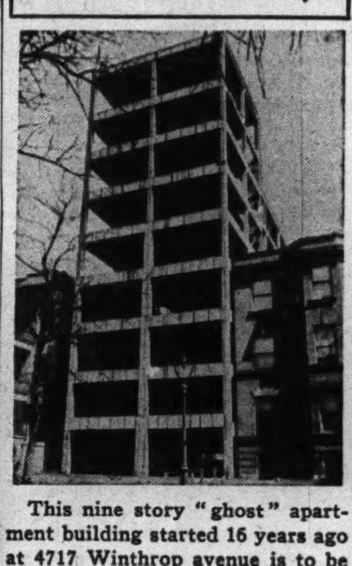
'Ghost' Comes to Life



This nine story "ghost" apartment building started 16 years ago at 4717 Winthrop avenue is to be completed with $70,000 federal and $50,000 private funds, and will house 33 war workers' families at rentals of $32.50 to $47.50 monthly. Anton Johnson is architect. Juval Builders are owners and will complete it. Leonard R. McDonald, head of war housing center, in charge of the project, said it would be completed about Aug. 1.

EUGENE TAYLOR QUITS CHICAGO PLANNING BODY

Eugene S. Taylor, manager of the Chicago Plan commission, has resigned to enter private business in Denver, Colo., H. Evert Kincaid, executive director, announced yesterday. During his managership of the commission nearly 100 public and semi-public improvements, sponsored by the commission and representing investments of more than 500 million dollars, were completed.

[Moffett Photo.]

He began his service 33 years ago shortly after the commission was organized during the administration of Mayor Fred A. Busse, and continued under the five succeeding mayors to date.

"Under the leadership of five chairmen of the plan commission, Taylor has had an active part not only in planning for Chicago but in assisting in bringing many of the plans to successful construction," Kincaid said.

"From the inception of the Chicago plan by Daniel Burnham and his associates back in 1909 until the present, Chicago has occupied an enviable place in the field of city planning. It has been due to the efforts of men like Walter Moody, Eugene Taylor, and the various commission chairmen that prominent Chicago business men became interested in helping make the plan become a reality. Taylor has seen the staff of the commission grow from two to a peak of 40 at the outbreak of the present war."

PLAN QUARTERS FOR 625 NURSES IN 7 HOSPITALS

Living quarters for 625 nurses will be provided in new facilities at seven hospitals at a cost of $2,028,370 as soon as priorities and materials can be obtained, it was learned yesterday. The federal works agency has made cash grants of $707,075 to six of the hospitals, which have pledged a total of $721,295 to supplement this aid. In addition, Mount Sinai hospital is planning a $600,000 nurses' home without federal help to accommodate 220.

The six hospitals to receive federal aid, the amounts they have pledged and the FWA grants [in brackets] are: Michael Reese, $140,000 [$140,000]; St. Luke's, $56,295 [$56,295]; St. Joseph's, $100,000 [$80,295]; Provident, $20,000 [$121,370]; Silver Cross, Joliet, $50,000 [$110,115]; Methodist, Gary, $355,000 [$199,000].

AN ARTIST SEES WAR

Graphic Section
April 16, 1944

Thru a desolate jungle swamp at Cape Gloucester, American trucks and jeeps carry supplies forward from a line of LST's (landing ship tanks) drawn up on the beach. Bulldozers still are cutting roadways, and in the foreground marines slog forward beside shell-torn trees. Overhead Thunderbolts and Lightnings fly patrol against possible Japanese aerial attack.

Barges of the American amphibian engineers under Japanese aerial attack. The barges had just left a beach in New Guinea, where they had been delivering supplies. There were no hits scored.

A typical scene along the tropical northern shore of New Guinea. Large trees festooned with ferns and air plants hang over the lagoons, often dipping their branches into the water. These densely forested shores afford ideal hiding places for many types of landing craft, PT boats, barges, and such.

At left: Marines, many of them veterans of Guadalcanal, rest amid cargo and vehicles piled on the deck of an LST during convoy trip thru the Bismarck sea to Cape Gloucester, New Britain, which they attacked the next morning. Marine at machine gun is keeping watch for Japanese planes.

On this page are more war paintings by Gary Sheahan, Tribune artist and war correspondent, who has spent many months in the Southwest Pacific. Mr. Sheahan's excellent pen and pencil sketches and his paintings have appeared frequently in both the Daily and Sunday Tribune and bring to Chicagoland readers a realistic contact with the part of the world in which so many Chicagoland men are fighting.

May's a Grand Old Dame

LOOKING AT HOLLYWOOD WITH HEDDA HOPPER

1892—Dame May Whitty and her husband, Ben Webster, on their honeymoon in Devonshire.

1942—On their 50th wedding anniversary, spent in Hollywood during her film assignments.

Hollywood.

DAME MAY WHITTY'S like a spring tonic. She should be "taken" regularly three times a day by all the women in the world. If by so doing they could capture even a part of her vitality and great courage it would be more than worth their while to make a textbook of her life.

A definite threat to Hollywood's glamor girls ever since she arrived, the gay little actress, who has chalked up some seventy-odd years of living, is the center of attraction wherever she goes. Her background deals not only with folk of the stage and screen but brilliant political figures as well. Some day it will be told in a book written by her daughter, the well known stage director and Shakespearean authority, Margaret Webster, who is carrying on the family tradition as established by her actress mother and actor father, Ben Webster.

Dame May has brushed shoulders and opinions with newsworthy headliners, from princes to presidents, for the past decades. Her "political career," if you can call it that, dates back to a London party given by Mabel Terry, niece of the famous stage star Ellen Terry. Women's suffrage was just beginning to take form, and the conversation began drifting toward the suffragets.

"How," went the general trend of talk, "could women lose their self-respect to such an extent? Where was their pride? Of what were they thinking?"

It was at this point that Dame May Whitty began to think, deeply and sanely. The more she thought the more she agreed with the movement. Suddenly she found herself defending the group.

"Why, I actually think you are a suffraget," Mabel Terry remarked with surprise.

"I believe I am," answered Dame May.

This marked a turning point in her life. From that moment she began coupling her make-believe life on the stage with the real business of fighting for a cause. She doesn't regret this decision, either. She feels woman's suffrage was prompted by courage and idealism and quotes H. W. Nevinson, who said, "It was the greatest spiritual movement I ever saw."

"O, we were roundly insulted," Dame May remembers. "They began making arrests and sending women to Holloway prison.

"I never underwent the hardships of Holloway prison," she said, "but I sometimes look at my decorations, the silver star and gold cross of the Excellent Order of the British Empire and wish I could trade them for the tiny pin, a replica of two prison bars, worn today by the brave women who did.

"Women today have been born into a different world. They will never understand what it meant to be literally pushed about and treated as criminals, lunatics, and children.

"The struggle was not without its humorous side. When women visited parliament they were required to sit in the ladies' gallery," she said, "a section barred off from the rest of the seats. When some member held the floor for a speech, women would often don hecklers' raiment and call down, 'All well and good, but how do you stand on women's votes?'

"The hecklers were always ejected in short order, but it takes more than that to outsmart a group of women bent on winning a point. Came a day when the amazed officer relegated to the business of keeping the peace attempted to eject a heckler, only to discover that the women had chained themselves together and to the iron railing, so that they stayed until some one relinquished a key."

Such was the state of affairs when the clouds of World War I. roared across the horizon and plunged the world into a preview of the present holocaust.

"The women were magnificently organized," Dame May Whitty said. "These groups, originally begun in the interest of women's suffrage, were the forerunners of today's WRENS, WACs, WAVES, and SPARs."

With the outbreak of the first World war, women and government declared a truce. The Actresses' Franchise league became the Women's Emergency corps. Employment exchanges were established in a vacated women's college. So stubborn was the clique that claimed women were worthless, however, that it took two years to discover that women were fit to do the jobs assigned them, especially agricultural duties.

"It was about this time that we established the workrooms idea," Dame May Whitty went on. "This gave employment to actresses, musicians, and artists who suffered lack of work due to war. It was a strictly nonprofit organization with some 80 regular employes, and other younger ones who went on to better jobs after they were trained. We carried on for 11 years, four during the war and seven afterward.

"The stockinette doll was our baby," said Dame May. "It was invented by an artist and caught on immediately, since the importation of toys had ceased. The dolls became quite elaborate, and workrooms were dedicated solely to their creation.

"All this sandwiched in between an average of four or five committee meetings daily, plus chairmanship of war distress fund, whose object was to put on entertainment to raise funds that the other charities might continue.

"I have always felt that no sacrifice is too great to make for those who are hurt by war," she said.

It was during the height of these activities that the famous Star and Garter club, located in Richmond on the Thames, was presented by land agents to Queen Mary as a home for disabled soldiers and sailors.

"We had been desperately trying to get our 100 per cent medical corps unit to France," Dame May explained, "but the idea of an entire feminine medical unit was too fantastic to be accepted. Finally we were approached by Sir Frederick Trevers, famous surgeon and friend of both Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra, who suggested we take over the task of organizing the Star and Garter home.

"Then came the tremendous job of remodeling. We raised 50,000 pounds, a quarter of a million dollars, in nine months, to accomplish it. I'll never forget the day we went to Buckingham palace to present the money to the queen.

"Nor will I forget the day of the grand opening. Both the late King George V. and Queen Mary came. I walked in to tea with the king. He looked around at the former club and remarked, 'I remember when I thought it was quite the sporting thing to do to drive here in a hansom cab.'"

All of this led to Dame May Whitty becoming a dame commander of the Excellent Order of the British Empire. It was in Buckingham palace in London, January, 1918, when the silver star and gold cross of the order was bestowed upon her by King George V. The award came in recognition of her war work.

Now in Hollywood, and in the midst of another world war, Dame May is carrying on, giving her time, energy, and heart. Away from the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer cameras which have recorded new performances in "White Cliffs" and "Gaslight," she devotes her time to all types of war benefits and charities.

And woman's suffrage?

"O, that was granted about the middle of World War I.," she smiled. "I was asked to give a speech in honor of the battle we'd won. During the time there was a popular stage play called 'Rosaline,' written by Barrie. One of the memorable lines spoken by the leading lady read something to the effect that, since she was an actress, she would never be older than 29.

"I congratulated the women on their victory. I told them it was a great undertaking, won thru suffering and sacrifice and courage. Unfortunately, I concluded, due to my profession, I would never be privileged to take advantage of it." It seems that the initial voting age for British women was 30 years.

And Dame May still carries on. Her good cheer, taste, and advice to young players is beyond anything. It's just too bad that some of those who ask for it haven't the good sense to use it.

YOUTH ON THE CAMPUS

By ELEANOR NANGLE
(PHOTO STORY IN TODAY'S PICTURE SECTION)

Albuquerque, N. M.

HERE, in what all residents and even the automobile licenses proclaim with considerable justification as the land of enchantment, the campus of the University of New Mexico presents an intriguing picture of old and new world influences.

On the old world side there are its physical aspects: All of its buildings are uniform architecturally, in a modification of the Taos Indian pueblo design, most of them in white or soft-tinted adobe, with sun decks, patios, and protruding rafters. At the university entrance, tho officially off-campus, stands an estufa, a strange white-walled adobe building with no visible entrance and with log steps to the roof. This low hut, modeled after the ancient Indian tribal meeting place, is the Pi Kappa Alpha house. Historic old Santa Fe is less than 60 miles away, and picturesque Indian pueblos—Taos, Jemez, Isleta, and Acoma—are within easy driving distance.

On the new world side there are the planes that drone incessantly in the shimmering skies, heading in and out of near-by Kirtland air base; the contingent of navy aviation cadets housed in the modern stadium; the blue-clad V-12 and navy R. O. T. C. boys quartered in picturesque Hokona hall; the girls, some 600 of them, wearing blue jeans or slacks, who read their mail or study in the sun-drenched patios; the dramatically handsome library, snow white, with an Aztec tower. There are also the 18 hole golf course and the stables, where students obtain the horses that take them up the mountain trails.

The snow-capped Sandia mountains, where students can ski as often as they like and are able to obtain transportation, are never out of sight. Ten miles away, they seem within hand's reach in the clarity of the air that is one of the enchantments of this campus 5,000 feet above sea level.

The educational program reflects this blend of old and new world influences, too. So did the recent commencement, at the end of the second semester, which was highlighted by gestures of Latin American coöperation and friendship. One hundred thirty seniors won their degrees, and 62 men of the university's first navy R. O. T. C. unit were awarded their commissions as ensigns. Dr. Alexander G. Ruthven, president of the University of Michigan, who delivered the commencement address, and five eminent Mexican scholars, including the president of the University of Mexico and Mexico's minister of public education, were awarded honorary degrees.

The university library was the scene of a two day conference concerning Mexico's role in international coöperation; this was sponsored jointly by the institute of Latin American studies of the University of Texas and the school of inter-American affairs of the University of New Mexico.

Jack Wall of Indianapolis and Daniel Ely Jr. of Chicago were among the navy R. O. T. C. men who received commissions. Both had completed their junior year at the university. A campus romance culminated in the marriage in March, in Chicago, of Ensign Wall and Helene Higgins, an outstanding student, who also was a junior. At the U. of N. M. this year she was president of Alpha Chi Omega and secretary and treasurer of the student senate. Her plans to return to Albuquerque to complete her degree hinge on her husband's naval orders.

Virginia Schmitt of Chicago is another midwesterner who has found life in a southwestern university to her liking. She is a junior, member of Chi Omega, and was named as popularity queen last year. Others from the midwest area include Marjorie Dick, Bloomington, Ill.; Peg Jacobus, Wauwatosa, Wis.; Virginia Scholes, Bradford, Ill., and numerous men in the navy units, V-5 and V-12.

There is, understandably enough, great emphasis on anthropology at the University of New Mexico. One of its famous archaeological projects has been and continues to be the exploration of the Chaco canyon area, an ancient Indian village southwest of Albuquerque. And its school of inter-American affairs, established in 1941, is an attraction for good neighbor minded Americans as well as an increasing number of students of Spanish and Mexican origin.

"The Tales of Hoffmann"

"Tales of Hoffmann" will be presented on the Chicago Theater of the Air Saturday, April 22, on W-G-N, WGNB, and the Mutual network from 8 to 9 p. m. (C.W.T.), starring Marion Claire.

By ALBERT GOLDBERG

"THE TALES OF HOFFMANN" represents the fondest dream of its creator, Jacques Offenbach. During his long and brilliantly successful life, with 91 operettas to his credit and world wide fame as a representative composer of the Second empire, he never lost sight of his ambition to write an opera which would entitle him to consideration as a serious composer. At length the libretto of "The Tales of Hoffmann" was offered him, fashioned by the same Barbier and Carre who had reduced Goethe's "Faust" to the level of a seduction tale for operatic purposes. Offenbach was apparently not the composer of their choice, for they had first

Lawrence Tibbett

asked Gounod and others to set their work to music.

Offenbach's health was precarious, and for years he had kept himself alive by the strength of this ambition to prove to the world that he could do more than write frothy Parisian operettas. He set to work at once on "The Tales of Hoffmann," pouring into it his best inspiration and looking forward eagerly to its performance as the climax of his career. But an ironic fate decreed otherwise. All but the last pages of the score were completed when, exhausted by overwork, he succumbed to a heart attack. His friend Guiraud put the finishing touches to the opera, and several months later, on Oct. 4, 1880, it was produced at the Opera Comique, that summit of every French composer's aspiration, where but two of Offenbach's earlier works had been considered worthy of presentation. Offenbach's ambition was realized, for while "The Tales of Hoffmann" is not great music, it was at once apparent that it was the composer's best, and the work eventually appeared in the repertoire of every great opera house.

The libretto is based upon certain stories of the picturesque German writer E. T. A. Hoffmann, a romantic who exerted great influence upon the poets, writers, and musicians of 19th-century Germany. He was a lawyer by profession and in addition to his literary interests was a theater director, a composer of operas, and a music critic—with interludes of wild adventure which culminated in dipsomania and locomotor ataxia.

With the same license that Barbier and Carre displayed toward "Faust," none of the "Tales" of the opera correspond exactly to any of Hoffmann's stories. The poet himself is introduced as the central character of each episode, in the main portrayed as he was in actuality.

The opera opens with a prolog in Martin Luther's wine cellar in Nuremberg, where Hoffmann offers to recount to the assembled roisterers his adventures in love. Each of the succeeding three acts depicts one of the poet's romances. The first concerns the beautiful mechanical doll Olympia, with whom Hoffmann falls in love after purchasing magic spectacles from his friend Coppelius. The second adventure takes place in Venice, where Hoffmann becomes enamored of the beautiful courtesan Giulietta, who, under the influence of the magician Dapertutto, has stolen the shadow of her lover, Schlemil, and now proposes to subject the poet to the same fate. Hoffmann kills Schlemil in a duel, but Giulietta only mocks him as she floats away in her gondola with the magician. This episode contains the opera's most famous musical number, the barcarolle, "O Belle Nuit" (O Night of Love). The final episode is laid in Munich, where Hoffmann is again in love, this time with Antonia, a young singer of wondrous voice, but who suffers from tuberculosis and has been warned that to sing again may mean her death. But once more there is a villain, the evil Dr. Miracle, representing the same malign influence which in the shapes of Coppelius and Dapertutto had earlier pursued Hoffmann. Dr. Miracle persuades the girl to raise her voice in one glorious last song, whereupon she drops dead at the feet of her tragically frustrated lover. An epilog again shows the tavern, where the muse of art comes to console Hoffmann and a pretty girl tosses him a flower as all depart and leave him alone—dead drunk.

In recent years it has become the custom for baritones to take advantage of the rich histrionic opportunities offered by the roles of Coppelius, Dapertutto, and Dr. Miracle and to sing all three parts. Among famous singers who have followed this procedure are Maurice Renaud, Clarence Whitehill, Joseph Schwarz, Vanni-Marcoux, and Lawrence Tibbett.

A Barrymore Remembers John L.

This is another episode in the early part of John Barrymore's life as related in the best-seller biography "GOOD NIGHT, SWEET PRINCE." This book is running serially in The Daily Tribune. Don't fail to read tomorrow's instalment.

By GENE FOWLER

(Copyright, 1943, 1944, by Gene Fowler. Reprinted by arrangement with the Viking Press, Inc.)

ONE day in Jack Barrymore's boyhood, when he was walking along Broadway, he felt himself seized from behind and lifted from the pavement. Then he heard and saw Papa (Maurice Barrymore), who spun him about happily and greeted him with implications that they had had an appointment for this special place and this very hour.

As they stood there a hulking man walked slowly past them. A quality of loneliness seemed upon him in this busy street. Papa took a quick step toward the big man, calling out cordially, "Hello, there, John!"

Mr. Sullivan paused, turned his great head slowly, as if he suspected some kind of mischief. Suddenly the gladiator's eye fired with recognition. "Aw, Barry! It's you. Guess I was just all wrapped up in myself too hard. Nice of you to speak to me."

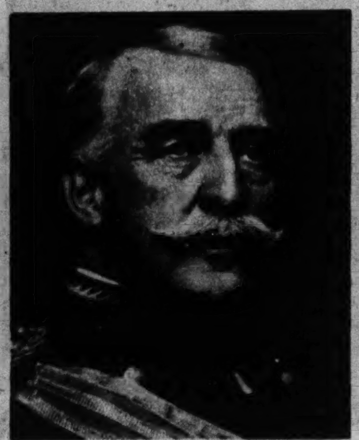
The ex-hero resumed his gallant march down Broadway, the ghosts of former worshipers following his slow strides.

"Why did he say it was so nice of you to speak to him, Papa?" Jack asked.

Maurice had been looking after John L., a sadness in his eye. He turned to his son. "This is Broadway, the longest street with the shortest memory. I wonder if you remember the time I first introduced you to John L.?"

"Sure, I do," Jack said. "He knocked my wind out with his cane."

"Good Lord!" Maurice said. "One of the greatest fighters that ever lived, and all you remember is that he poked you with his stick! I suppose when you grow up and are asked what you remember of our great friend Joseph



GEN. NELSON A. MILES

Jefferson, your wandering operetta of a mind will forget his 'Rip Van Winkle.'"

"O, no, Papa," said Jack. "I wouldn't forget that!"

Maurice raised his brow. "Really? Well, just what do you remember about that classic portrayal?"

"The dwarfs with kegs on their shoulders," Jack replied.

"Good!" said Papa. "Is that all?"

"No, sir. I remember the dog Mr. Jefferson had in the play."

"My boy," said Papa, "may all your sorrows rest as lightly on your mind as your memories of great men. Let us have that beer, a short one for you, to match your powers of recollection."

While Mum Mum, Uncle Googan, and Lionel remained on tour, Jack Barrymore made two bang-up discoveries. He learned first of all that Gen. Nelson A. Miles, famous Indian fighter, was practically a neighbor of Uncle Jack's on Long Island. The boy looked forward to breaking this news to Lionel, a superior sort of brother, who believed himself to be an Indian scout and planned secretly to join the wild west show of Buffalo Bill Cody.

The lad's second amazing discovery revealed that a five cent cigar had been named for Uncle Jack! Certainly this great honor (the second time a family member had been canonized by the tobacco hierarchy) would impress even Lionel.

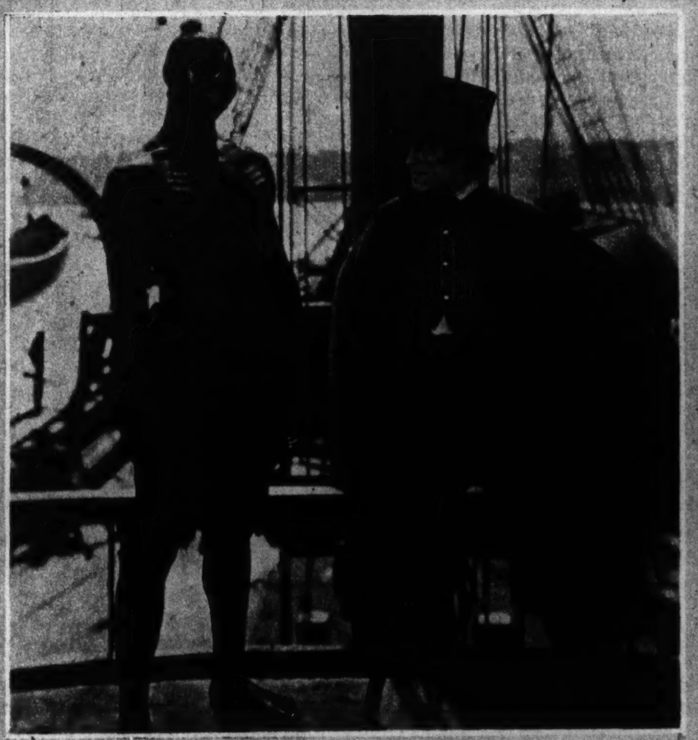
Uncle Jack did not seem happy over the cigar incident. It seems that, while in Washington, Drew had been celebrating something, perhaps Nat Goodwin's birthday. He overcelebrated and fell asleep, quite decorously, of course. He awakened next noon in his room at the Raleigh hotel, the tumult of a brass band serving as an alarm clock.

"Confound it," he told his nephews, "I am fond of the City of Magnificent Distances, you know. But there is one serious drawback. There always is a ghastly parade of some sort. Daughters or Sons of This-and-That, you know. Impossible to sleep decently of a morning. Well, at any rate, I looked out the window to see a band and marchers! And a huge banner on long poles, and on the banner my picture and the advertisment:

"THE JOHN DREW CIGAR
5 CENTS
WITHIN THE REACH OF ALL."

Mr. Drew remembered nothing whatever of having met a group of cigar manufacturers during his time of celebration, or giving his consent to the naming of the product for him.

John, Dolores, and "The Sea Beast"



John Barrymore as Captain Ahab in "The Sea Beast," silent movie version of "Moby Dick." This "super-production" of 1925 was the first of three films in which Barrymore was starred under a new contract. For each of those pictures he received $76,250.

(© Warner Brothers)

Dolores Costello, who was to become John Barrymore's third wife, was his leading lady in "The Sea Beast," albeit she had not appeared in movies before. It was the infatuated Barrymore's insistence that won this starring debut for "the most preposterously lovely creature in all the world."

The New Army Bayonet

By JOHN A. MENAUGH

GRAPHIC LABORATORY OF POPULAR SCIENCE

WHEN the army ordnance department adopted a new model bayonet in 1942 it had two objects in mind. The first was to provide our riflemen with a less clumsy weapon, one that could be used more effectively in all varieties of hand-to-hand fighting, especially jungle fighting, and one that when detached from the rifle could be employed as a trench knife. The other object was to conserve critical material.

It is estimated that 362 tons of high-carbon steel were saved in bayonet production in 1943 as a result of the change of models, and it is expected that about 560 tons will be saved in the same manner this year.

All this saving in steel is brought about thru the shortening of the knife blade of the bayonet from 16 to 10 inches. The bayonet with the 16 inch blade was adopted by the army in 1905.

The redesigned model in general appearance is the same as the old except for the length of the blade. In cases where old types are recut to the new length the groove in the blade extends to the point; in new forgings the groove terminates between two and three inches from the point. The older weapon has a wood grip, but plastic is used for the grip of the new model. Waterproof, shatterproof plastic is used in the scabbard of the new bayonet.

The new bayonet, termed bayonet U. S. M. 1942, is being turned out on a mass production basis by a number of companies, typical of which is the American Fork and Hoe company of Ashtabula, O. Automatic machines perform most of the production work, but only skilled hand workers are entrusted with grinding the keen edges of the weapon.

The military purpose of shortening the blade was to facilitate handling in close-in fighting. At "sling arms" the shorter blade allows greater clearance from overhanging branches on jungle trails. In fighting the shorter blade is better for parrying thrusts. The blade tip being closer to the hand and therefore closer to the actuated energy, a faster and stronger cut may be executed. When handled as a hunting knife or trench knife the shorter weapon again has an advantage over a long blade. Greater pressure can be exerted with the same amount of strength. Control of the tip of the shorter blade can be maintained as it is slid along a longer blade being wielded by an enemy.

Despite the attention still given to the bayonet, which was originated as a military weapon about 400 years ago, it no longer holds the place of importance in war that it once held. When soldiers were armed with flintlock muskets, which required considerable time to reload after firing, the bayonet was virtually as important as the musket. The soldier, if very close to the enemy, fired one shot and then placed his trust in his bayonet. He did not have time to reload.

This kind of fighting now belongs to history, yet soldiers continue to be drilled in bayonet practice. Today a bayonet charge against troops adequately provided with fire power would be suicidal. The bayonet has been retained mainly, it would appear, for the psychological effect it has on the rifleman who carries it.

Soldiers demonstrate the new bayonet (right) and the old in simulated close combat.

It must not be assumed from the foregoing that stabbing and sticking have vanished altogether from war, for this is not the case. There are frequent instances when the soldier or marine with a quick and desperate jab can save his life or that of a comrade. For mopping-up operations—disposing of hidden stragglers after a position has been carried—the bayonet has a definite place as a weapon. When silence is desirable it has an advantage.

The term bayonet is believed to have been derived from the town of Bayonne in France, where a type of short dagger called a bayonet is said to have been first produced toward the end of the 15th century. First of the bayonets that were attached to muskets were of the so-called plug type, which were used in the 17th century. They were short swords or daggers with wooden hand grips or plugs that fitted into the muzzles of muskets. The disadvantage of this kind of a bayonet was that the arm could not be fired when it was attached.

Gen. Hugh Mackay, the British commander who was beaten at the battle of Killiecrankie in Scotland in 1689, attributed his defeat in part to the fact that his soldiers used plug bayonets. Shortly after this he introduced a ring type bayonet which when fitted to the muzzle of the musket permitted it to be fired. After the beginning of the 18th century bayonets were used by virtually all European infantry, but it was not until 1805 that Sir John Moore introduced into the British army a bayonet that was attached to a musket by means of a spring clip.

Many of the bayonets of the 19th century were of the triangular type (so called from a cross section of the blade). During the American Civil war triangular bayonets were standard with nearly all the infantry of both the north and the south. The American army did not replace the triangular bayonet with the sword type bayonet until it adopted a bolt action repeating rifle and discarded the old single-shot black powder Springfield rifle. Some of our troops were armed with the old single-shot weapons even as late as the Spanish-American war.

Many high school guys and gals often wonder just what other fellows and girls think of them. They want to be liked.

By MAUREEN DALY

(Author of "Seventeenth Summer" and "Smarter and Smoother.")

THIS IS SERIOUS. This is a little honest chatter to find out, from those who know, just what it is that makes a good Joe and a really tickin' chicken. Many high school guys and gals often wonder just what other fellows and girls their own age think of them. They want to be liked; they want to be successes in school. And they hear a lot of talk about being sharp, on the ball, in the groove, on the buttered side, in the all-right department, and on the solid side—catch phrases that mean they are "smooth and smart" characters. And they wonder exactly what that means. And then they hear the contrary con about being a drip, strictly from hunger, a gone gosling, a jerk of all trades, a sad specimen, you keep her, you brought her—and they wonder exactly what that means.

It is difficult to determine just what things are most important. Sometimes fellows and girls hear the story that because they are only young once they should have their fun while they can; the old song and dance, "gather your rosebuds while you may" routine. The main thing in life may be to be popular, to get around. A gal should be an able Grable with long hair, long sweaters, plenty of dates, and a lot of sharp chatter to please the boys—that's the most important thing. She should be a fine dancer, up on Harry James' latest recordings, and a good sport on all evenings from coke dates to the junior proms. And perhaps it is important above all else that a boy be a smooth operator; that he is able to date any sweet stuff he sets his mind to, looks like a Beau Brummell in sport coat and peg-top pants, and is able to charm any gal in school with his line.

And there's the other side of the story. Maybe it's study and hard work that are most important in high school—"all work and no play makes Jackson a sharp character." This four years in high school is just the time for a fellow to concentrate, skip all outside frivolity such as dating and pretty gals, while he crams his brain with serious study that will help him when it comes time to direct banks and build bridges later on. And any young whistle bait who skips the books in high school and spends her time being queen of the May will regret it when it comes time to go out into the world and earn the folding lettuce or settle down to be a good mother and teach her children to speak good English.

Or is there a safe road between—some way that smartness and smoothness can be mixed? Fellows and girls both realize that they are not living just for the four years of high school and what they do now may shape the pattern they will fall into 20 years from now. So we'd like to get a few outside ideas on the subject. Put down in black and white what in your opinion would make an ideal high school fellow or girl, listing the qualifications you think necessary for making a success of school and for developing a well rounded personality.

For instance, here's a short letter from a fellow who knows what qualities he'd like to find in a gal:

"For me (tho I'm no real authority) my only qualification for an ideal girl would be that she looks plenty potent, never gets blue, and is not too dumb but is not too independent. I don't think these are stiff qualifications, but I haven't found a girl to fit them in my three and a half years in high school. The first requirement doesn't count too much, either."

And from a honey chile who has dreamed up her ideal hunk of man:

"I'm still looking for a boy who is completely honest; who doesn't think he has to tell me I'm the prettiest girl he ever saw, when I'm not, just to keep me happy. I'd like him to think school is as interesting as I think it is and would like to talk about the things we are studying just as much as he likes to talk about movies, new swing music, or other fellows and girls. Just as long as he is neat and clean, I don't care how handsome he is. Above all, I'd like him to be sincere. P. S.—I haven't found him yet!"

There are a couple of ideas. Now let us know what you think; send in your opinions on what you believe makes a fellow or girl really "smart and smooth." List the qualifications you would like to find in a good date, a good friend, or a good student; what you would like to be yourself or what you wish other fellows and girls were like. When all the answers come in we'll tally up opinions, line them side by side, guys and gals, and let you score yourself on where you rank on the hep parade. But we want to know what you think first—so start talking!

Casting Light on Beauty

By LOUISE DOOLEY

HOW FALLS the light on your makeup maneuvers? If you've never given it a thought you might consider that an artist is particular about the light he works in because, among other technical reasons, it can affect his choice and distribution of color. Most painters prefer to work in a north light, but we needn't be fussy about that. We should, however, be concerned about where the light falls. And that should be directly on the face. It's the surest way of applying color in proper degree and achieving a natural effect. When light comes from the side or back it throws the face in shadow and we're apt to use a heavy hand with rouge and lipstick.

Face the light; look directly into it, particularly in applying cosmetics for daytime wear, for daylight shows any imperfections or grooming unmercifully. If you can't possibly arrange your bedroom to place the dressing table in a position that allows light to fall on the face rather than on the mirror, use a hand mirror and face the window squarely. It's an all-revealing light, we'll admit, and you might not like looking into the glass from that angle, but it's a sure way of achieving a complexion that looks authentic rather than synthetic.

With proper light to work in there is little danger of slathering on a colored makeup base so that it's streaked and blotchy. Nor will you be apt to stop at the chin, disregarding the neck and throat and leaving an unbecoming mark of demarcation between the natural skin tone and applied tint.

Proper illumination insures more skilful application of rouge, lipstick, and eye makeup. There is less possibility of rouging the cheeks to unnatural brilliance, and mouth and eyes can be played up without looking theatrical or overdone.

VOICE OF THE MOVIE FAN

Letters published in this department should be written on one side of the paper. If you wish a personal reply please inclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Dear Miss Tinée: For years you were a wonderful movie editor—the best, better than all the other writers on all the papers in Chicago put together. . . . For the past year you have been awful—so terrible we simply do not buy The Tribune any more than one day a week, then kick ourselves. . . . We'll be tickled sick when you go on a vacation, and we hope you never return.

A CLUB OF 12 GIRLS.

Dear Girls: No sense in denying yourselves The Tribune. Just shut your eyes and turn the page fast when you come to me. Thanks for letting me know I once was—in your opinion—worth reading.

Dear Miss Tinée: Please send me a list of movie stars. My name is Margie Colletti. Thank you.

Dear Margie: Please send me a stamped and self-addressed envelope for the list of movie stars. Thank YOU!

Dear Miss Tinée: I, too, have my favorite actress—Greer Garson. Recently I've seen quite a few articles which state that Miss Garson is dissatisfied with the matronly roles she has had to play. I am sure no one has ever considered her as being matronly in any part she has played, but instead as a young, beautiful, and great actress. The parts she has already played were for her and her alone. In my opinion Greer Garson, personally and as an actress, is tops. If possible, please print a picture of her. Thank you ever so much.

Greer Garson

ADMIRER.

Dear Admirer: I'm glad you are—you know, an admirer. Sort of brightens things up for a lady. I agree with you about Miss Garson and hand you her picture this morning with pleasure. Come again.

Dear Miss Tinée: Congratulations on the swell writeup of "Lifeboat" in today's Tribune. . . . I'm glad you are still as frank and honest in your reports as you were years ago when I read your reviews regularly while living in Chicago.

HENRY C. SPENCER.

Dear Mr. Spencer: I smile again! After onslaughts of scorching criticism the soft rain of your approval is mighty refreshing. Thank you!

That line of demarcation you used to leave between your powdered face and the skin of throat and shoulders is whisked away!

Now Lucien Lelong creates a Face Powder of seaspray lightness, spring-scented, and with special clinging quality designed for a face, throat and shoulder makeup. It's the delectable answer to the new low-cut fashions that require a portrait-perfect skin.

HOW TO DO the HULA

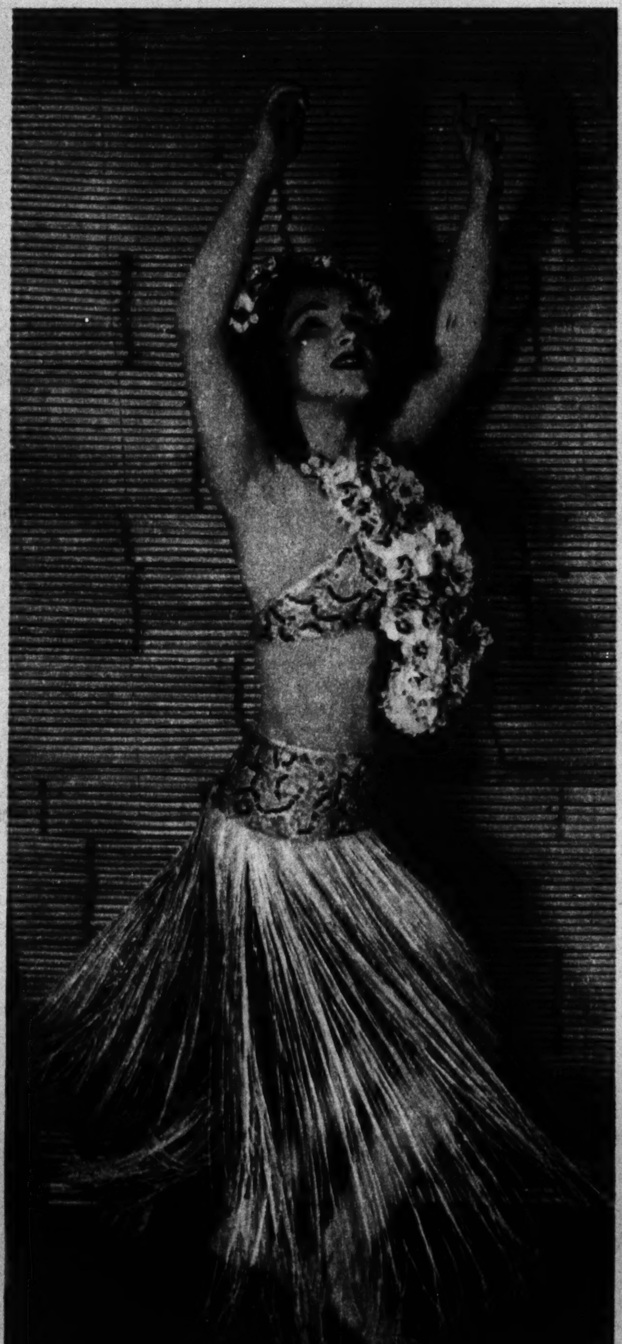
1 The Tribune's high-speed camera catches the gay, rhythmic swirling motions of the Hawaiian dance as performed by Talia Wermuth. The hula is an expressive dance—telling a definite story. Following are portions of the routine that have special meaning.

2 The hands in this position indicate falling rain.

3 This is the dancer's way of indicating an embrace, or love.

4 Hand to elbow, finger to head. Talia is telling of her thoughts.

TALIA WERMUTH, sister of Capt. Arthur Wermuth, the "one-man army," is a Chicago girl who learned the hula so well in New York that she was named the best American Hawaiian dancer by the National Hawaiian society. She has just completed a record-breaking run at the Bismarck hotel here.



5 Hands high bring into the word dance a conception of skies above.

6 Then the hands come down to simulate the ripple of the ocean.

GRAPHIC LITTLE THEATER Presents GAIL PATRICK in "Women in Bondage"

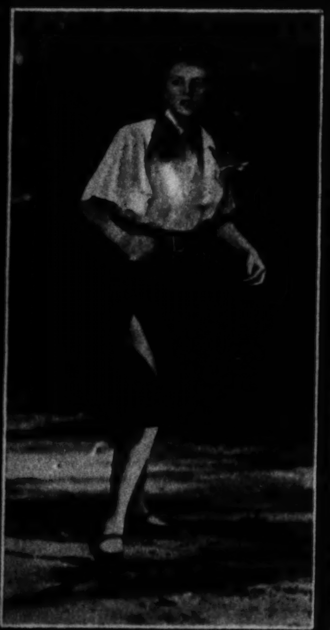
1 Margot Bracken (Gail Patrick), wife of a German officer, arrives at the ancestral estate of Brackenfeld after several years abroad. Because of her high caste she is made section leader of a detachment of girls, one of whom is Toni (Nancy Kelly).

2 Toni is in love with Storm Trooper Heinz Radtke (Bill Henry), whom only a physically perfect woman may marry, since he is 100 per cent Aryan and of the elite guard.

3 After her physical examination for the youth group Toni is rejected due to nearsightedness. Being imperfect she may not now marry Heinz.

4 Spurned by Heinz after he discovers her defect, the dazed girl is comforted by Margot, who has come to hate the brutal Nazi way of life.

5 Her mind affected by her loss, Toni hysterically denounces the government. She is arrested and viciously beaten by Gestapo officials.



6 At bay and despairing, Toni, aided by Margot, escapes and makes a dash for the border.

7 Two Nazi guards catch up with her, arrest her, bring her back to Gestapo headquarters. She makes a break for freedom and is shot to death by the Nazi guards.

8 Margot's husband has been wounded in the wars and can no longer father her children. She is ordered to bear them by Otto Bracken (Alan Baxter), her husband's vicious, Nazi-minded brother. Hearing American planes, Margot leaves a skylight illuminated to guide their bombs and awaits death. (THE END)

Know Your Horses

MORGAN Compactly built and of enduring stock, the Morgan horse is of a breed that is truly American. All efforts to trace its ancestry back beyond a famous stallion of more than a century ago, which was owned by a Vermont innkeeper, have failed. This horse, named Justin Morgan after its owner, was a relatively small animal, only 14 hands in height and weighing less than 1,000 pounds.

It was a dark bay with black mane, black tail, and black legs. Short backed and with long, sloping shoulders, it possessed a close ribbed, well rounded body, and a deep, wide chest. Its legs were short and firmly muscled and its feet were small. All accounts of the animal that have been handed down thru the generations describe it as striking in appearance and with sufficient speed to bring it victories in both trotting and running races.

Continued at stud for about 20 years, the stallion Justin Morgan sired a number of sons and daughters that closely resembled him, altho many were taller and a bit heavier. From these were produced still larger horses, altho the distinct Morgan characteristics were retained to a marked degree. Morgans gradually have increased in height and slightly in weight. Present day examples of the breed average about 15 hands, altho some are as great in height as 16 hands. The average weight is about 1,000 pounds, but some of the breed weigh as much as 1,300 pounds. They usually are chestnut, black, or bay in color. White is uncommon.

They are distinguished for their smooth lines, endurance, docility, and superb bearing. The animals possess fine eyes, small ears, and crested necks that give them a desirable appearance.

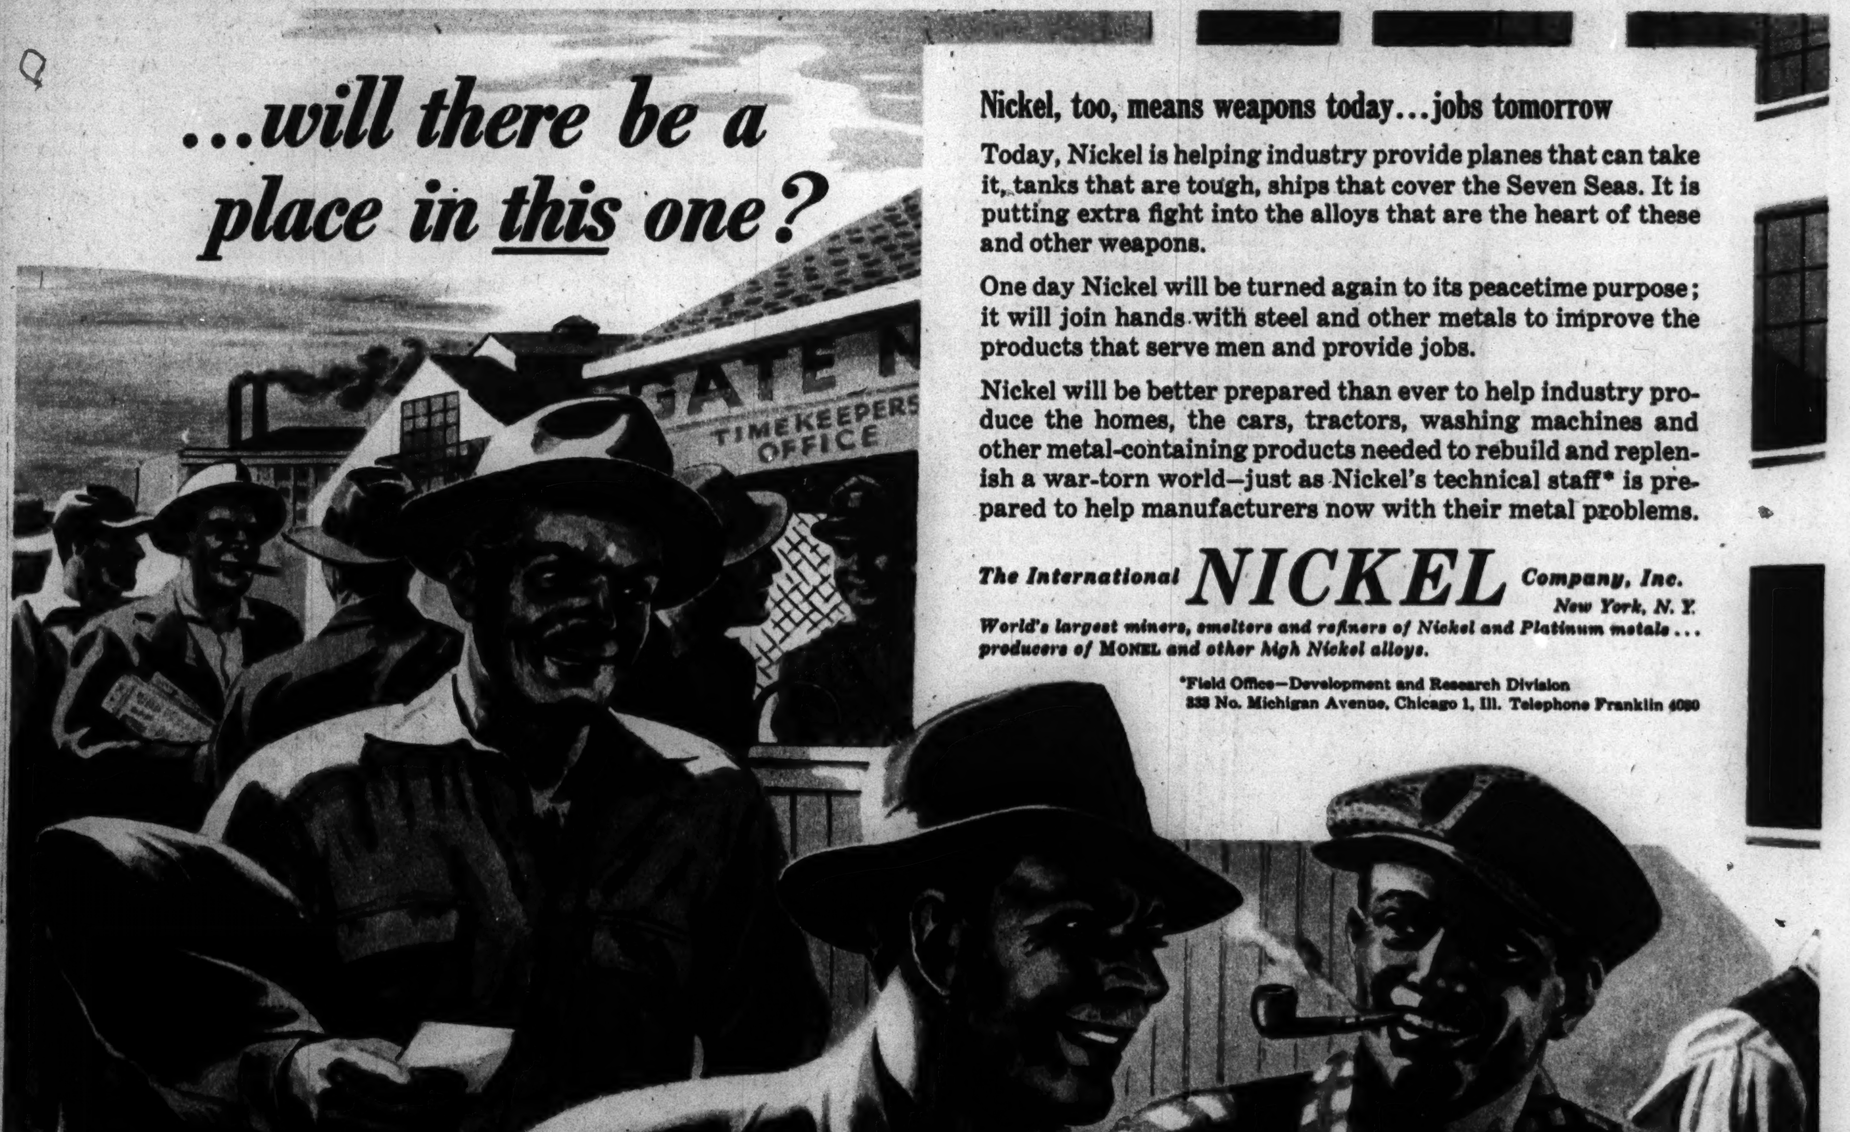
Your bonds mean weapons today...jobs tomorrow

Today he's facing the biggest job any young man ever tackled. The rest of us must back him up with everything we've got.

That not only means buying bonds to pay for the things he's fighting with—the guns, planes, ships and tanks that industry is turning out night and day. It also means buying bonds to protect the things he's fighting for:

1. Peace of Mind while he's away: Your war bond investment fights inflation by keeping extra money out of circulation and thereby helps to keep prices down . . .
2. A job when he gets back: Your war bond investment builds purchasing power—your purchasing power—for the products that industry must have a market for after the war if it is to provide peacetime jobs for both veterans and war workers . . .

Yes, your war bonds are an investment—in his present and future as well as yours. If you buy enough of them, he can't lose and neither can you . . .



Nickel, too, means weapons today...jobs tomorrow

Today, Nickel is helping industry provide planes that can take it, tanks that are tough, ships that cover the Seven Seas. It is putting extra fight into the alloys that are the heart of these and other weapons.

One day Nickel will be turned again to its peacetime purpose; it will join hands with steel and other metals to improve the products that serve men and provide jobs.

Nickel will be better prepared than ever to help industry produce the homes, the cars, tractors, washing machines and other metal-containing products needed to rebuild and replenish a war-torn world—just as Nickel's technical staff* is prepared to help manufacturers now with their metal problems.

Rhubarb or strawberries and wine make a beautiful red soup which may be appetizer or dessert.

Why Not Wine?

By MARY MEADE

WINE COOKERY is an old art, but a new one to many American cooks who are just beginning to realize the infinite possibilities and pleasant surprises there are in a bottle of good domestic wine.

To persons who object to wine because of its alcoholic content it should be pointed out that the alcohol evaporates in the cooking process, leaving nothing but the delectable wine flavor in the food. It would be impossible to get any kind of alcoholic lift out of a bowl of wine soup or a spoon of claret jelly! But the flavor—ah, that's something!

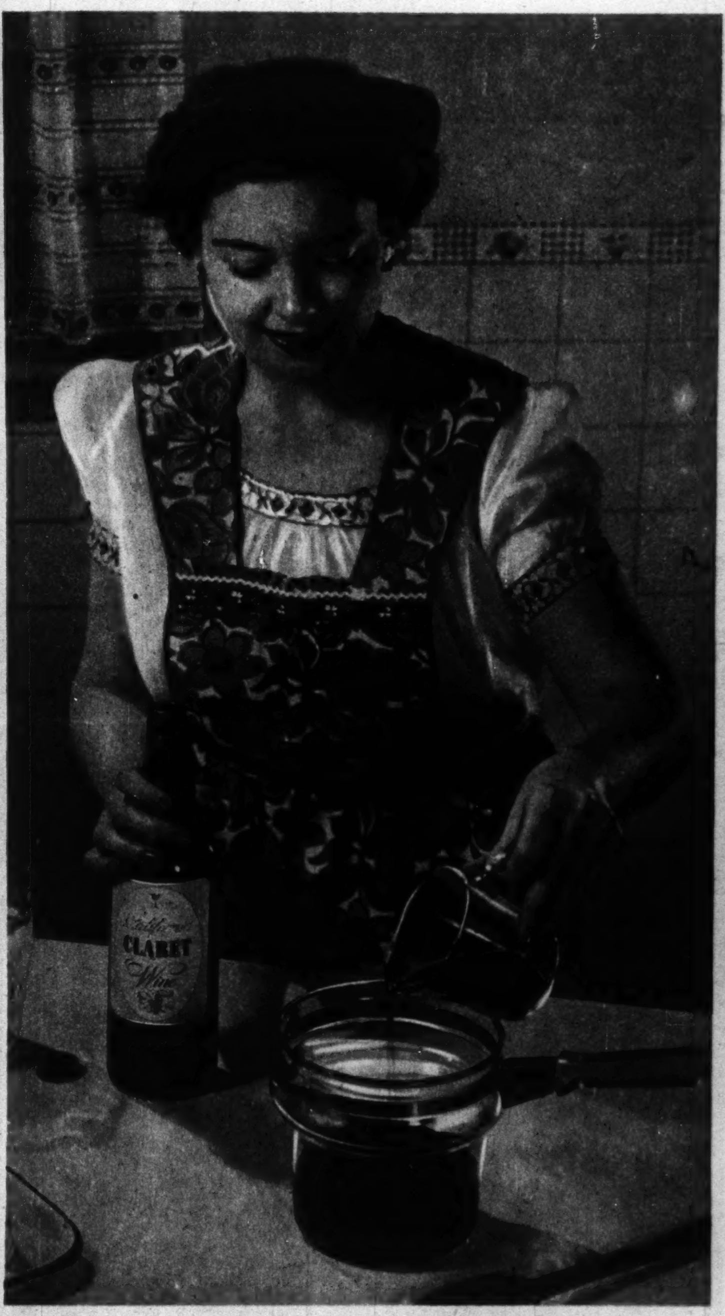
To a cosmopolite who seeks out foreign restaurants, wine fruit soup is not new. Many Europeans love it. Swedish people are noted for their delicious wine-flavored fruit soups, which may be served as first course or dessert. They are beautiful to look at and interesting to eat. Almost any wine may be used, but the red table wines are probably prettier than others. This soup is made with fresh rather than dried fruit.

WINE FRUIT SOUP
(Serves six)

1 tablespoon cornstarch
¾ cup sugar
1 cup water
2 inch stick cinnamon
¼ teaspoon mace
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
3 slices lemon
2 cups claret, burgundy, cabernet, or other red table wine
2 cups rhubarb or strawberries, cut fine

Combine cornstarch and sugar. Add water and cook, stirring constantly, until mixture is thickened and smooth. Add spices, lemon slices, wine, and rhubarb or berries. Cook 5 minutes. Serve either piping hot or well chilled, accompanied by water crackers.

One of the most easily made and delectable of meat or fowl accompaniments is claret jelly. Ruby red in color, it has an almost incomparable flavor and a delightful fragrance.



Claret jelly is easy to make and delicious as an accompaniment for meat or fowl.

CLARET JELLY
(Six glasses)

3 cups sugar
2 cups claret
½ bottle fruit pectin

Measure sugar and wine into a saucepan, bring to boil, add pectin, stirring constantly, and boil ½ minute. Immediately remove from heat and pour into jelly glasses. Seal with paraffin. This jelly usually sets overnight.

CARAMEL ICE CREAM
(Serves six)

1½ cups milk
½ cup sugar
2 egg yolks
⅛ teaspoon salt
2 egg whites
½ cup dark corn sirup

Scald milk in top of double boiler. Place sugar in skillet over low heat until a light brown sirup is formed, stirring occasionally. Pour at once into milk and heat over boiling water until sirup is dissolved. Stir hot milk into well beaten egg yolks. Return to double boiler and cook until mixture coats a spoon. Add salt. Cool and turn into refrigerator tray. Freeze until almost firm. Beat egg whites and corn sirup together with rotary beater until mixture is creamy and thick. Remove frozen custard to bowl, beat until smooth but not melted, and fold in egg white mixture. Return to freezing tray and freeze at low temperature until firm. Makes 1½ pints ice cream.—MRS. MOVIES' MISS AMERICA

● ROSEMARY LA PLANCHE, "Miss America of 1941," who as the "ideal Petty girl" will have an important role, appropriately enough, in the forthcoming beauty carnival, "The Petty Girl," has been winning beauty contests since she was 3 months old.

At 11 Rosemary again was entered by her mother in a contest—this time for the carnival queen of Redondo Beach, Cal. Again she won, and got the habit, capturing no fewer than 50 local and state-wide contests up to the time she became Miss California of 1940 and competed for the Miss America title that year at Atlantic City.

Rosemary lost by one vote, but went back to triumph overwhelmingly in 1941—thence went on to appear in a solo dancing act in the nation's leading theaters and to pose for many commercial artists. Born in Los Angeles, the daughter of a phone company employe, she studied dancing (tap and ballet), took singing lessons, and in high school always played the love interest in school plays.

She is 5 feet 5 inches tall, weighs 118 pounds. Quick-witted, nimble of tongue, she likes to laugh and hopes for a career in light social comedies. She says she's not the heavy drama type.

PERFECT marriages may be "made in heaven," but this particular perfect marriage was held in a flour mill—in Presto Cake Flour.

What we mean is this—we join together three ingredients in Presto Cake Flour—"marry" them—and what this has done to improve women's baking is wonderful!

First, we take a special, soft, winter-wheat cake flour. Then we add just the right amount of the right kind of baking powder, and also the salt. Then we blend them—"marry" them—so completely that a hundred siftings in your own kitchen wouldn't give you the same result.

Naturally, this makes baking with Presto Cake Flour a lot easier and surer. It gives a real "party" touch and quality to everything you bake.

Better cakes — better biscuits —"better everything," in fact!

Not only this Sunday night supper cake, but layer cakes, coffee cakes, muffins and biscuits are quicker and easier with Presto Cake Flour. Better for gravies and sauces, too. And the new consumer-tested recipes on every package are bound to delight you.

"It's the quickest, easiest supper cake recipe I ever used!"

And here's why — it calls for no baking powder or salt. Flour, baking powder and salt are "married" in Presto.

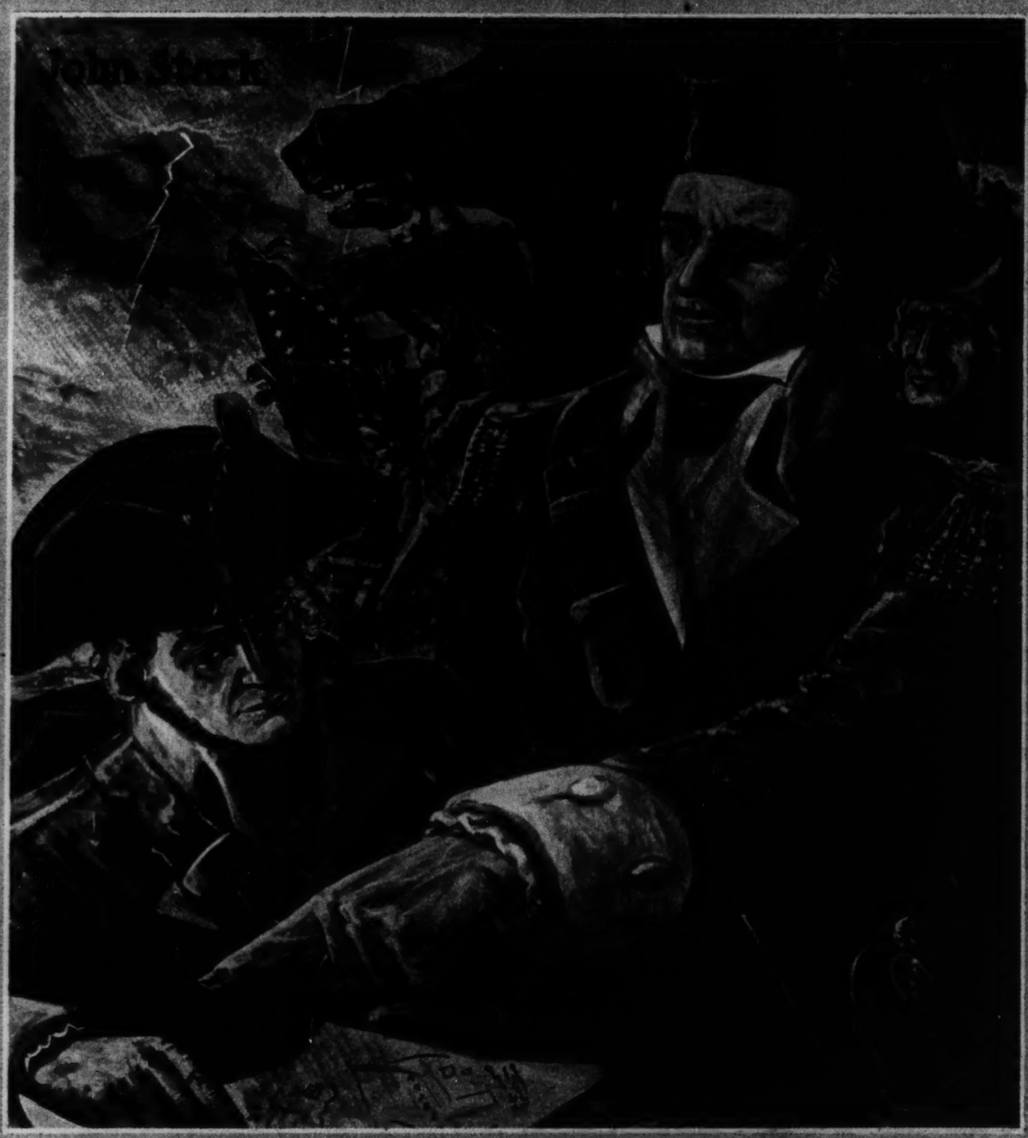
ROMANTIC FIGURES of AMERICAN HISTORY



The dramatic illustration above, by Clara Fargo Thomas and Alexander Varnak, is another of the series appearing currently in this section with biographical sketches. Watch for this feature every Sunday.

THE REVOLUTIONARY period in America produced bold and colorful leaders, not a few of whom were capable of inspiring their followers thru gifts of picturesque expression which served to enhance the dramatic quality of their exploits.

Among these was John Stark, who on one occasion is said to have exclaimed as his troops went into battle:

"There, my boys, are your enemies, the red-coats and Tories; you must beat them or my wife sleeps a widow tonight."

His men, militiamen from New Hampshire, not only defeated the British in this encounter but captured almost all of them.

Stark was born at Londonderry, N. H., Aug. 28, 1728, and reared in a backwoods section in which fighting Indians was one of the principal occupations. During the French and Indian war he served with a famous body of irregulars and scouts known as Rogers' rangers, and by his skill and courage won a captaincy. In 1755 he took part in the campaign that resulted in the defeat of Baron Dieskau, and later was present when the French made their first attack on Fort William Henry on Lake George. In 1758 he was among those who took part in the futile assault on Ticonderoga. The following year he helped take both Ticonderoga and Crown Point. Between the French and Indian war and the Revolution he lived in a New Hampshire settlement known first as Starkstown and later as Dunbarton.

When in the spring of 1775 the news of the battles of Lexington and Concord reached Stark he set out on horseback for Cambridge, Mass. Arriving there, he soon was appointed a colonel and placed at the head of a New Hampshire regiment. He saw action at the battle of Bunker Hill, and after the British evacuation of Boston he helped plan the defenses of New York. Going to Canada in May, 1776, he accompanied the American troops in their retreat after their Canadian reverses.

He distinguished himself at the battles of Trenton and Princeton, but resigned his commission in March, 1777, because certain officers who were his juniors were promoted over him. It was not long, however, until he returned to military service, for in the following July Vermont called upon New Hampshire for help in opposing a British army which, under General Burgoyne, had invaded upper New York. The Vermonters feared, and with sufficient reason, that the British would send raiders into their own region.

Stark was made a brigadier general of New Hampshire militia, and with a brigade of about 1,400 men advanced toward Bennington. When Burgoyne moved a force into Vermont, Stark met it on the Walloomsac river near Bennington on Aug. 16, 1777, and it was there, so it has been said, that he made the appeal previously quoted in this article. After capturing nearly all of the enemy troops in this action he repulsed on the same day another body of British. On the following Oct. 4 he was made a brigadier general of the continental army.

He helped bring about the defeat and surrender of Burgoyne by blocking the British general's line of retreat across the Hudson river. In 1779 he served under General Gates in Rhode Island, and later he was a member of the board that tried Maj. John Andre, the British officer involved in the Arnold treason plot. In the autumn of 1783 Stark was brevetted a major general.

After the war he retired to his farm in New Hampshire, where he died on May 8, 1822.

MOSTLY ABOUT DOGS

By BOB BECKER

It seems unlikely that in 1944 any breed will dislodge the cocker spaniel as the country's favorite pet and companion dog. This specimen, 6 months old, is named McTague's Betty Coed and is owned by Mrs. J. W. McTague.

The Yorkshire terrier is classed among the toys, altho it is a true terrier which originated in England. It's noted for its silky, long coat. This specimen is owned by Mrs. R. A. Crosthwaite of Chicago.

AMERICAN dog fanciers continue to show a preference for the dogs that are rather small sized—the kind that can be kept in the average home or apartment without too much trouble. At least that is the trend which the 1943 American Kennel club registrations indicate, for the first 10 breeds in the list are what can be called companion or pet dogs.

The cocker spaniel still is the number one dog in this country, judging from registrations. In fact, this lovable breed, now in great demand as a pet, is so far ahead of all other breeds (on the basis of registrations) that the race isn't even close. For example, last year the cocker registrations totaled 27,428.

Altho registrations with the A. K. C. aren't a positive index of the popularity of all breeds, because several, like the little toy fox terrier and the popular Spitz, are not eligible for the records, no one will deny that the cocker is America's favorite companion dog today. Behind the cocker in order of registrations we have the beagle in second place, 6,182 registrations; (3) Boston terrier, 5,524; (4) fox terrier, 2,840; (5) dachshund, 2,779; (6) Pekingese, 2,611, and (7) Scottish terrier, 2,482. In eighth place comes the collie, and then the springer spaniel and Pomeranian.

It's noticeable that with the exception of the collie, which is a working breed weighing around 60 pounds, and the springer, which weighs in at 45 to 50 pounds, all the breeds in the first 10 are house pet size. Two are toy breeds, the Pom and the Pekingese.

The splendid job that some of the working breeds are doing in the war as sentry, messenger, and casualty dogs has stepped up their popularity. Pacing the war dogs are the collies, which moved up to eighth place in 1943. Boxers came up to 12th place from 16th a year ago.

Altho many breeds suffered losses in registrations during 1943, a natural development during these days of war, the only major change among the first 10 finds the Scottish terrier skidding from fifth to seventh place. The dachshund and the Pekingese moved ahead of the Scotty.

Today the American Kennel club recognizes 110 breeds. Last year there were registrations in 100 of these 110. Some of the breeds on the books are so uncommon, so few are being bred, and such a small number are being registered that most dog owners never even see them. Of the 110 just 53 breeds had 100 registrations or more in 1943.

It's interesting to look over the A. K. C. report and see how some of the very worth-while breeds are being ignored by the dog fanciers. The situation calls attention to the fact that styles prevail in the world of dogs.

In 51st place is the West Highland White terrier, a smart, plucky little dog which hasn't been noticed much in this country. Another feature of this A. K. C. list is the presence of the old-fashioned pug dog, the favorite of the gay '90s, in 48th place. The Chesapeake Bay retriever ranks 37th, while the golden is in 42d place and the Labrador 28th. Yet these registration positions hardly tell the true story of how widely these breeds are used. The Chesapeake undoubtedly is in greater use in the field today than the other retrievers. It's an American breed and extremely popular with duck hunters.

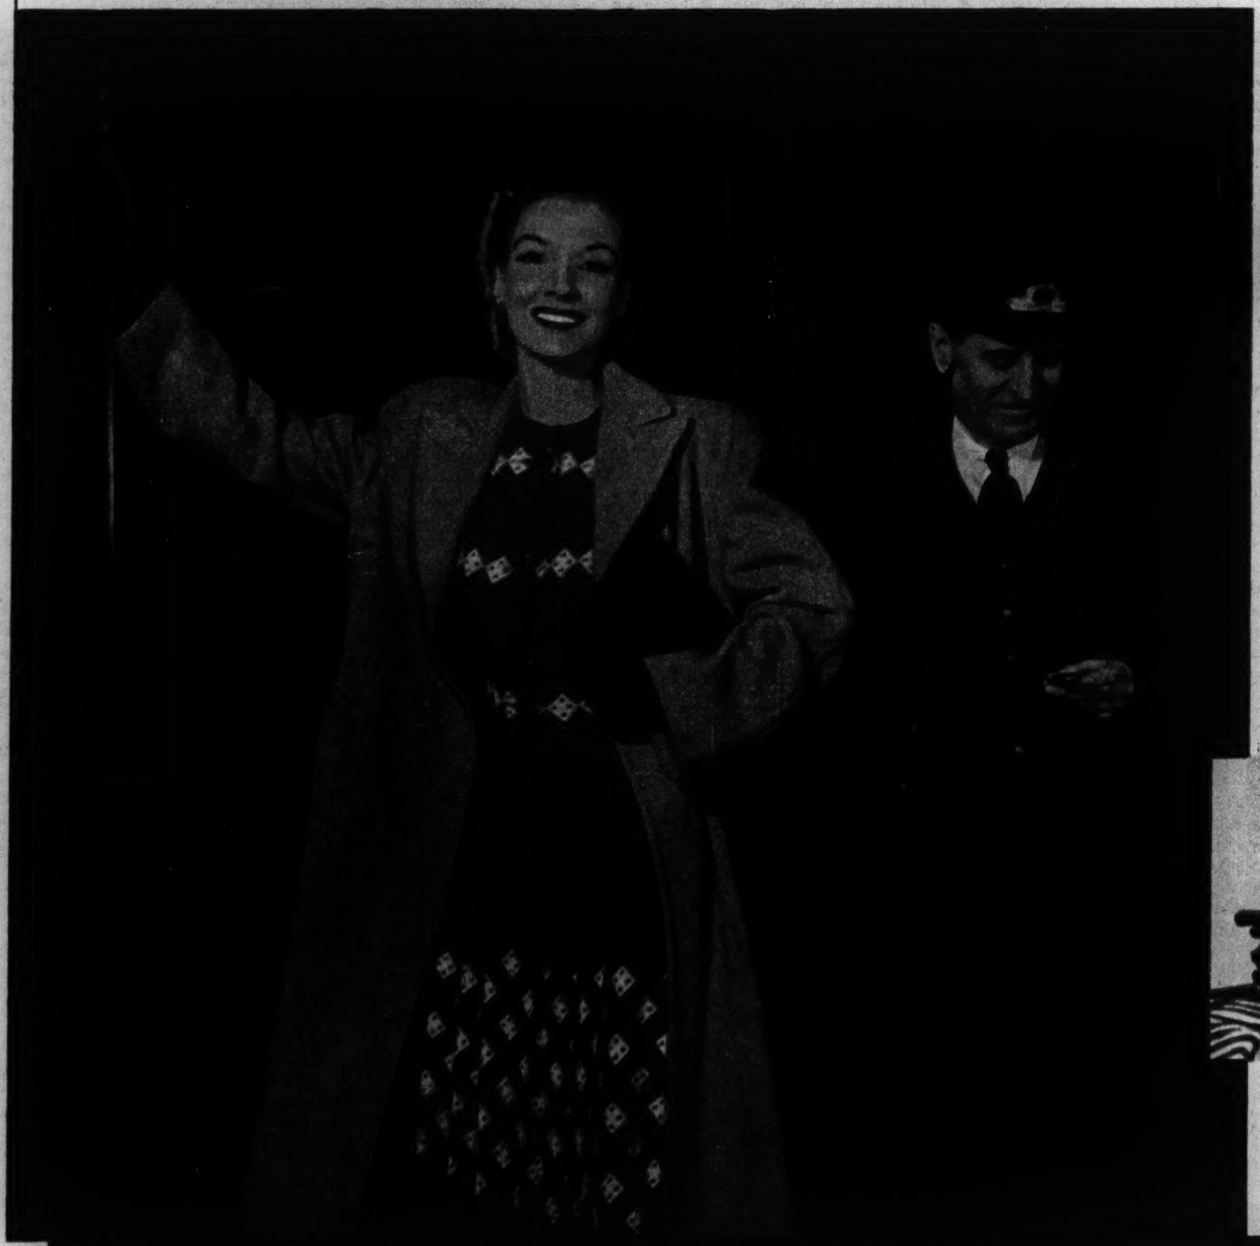
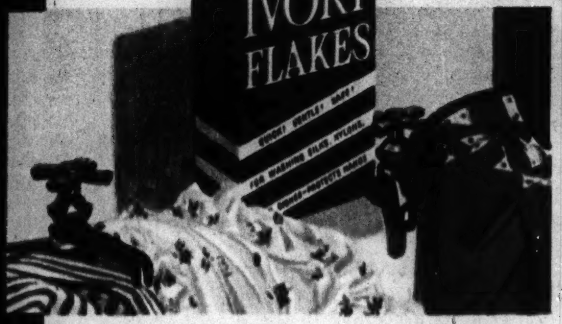
TWICE the Wear with Ivory Flakes Care!"



"NOW IT'S 'HOME SWEET HOME,'" says Mrs. James Engler, who hails from South Dakota. "Before Jimmy joined the Army Air Forces, I traipsed all over the country with him and the band he used to sing with. Glad I learned how to keep clothes fresh and pretty in those days, 'cause now his Army pay won't weather too many shopping excursions! Believe me, I'm glad I heard about twice the wear with Ivory Flakes care.

"DON'T TREAT THINGS ROUGHLY with the wrong kind of soap" is Mrs. Engler's advice to all women. "Change to gentle care with pure, mild Ivory Flakes." Wash tests galore on dresses, lingerie, sweaters, blouses, housecoats prove your hard-to-replace washables give as much as twice the wear with Ivory Flakes care. So pile all your pretty sudsables into the frothy foam of lukewarm Ivory Flakes—stockings, girdles, hankies, curtains, bedspreads and heaps of others.



"MAKE IVORY FLAKES LAST LONGER, TOO!" Mrs. Engler continues. "You may be wasting soap without realizing it. Call a halt to that! Soaps use vital war materials. Measure Ivory Flakes in a cup or glass and add carefully to lukewarm water. You'll get a big bowlful of velvety suds from even a small amount of Ivory Flakes (the flake form of Baby's mild Ivory) if you give 'em a lively swishing."

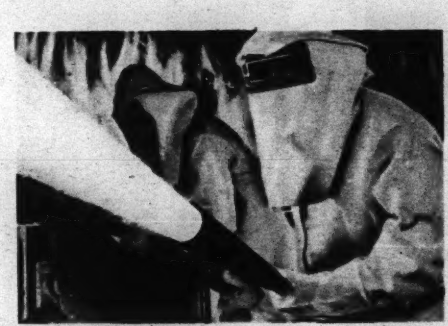
NEW TRIUMPHS OF MODERN MEDICINE

Burn Treatment

Smiles instead of shudders when he comes home!

How a Plane Handler on a Carrier, badly burned while rescuing a Navy Bomber, was saved from death and disfigurement.



"Navy men don't scare easy. On our Carrier I've seen guys take a dive bombing and then thumb their noses at the sky. I've watched them, working cool as cucumbers, as a Nip battlewagon lobbed 14-inch shells at us. But fire is something else again. I know. I'll never forget the day all Hell broke loose when the 'Old Lady' staggered from a torpedo hit. Quick as a cat, flames shot up to the flight deck and pounced on a dozen planes. Almost as quick, our fire fighters went to work."

"You don't think about yourself at such a time. I picked myself off the deck, ran toward a plane. We'd barely pushed it out of danger when—whamo!—a terrific explosion threw a sheet of flame in my face... When I woke up, my face was bandaged like a mummy. I knew what that could mean. A face scarred by fire—and my wife trying bravely to smile. Can you blame me for bawling like a baby? 'Easy, son,' I heard a voice say. 'You're okay—the ship's okay. So go back to sleep.'"

"Later I learned how badly burned I'd really been...that I actually owed my life and my looks to the skill of the Navy Medical Corps. They had hustled morphine, blood plasma and Sulfa into me—applied ointment to my burns. Later at base hospital, those marvelous Navy doctors cut a couple of patches of skin off my chest, then transplanted them to my face, neat as can be...You know, I think those Navy Docs actually improved my looks—judging from the reception I got later at home...Pretty nice, eh?"

How BURNS Are Treated

About two-thirds of the deaths from burns are caused by shock. The rest are mainly from infection. Primarily, burn treatment consists of controlling shock and infection.

Treatment is speedy, skillful, standardized. First morphine is administered, then blood plasma to counteract shock and Sulfa as a preventive measure to combat infection. Next, Tetanus Toxoid may be injected and finally, the burned area gets more Sulfa, dusted on or applied as an ointment.

In severe cases, where the skin is irreparably damaged and the patient is apt to be scarred, plastic surgery is undertaken as soon as infection is under control. These operations are performed by the most skilled plastic surgeons in the world...now in our Medical Corps.

Our boys, moving into battle on land and sea, are confident in the knowledge that today's newer, better medical techniques have thus far brought back alive 97% of our wounded, including burn casualties! Undoubtedly this is one reason the morale of our men is so high.

A SALUTE FROM BAYER ASPIRIN TO THE HEROIC PERSONNEL OF THE MEDICAL DEPARTMENTS OF THE UNITED STATES ARMED FORCES

BAYER

Another Outstanding Medical Triumph

Just as the revolutionary new treatment of burns is making medical history, the discovery of Aspirin in 1898 made medical history, too. Today Bayer Aspirin is known and trusted whenever men of medicine fight pain... as a reliable, sure, speedy pain reliever.

Through doctors' advice and through the privilege of selecting by brand name—freely and with an open mind—the product they prefer, the American people have used more Bayer Aspirin in their homes for the quick, dependable relief of ordinary headache, neuritic and neuralgic pain than any other analgesic. So when you want relief that's trustworthy and quick, ask for BAYER—for almost half a century the famous name in Aspirin.

Only a little while ago, they were one of the family groups so numerous in the Studebaker factories—headed by a father who has seen active service as a Studebaker man for over 28 years.

War has separated many of the famous father-and-son teams that have long made fine craftsmanship one of the great traditions of Studebaker's home community. But steadily, off to the fighting fronts, from the Studebaker factories, move huge quantities of vital war matériel.

Wright Cyclone engines for the famous Boeing Flying Fortress! Tens upon tens of thousands of big multiple-drive military trucks!

It's reassuring to every Studebaker man—on the production line or the firing line—to know that each shipment Studebaker makes today is helping to hasten the dawn of a safe, new tomorrow. When victory is won, marvelously advanced new Studebaker cars and trucks will be built for civilian use.

On his Studebaker job over 28 years

Charles E. Connell began his Studebaker career before either of his air-crew sons was born. From early boyhood, their ambition was to follow in their father's footsteps in the Studebaker plants. That has been a typical family experience in Studebaker's home community for over 92 years.

Cadet Nurse Engaged

DOROTHY M. FORRESTER of the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps to Charles C. Carmichael in the U. S. Army Air Corps.

FROM "HIM"! "Charles is as glad as I am that I'm one of the Cadet Nurse Corps." Dorothy says, "It makes us feel we're part of this war together." Dorothy is wearing the official Cadet Nurse suit of gray wool. It has red epaulets and sleeve insignia. The gray beret matches the suit and looks adorable with her soft-smooth Pond's complexion.

CADET DOROTHY FORRESTER is studying at the California School of Nursing in Los Angeles, not far from her home town in Vista.

Her smooth capable hands are learning to bring comfort at a touch. Eyes smile gratefully after her trim young figure in its crisp and white on-duty uniform—especially becoming with Dorothy's glorious dark hair and the soft, fresh-as-a-new-day look of her lovely complexion.

"I'm a Pond's Cold Cream girl—always." Dorothy says, "I think there's nothing half as nice as Pond's for making your skin feel soft and beautifully clean."

Dorothy believes in a twice-over creaming with Pond's—this way: 1. She smooths Pond's cool, fragrant Cold Cream over face and throat. Pats briskly to soften and release dirt and make-up. Tissues off well. 2. She rinses with more luscious Pond's, working its softening creaminess round and round her face with little spiral whirls of her finger tips. Tissues off again.

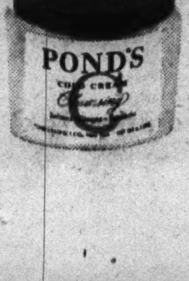
Give yourself this soft-smooth Pond's care that Dorothy loves. You'll see that it's no accident engaged girls like Dorothy, noted society beauties like Mrs. Ellen Tuck Astor and Britain's Lady Morris use Pond's Cold Cream. Ask for a luxurious big jar. Use it every night and every morning—and for in-between beauty clean-ups! You'll love Pond's, too!

She's Lovely! She uses Pond's!



Today many more women use Pond's than any other face cream at any price

ASK FOR A BIG JAR!—Large sizes save glass and manpower! And, it's so luxurious and so quick to dip finger tips of both hands into the lovely wide-topped Pond's jar!

ENLISTED IN A PROUD PROFESSION—Her nurse's "white" lends a special glamour to Dorothy's beautiful eyes and exquisitely smooth skin. "It would be wonderful," she says, "if high school graduates who see this page would enlist as Cadet Nurses. We need more nurses so." As a Cadet Nurse you—like Dorothy—would be given free training and a monthly allowance. Write today to the U. S. Cadet Nurse Corps, Box 88, New York, N.Y. for full information.

"For settin' a good table . . . BREAD COMES First"
It takes more than plenty to eat to "set a good table" these days. It takes the right foods—foods that are nutritious as well as tempting.
Look at the panel at left—and you'll see that bread rates high on that score! Every loaf contains so much that's needed for good nutrition that plenty of good, baker's enriched, white bread belongs in every meal, every day!
Enriched bread supplies Vitamin B1 and Vitamin B2, or riboflavin, which has been called essential to normal growth and sound nutrition. Do you wonder that enriched bread is specifically mentioned in one of the "Basic Seven" food groups your government suggests you eat every day?
Bread's inexpensive — plentiful — useful in countless ways—and always available. See that it comes first on your marketing list.
WHAT'S NEW IN BREAD? JUST LISTEN!
Made to standards approved by the U.S. Government, every loaf of baker's enriched, white bread contains useful amounts of all these important food-values:
VITAMIN B1—helps maintain good appetite and steady nerves.
VITAMIN B2 (riboflavin)—essential to sturdy growth and normal nutrition.
NIACIN—an important factor in the Vitamin B complex.
IRON—helps build good, rich blood.
PROTEIN—helps build tissue and promote growth.
CARBOHYDRATES—supply food-energy readily turned into useful work.
These standards have been assured for all baker's white bread through the joint efforts of the U.S. Government and the Baking Industry in the past two years.
BREAD IS BASIC

Teenie Weenie Man Hours

THERE was a shortage of man power in the Teenie Weenie village due to a lot of Teenie Weenie sickness. The Sailor came down with a measel and then the Dunce caught two measels. The General, the Cowboy and the Turk had Teenie Weenie flu. Gogo caught the mumps and his tiny head swelled up to the size of a ripe olive.

Of course this made a lot of work for the Teenie Weenie Doctor. He was constantly visiting his patients and he could get very little rest. The Lady of Fashion was a great help for she had taken a course in home nursing and if it hadn't been for her the poor Doctor would have had more than he could do.

Naturally all this sickness would have to happen at a very busy time of the year for it was nearly time to get the Teenie Weenie garden started and that takes a tremendous lot of work. The Doctor, the Old Soldier with a wooden leg and the Policeman were quite well, but policemen can't do anything but be policemen and that left only the Old Soldier and the Doctor to do the work. The Chinaman was in good health but he had all he could do in his Teenie Weenie laundry for sickness makes a lot of extra washing. Teenie Weenie sheets had to be changed often to say nothing of pillow slips, towels and Teenie Weenie night gowns and pajamas.

The Teenie Weenie garden should have been plowed and made ready for transplanting the young plants in the quart fruit jar which the Teenie Weenies had made into a greenhouse. There had been a dry spell too, and the young plants in the greenhouse needed water which had to be carried up from the creek and that was a long, hard trip. Altho the Turk was sick he did try to help but it was pretty slow work for a sick Teenie Weenie to carry the water in a couple of acorn buckets.

The Doctor was afraid the young plants would dry up and die from lack of water but the Chinaman, in spite of all his extra work, saved the plants.

"Me get plenty water," he told the Doctor. "Me clarry water in China way."

The little chap fastened two thimbles to a stick which he carried on his stout little shoulder and in that way he was able to bring up a great deal of water in each trip. It was mighty hard work but the Chinaman wanted to save those plants for he eats lots of vegetables.

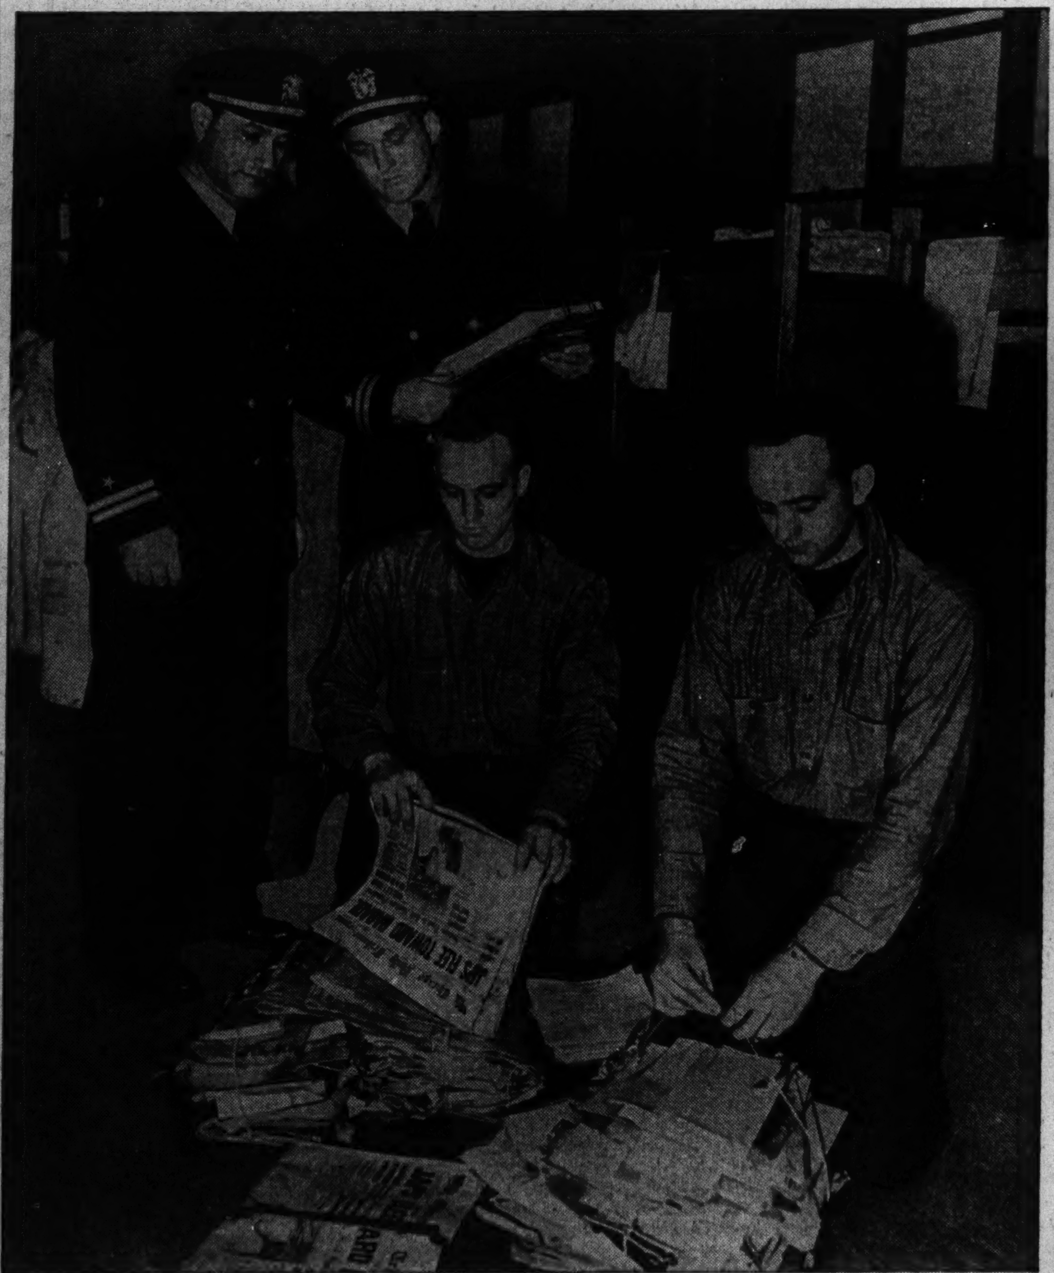
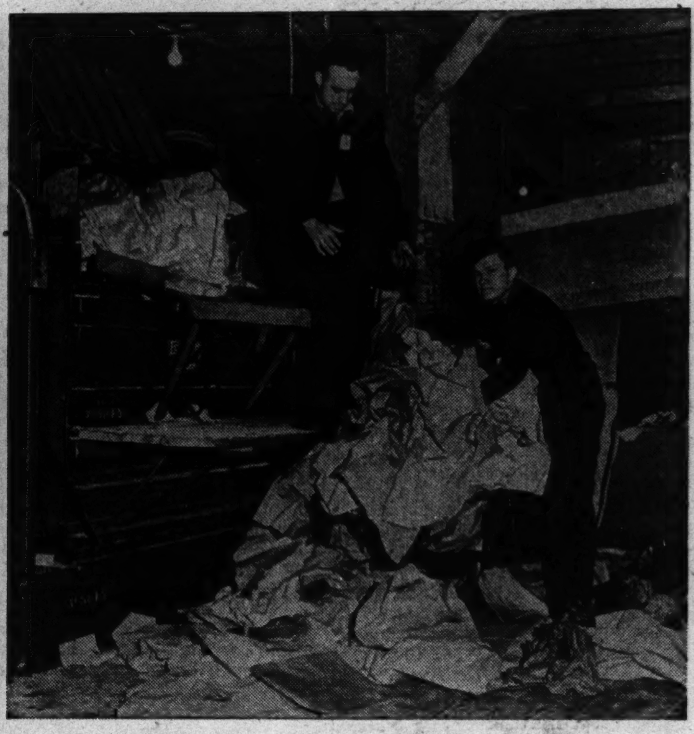
All Departments at Great Lakes Are Active in Paper Salvage Work

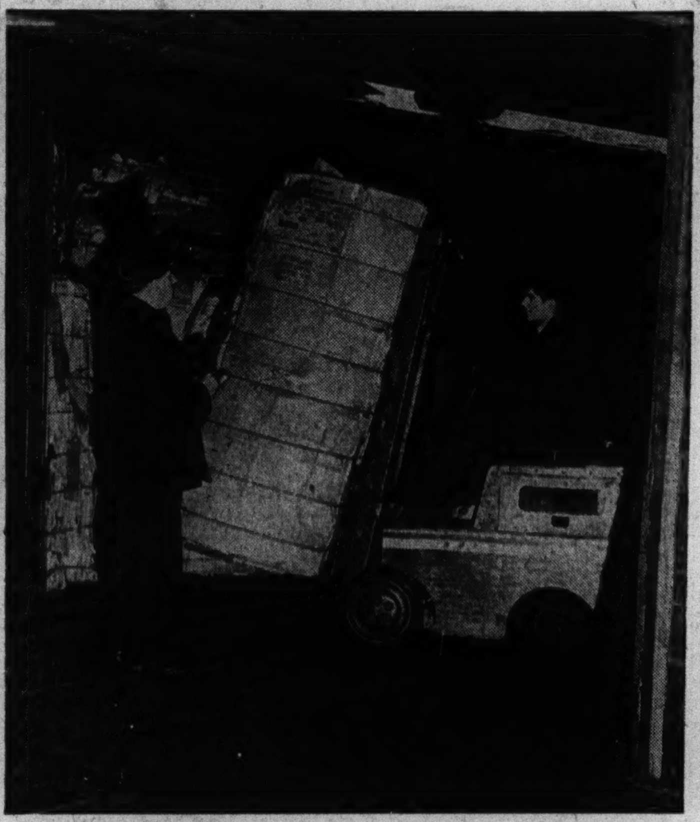


At Great Lakes Naval Training station, which has become one of the largest single salvage centers in the country, each barracks has salvage recruits who assemble paper and bundle it for daily pickup. At barracks 760 Lt. Benny Friedman, former all-American half back and regimental commander of the 31st regiment, and Lt. E. A. Mitchell, station salvage officer, watch R. E. McGuinness and E. E. Werner, apprentice seamen of Chicago, tie up discarded reading matter.



Martin Bell, apprentice seaman from Georgetown, Conn., hands paper to Willis Galvin, storekeeper 3d class, of Pasadena, Cal., to be fed into machine which presses it into bale. These bales are then hand bound with metal wiring and ready for loading for shipment.

Being careful not to damage the box, Howard Bucquet, apprentice seaman of Los Angeles, Cal., inserts paddle into carton top. All corregated cartons are opened and broken down with sharp edged paddles made from scrap materials in the Great Lakes service school shops.



Bales of waste paper are then moved from the machines in trucks and placed inside box cars. Morton Karp, seaman 1st class of Cleveland, O., tallies the load as Joseph Gama, seaman 1st class of Waukegan, manipulates truck.

Joseph Sherman, seaman 3d class of Youngstown, O., reassembles egg cartons which have been repaired. These cartons are returned to dealers for re-use with fillers and flats intact.

After breaking down, cartons are flattened and sorted for size. They are then stored until sold thru bidding. Allan Cohen, seaman 2d class of Freeport, Ill., and Bob Elliott, Wellesly, Mass., inspect cartons before cataloguing them. [TRIBUNE Photos by Julius Gantter.]

PAPER SAVINGS METHOD MADE NAVY'S MODEL

All Cartons Used Several Times.

The paper salvage program at Great Lakes Naval Training station has become a model for salvage activities at other naval stations. One of the largest single salvage centers, the station has passed into the realm of big business and officials hope to top the half million dollar mark in salvage sales this year.

During March an estimated 868,725 pounds, or approximately 434 tons, of corrugated cartons alone were sold for $16,950 and 541,220 pounds, or 270 tons, of scrap paper, which included newspapers, magazines, manila, and shavings brought $5,785, making a total of $22,735.

Sales Total $412,640.

From April 1, 1943, to March 31, 1944, an estimated income of $412,640 was derived from all salvage enterprises at the station. These included the salvage of paper, rubber, and miscellaneous scrap.

Crews of sailors work on shifts, totaling 18 hours each day, segregating, classifying and preparing salvaged materials for redistribution and resale.

"The most important phase of our plan is segregation at the source," said Lt. E. A. Mitchell, station salvage officer, who in civilian life was a food manufacturer in Evansville, Ind. "We have broken waste paper down into five catagories—corrugated or carton material; kraft paper, which includes brown wrapping paper and paper bags; magazines and newspapers; manila paper, and enevlopes and shavings from the print shops."

Each Barracks Helps.

Each department and each barracks of the station has its own problem of segregation and classification and from 60,000 to 65,000 men turn a hand to perfecting the program. Every building has separate containers for trash, for newspapers and magazines and for corrugated material. These containers are picked up daily and taken to handling centers where they are resorted, to avoid error, then baled for sale or sent to the refabricating mills. When the refabrication is completed the material is returned to the centers for storage and cataloging.

Many cartons are sold back to manufacturers from whom they were received packed with merchandise. The price per carton runs from 10 to 60 cents each, depending on the size.

Huge Daily Movement.

At the end of the month salvaged paper is cataloged and listed and the lists sent to dealers in waste materials. Bids are submitted and contracts assigned. These contracts account for the movement of three trailer truck loads and two box cars of waste paper each day.

Nat a piece of paper is scuttled at the station. Even that which has been contaminated by food stuffs is examined by a salvage officer before it is allowed to be destroyed.

Cartons, which have come into Great Lakes bearing shoes, eggs, and general equipment have not one, but three lives. They are used again and again for short time storage.

Said Lt. Mitchell: "Ours is a full time job, but we have discovered it pays. Not only are we returning money to the government, but we have entered into an era of conservation which will hold over to post-war days."

SLATE 3 SHOWS FOR EVANSTON YOUTH THEATER

Beginning a new policy of night performances, the Children's theater of Evanston will give "Beauty and the Beast" at 8 p. m. Friday in the Nichols school in Evanston. Two other performances of the play will be given at 10 a. m. and 2:30 p. m. Saturday.

The Friday night production for parents and children will be a test case for the theater. Sponsors are trying it out as their contribution toward preventive measures against juvenile delinquency. "National authorities tell us that healthful, supervised parent-children recreation is one great guard against rising delinquency," said Miss Winifred Ward, director of the theater.

The second reason for the Friday show is that Saturday performances have been sold out all year. It is hoped that the night performance will take care of the overflow. If successful, the policy will be followed next year.

Among the features of the Friday night show will be a curtain talk by Miss Ward; introduction to the audience of the Children's Theater board members, a boy and girl from each Evanston grade school who serve yearly as an advisory body to Miss Ward; an exhibit of theater production pictures and posters in the hall of the school, and an "Ask Me" booth from which young board members will answer questions about the play. The booth will be modeled after those Miss Ward saw in Moscow when she visited the Russian Children's theaters.

"Beauty and the Beast," the classic fairy tale, also was presented yesterday at the Haven school. In the casts for the five productions are Day Zimmerman, Clovis Heimsath, Ann McFerran, Roy Kardell, James Watson, Stephen Head, Patricia Ring, Burnell Johnson, Susan Haugen, Barbara Meyer, Ted Oppelt, Bill Sadler, Don Clippinger, Houghton Baer, Dick Burrit, Frank Kreigel, Alfradine Parham, Bill Holmes, and Bruce MacGibeny.

Geraldine Siks Directs Play.

The author and director of the play is Geraldine Brain Siks, associate director of the Children's Theater. Her assistants from Northwestern university's school of speech are Grace Simonson and Louise Pettit. Settings are by Phyllis Kendall, lighting by Herb Dover, properties by J. Francis Crothers, and costumes by Maurine Mitchell.

"The greatest care is being taken to make the production the loveliest of the year, interesting to both adults and children," Miss Siks said. "It has magic, enchantment, and suspense."

Theater Is 19 Years Old.

The theater has been in existence 19 years, but has no building of its own. Thomas A. Gonser, vice president of Northwestern university, has said, "I think the Children's Theater of Evanston is a splendid thing, for this war period and for all time. It should be made permanent."

"Beauty and the Beast" is the last show the theater will present until August, when a play will be done for the summer session speech students at Northwestern university.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, April 17.

Grow flowers in your garden and if the space is very small utilize it for flowers entirely. There is little that can be grown in the way of vegetables in a limited space but there are possibilities for growing flowers, and especially low growing kinds.

Plants received at Easter, especially foliage plants, should remain indoors for they have been growing in damp greenhouses and the changes to varying conditions of the home is not beneficial.

Tuesday, April 18.

Thin vegetable plants in the rows as soon as they can be handled. Few home gardeners realize the importance of thinning. It stands to reason that plants growing close together can never bear their maximum number of flowers or fruits, and those that are utilized for their edible leaves cannot produce as large a plant unless given room to do so.

All gardening operations should be done on time. Work the ground when it is dry enough so that it does not stick to the tools but do not delay until it is very hot.

Wednesday, April 19.

There is nothing finer or more attractive than a well kept, luxuriant lawn, but to have such a lawn requires constant attention, at least during the first three years when it is becoming thoroly established. Give it an application of a complete plant food or fertilizer, if it has not been done.

Thursday, April 20.

Now is the proper time to plant magnolias, such as magnolia stellata and soulangeana. The tulip tree makes a fine hardy tree for suburban sections, but if you want a shade tree and one that grows almost as rapidly as a willow, try the Chinese elm. It can be trimmed to almost any shape.

Take care of the trees while they are young and keep it up every year or two and huge branches will not have to be removed when they grow into veterans. Never overplant by using too many trees for some will need removal just when they have attained an attractive appearance. Watch for insects and spray on time.

Friday, April 21.

Just as soon as the fast growing and rapidly spreading perennials are large enough to transplant separate them. These include the hardy asters like Harrington's pink, physostegia vivid, the Oswego tea or monarda, and the golden glow.

As soon as the buds show on peonies, disbud for larger bloom. An application of plant food will help them develop. Remove all old foliage from around hollyhocks and delphiniums. It is helpful to spray the ground around these plants with Bordeaux mixture.

Saturday, April 22.

Prune evergreens but not severely. Cut back the growth made last season, but no other. Cut back those shrubs that flower on the new wood, such as hydrangeas, althaeas, buddleias and others that have been winter killed.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield park conservatory.

CROWN POINT CHURCH 100 YEARS OLD

PLAN $700,000 Y BUILDING IN HARVEY AREA

Industries Pledge Aid to Projects.

A $700,000 Young Men's Christian association building, a memorial to Thornton Township soldiers of World War II., is being planned for Harvey when war time building restrictions are lifted. A campaign to raise $300,000 thru neighborhood donations is now being organized. Services of the new building would be available to the 80,000 persons living within a five mile radius of Harvey.

The campaign will be undertaken the latter part of May, it was decided recently by a committee of the Harvey Association of Commerce headed by John R. Hoffman, president of the National Bank of Harvey.

Get Pledge of Support.

Frank A. Hathaway, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Chicago, speaking for the board of managers, has assured the committee that when $300,000 is raised thru local contributions, an additional $150,000 will be appropriated by the Y. M. C. A. of Chicago. In addition, $250,000 for the dormitory will be advanced from the productive funds of the Y. M. C. A. of Chicago.

According to Hathaway, "every industry in Harvey has given us assurance of financial support. Our campaign in Harvey and surrounding communities, such as Blue Island, Riverdale, South Holland, Dixmoor, and Calumet City, probably will bring us the balance of the $300,000."

Building of Two Sections.

The activities portion of the five story building, including gymnasia, a swimming pool, clubrooms, and lounges, would cost $450,000 and the additional $250,000 would be used to build the dormitory section. Plans of the building can be completed by January, 1945, and construction would begin thereafter as soon as government building restrictions were lifted.

Money collected during the campaign will be invested in short term government bonds on behalf of the Y. M. C. A. until construction begins.

A survey, made by A. R. Freeman, state secretary of the Y. M. C. A., at the request of the Harvey Association of Commerce, is the basis of the committee's decision to build a Harvey Y. M. C. A.

Cites Recreation Needs.

According to the survey, organized recreational facilities on a noncommercial basis for youth in Harvey "are so limited as to be almost nonexistent. There is an obvious and urgent need for a recreation center in Harvey with facilities offering not simply a place where youth may go but where leisure time may be properly and constructively used."

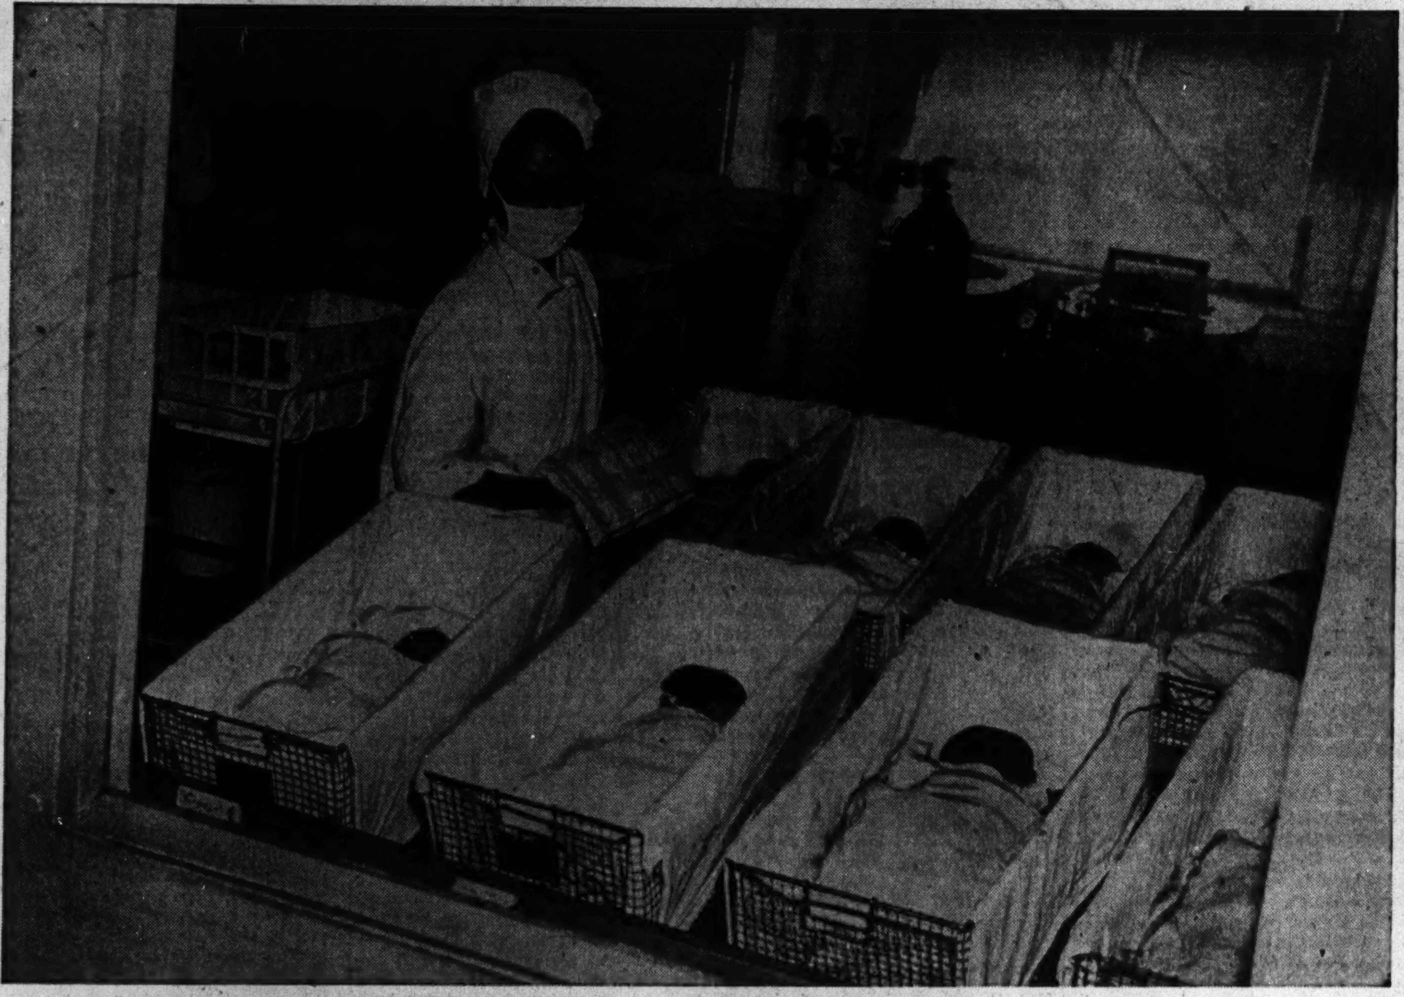
Busy Provident Hospital Seeks Fund for Post-War Needs



Many of the babies cared for in the nursery of the Provident hospital, 426 E. 51st st., are the children of service men. Mrs. Louise Williams Walton, whose husband is in the navy, is the nurse in charge of the infants. A $200,000 campaign for post-war needs for the hospital is now being held.

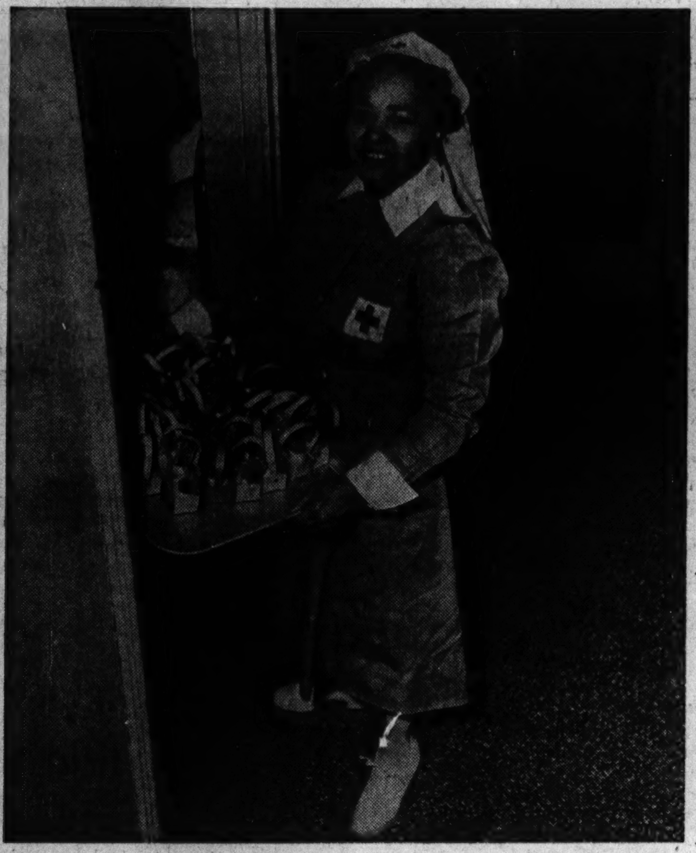
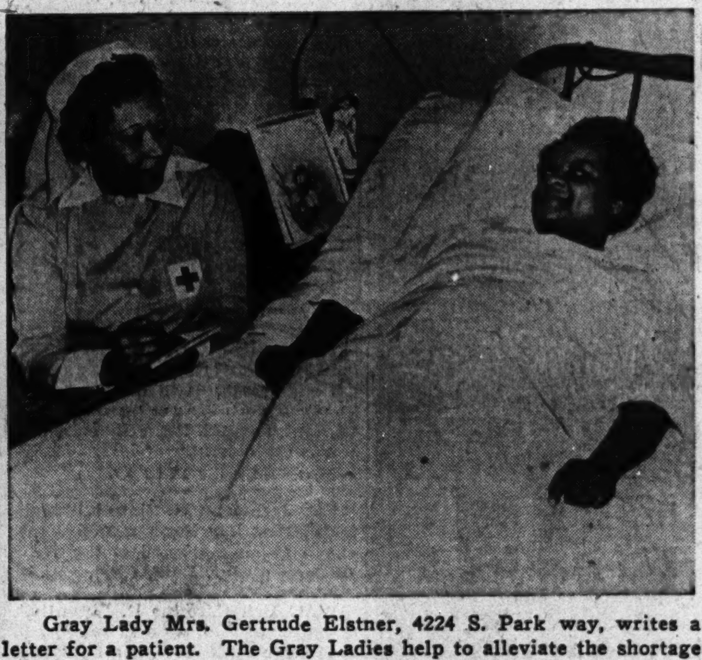
Albertine Burrell, supervisor of the surgery floor, instructs Cadet Nurse Dorothy Prater in charting. There are 44 cadet nurses at Provident hospital, which was the first hospital to offer nurses training for Negro girls.

Because of the large number of persons who come to the clinic, every patient is fluoroscoped to determine if tuberculosis is present. Since the unit was established in 1939 with Dr. J. Edmund Bryant in charge, 35,000 patients have passed thru this room and 3 per cent were found to be positive. An average of 30 patients a day are examined.

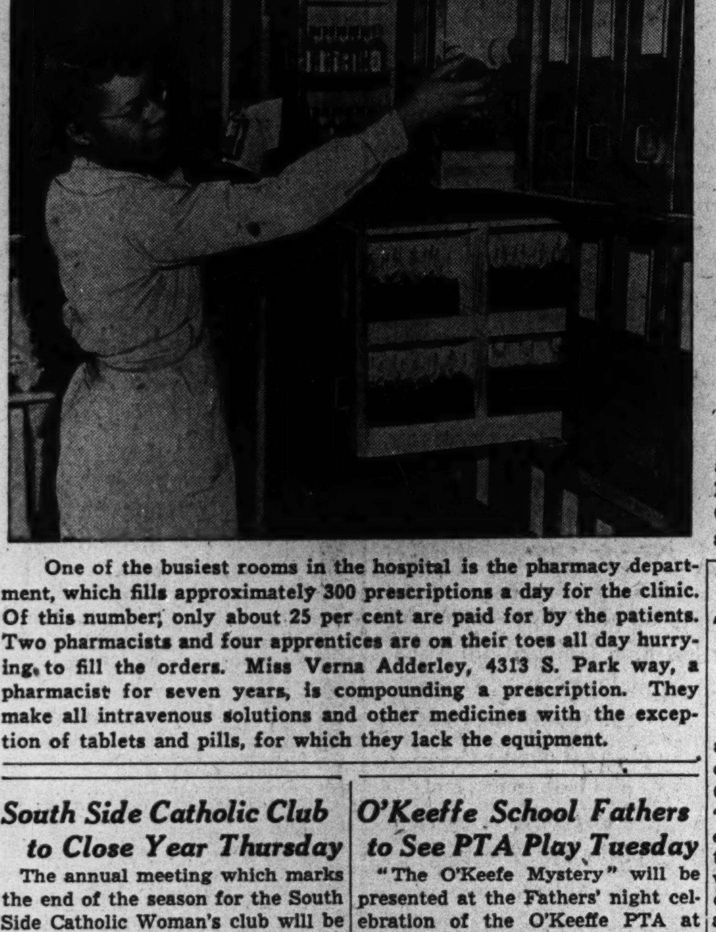


Mrs. Lillian Sharp, 5417 Michigan av., one of the 10 Gray Ladies who spend considerable time with the patients, passes out plants to make the day a little brighter for the ailing.



Gray Lady Mrs. Gertrude Elstner, 4224 S. Park way, writes a letter for a patient. The Gray Ladies help to alleviate the shortage of help since 50 doctors, nurses, and assistants have answered their country's call.

Here the interns look over the new operating room and pass approval of the immaculate, shiny new equipment. The men in white, left to right, are: Allwyn Gatlin, Baron Denniston, Albert Spaulding, Colber Davis, resident in surgery; Charles Mellon, James M. Douglas, and Boliver B. Moore, resident in obstetrics.



One of the busiest rooms in the hospital is the pharmacy department, which fills approximately 300 prescriptions a day for the clinic. Of this number, only about 25 per cent are paid for by the patients. Two pharmacists and four apprentices are on their toes all day hurrying to fill the orders. Miss Verna Adderley, 4313 S. Park way, a pharmacist for seven years, is compounding a prescription. They make all intravenous solutions and other medicines with the exception of tablets and pills, for which they lack the equipment.

Starting as an apprentice substation operator, the Edison veteran has been promoted thru the ranks to chief operator, reserve relief operator, supervisor of the operating division, and supervisor of storage batteries. Last year he was appointed engineer of maintenance.

PLAN PAGEANT NEXT WEEK TO MARK BIRTHDAY

Special Rites Will Be Held.

One hundred years of faith, worship, and service will be commemorated next week by the First Presbyterian Church of Crown Point, Ind., with a special program of services, meetings, speeches, and a pageant.

Thomas H. Adkins.

The Rev. Thomas H. Adkins, pastor, has issued invitations to all churches and other organizations in the vicinity, as well as to churches constituting the presbytery of Logansport, to attend the centennial week program.

Established in 1844, this was the first Presbyterian church in Lake county, Ind., and the first church of any denomination in the county to have a spire.

Organized in Log Courthouse.

Organized in the log courthouse in Crown Point, it was three years before the congregation succeeded in erecting a church building. Since then there have been three buildings, each on the same location, and 17 ministers have held the pastorate.

Under the Rev. Mr. Adkins, pastor for the last 22 years, church members have increased from 160 to 460. Thirty-seven are now in the service of our country.

This year the church has sponsored the establishment of a new church, the Community Presbyterian Church of Indiana Hill, between Crown Point and Gary, which is being formally opened this month. Among the other organizations which receive contributions and support from the First Presbyterian church are Hanover college and the Kosciusko Boys' and Girls' camp at Winona lake.

List Centennial Program.

The centennial program is as follows:

Sunday, April 23—10:30 a. m. guest speaker: the Rev. Roy L. Smith, author, radio lecturer, and editor of the Christian Advocate.

Tuesday—8 p. m. youth night guest speaker: Dr. George M. Gibson of the United Church of Hyde Park, Chicago.

The prolog will be an "Indian Lullaby" and "Salute to the Dawn." The following eight episodes will include quartet singing, "Auction of Pews," an "Early Session Meeting," "The Church's Stand on Slavery and Temperance," "The Promenade in New Parlors," "Closing Exercises in Sunday School Using Great Revival Songs," and "The Part Music Plays in Our Present Day Service."

S. SIDE YOUTHS ENLIVEN HOME OF V-12 SAILORS

Refurnish Quarters on Michigan Ave.

Altho the American service man is the best fed, clothed, and sheltered soldier in the world, it is the families and friends of the men in service who supply the extras.

Acting as liasion between the military and the members of communities the Red Cross camp and hospital committee makes every effort to coördinate the needs of service men with what local groups and individuals have to offer.

The Red Cross' most recent victory is the enthusiasm of students at the University of Chicago High school to refurnish and enliven the quarters of the 55 navy V-12 students at Illinois Institute of Technology, who were housed in an old fraternity house at 3337 Michigan av.

At the request of the Red Cross camp and hospital committee Lester Smith of the arts and crafts department at University High, volunteered to present the problem to the school's student council.

The students made a tour of the V-12 house and upon seeing the building they were "sold" on the idea. They formed committees and met with the men living at the house, and discovered what was most needed were recreation rooms.

The next problem was to get funds. This they solved by holding a bazar and carnival. Altho the admission fee was small, 15 concessions proved lucrative and the net result of such simple pleasures as throwing balls at teachers' pictures and dousing school mates in water, was $335.

Make Items in School Shop.

With this money, the four committees bought materials for handmade furnishings and ordered what they could not construct themselves. The decorating committee painted walls of the basement, now a recreation room, and supplied paint for the decoration of the lounge. The repair committee made ironing boards, bookcases, lamps, and a bench in their shop classes at University High.

The sewing committee went to work on brightly colored draperies for the lounge and study, and are having slip covers made for the lounge furniture. Games, records, and a victrola were collected by the recreation committee, who also subscribed to several magazines for the navy quarters.

Plan Tea for Donors.

When the project is completed, a tea is to be held for the teen-age donors, the V-12 students, and the Red Cross committee, which acted as coördinator of the project.

This, the Red Cross says, is an outstanding example of coöperative effort for the benefit of service men. Fraternal societies, church groups, women's clubs, civic organizations, and trade unions are among the groups which have participated in the Red Cross camp and hospital plan.

S. SIDE PROGRAM TO MARK 100TH YEAR OF Y. M. C. A.

A centennial committee has been named by the South Shore department of the Y. M. C. A. to plan the celebration of the 100th anniversary of the Young Men's Christian association.

Paul L. Anderson, 7722 East End av., is chairman of the committee. Other members are: Elmer Johnson, 8139 Crandon av.; Harry Pulling, 7621 Colfax av.; Wilbur Guild, 8146 Luella av.; Charles Williams, 7721 Colfax av., and Melvin Rehnquist, 8114 Ellis av.

Anderson said "The South Shore Y has an especial interest in the centennial of the Y. M. C. A. because this 100th anniversary year has been chosen as the year when our department will conduct its campaign for a new Y building in this community. The Chicago association has designated this South Shore project as a major centennial year undertaking of the Chicago association of the Y. M. C. A.

GLACIER PRIEST SAYS SOLDIERS ENJOY ALASKA

Rev. Hubbard to Speak Tomorrow Night.

Alaska is rating so high with American soldiers sent there that many are talking of going back after the war to make it their home, says the Rev. Bernard R. Hubbard, the "Glacier Priest," who will lecture on "The Aleutian Battleground" at 8:30 p. m. tomorrow at the Mount Carmel High school gymnasium, 64th st. and Dante av.

Father Hubbard.

"People think of Alaska as stretches of ice and snow," Father Hubbard chuckled, "but down in the southeastern part, there are miles of heavy forested land with fertile soil and luxuriant, almost subtropical, vegetation.

"Certainly it gets cold in the winter, like it does in the middle west, and there are places in the far northern part of Alaska where the temperature is far below zero," Father Hubbard said.

Explores Alaska for 17 Years.

Father Hubbard, who has been exploring Alaska for 17 years and is one of the outstanding authorities on the northwestern tip of the continent, is a ruddy faced, vigorous man who looks 10 years younger than his 56 years. With iron gray hair, bristling eyebrows, a jutting jaw, and a sudden, warming smile that lights up his face, he has endeared audiences all over the country.

"I tell you," he exclaims, "there on our doorstep lies a land worth more than any nation in continental Europe. Alaska can support 40 million to 50 million people without crowding and 10 million could live by dairy farming alone. It would make a nation the size of Norway, Sweeden, and Denmark, with resources exceeding all three put together?"

Tells Natural Resources.

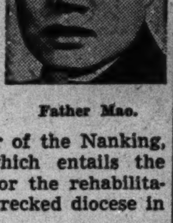
He ticks off the resources as he speaks: "It has all the wonderful advantage of a coast line to compare with Norway and Sweden. It has the advantages of coal and metal—silver, platinum, copper, and tin to compare with Poland and Rumania. And it is equal or superior in its agricultural possibilites to Germany and the low countries.

"Add to that forests, streams, mountains, fisheries superior to any in the world, valleys, magnificent weather, subtropical vegetation and you have God's riches in full measure."

He smiles as he says, "Alaska is so big I still don't know it all. Most people don't realize its vastness. They don't know that it covers one-half million square miles and that it is so enormous that when you talk about one part of it, what you say doesn't hold true for other parts."

Father Mao to Give Farewell Address Today

The Rev. John T. S. Mao will give his farewell sermon today in the church that he established here in 1940. It is St. Therese Chinese Catholic mission, 2302 Wentworth av., the first Chinese Catholic mission in the midwest. He also started the Chinese Catholic school and Chinese C. Y. O. Recently he was appointed procurator of the Nanking, China, diocese, which entails the raising of funds for the rehabilitation of this war wrecked diocese in occupied China.



Father Mao.

Father Mao has been touring Canada and the United States, making surveys and dispatching reports to the Chinese government for the rehabilitation program after the war. He visited 80 towns and villages studying the fisheries, farms, lumber camps, hospitalization, factories, and manual work. He believes China will pattern its program after the democratic system of the United States and Canada.

NEGRO HOSPITAL OPENS $200,000 FUND CAMPAIGN

Tell Provident Record as Drive Starts.

The $200,000 drive for Provident hospital is on. The campaign, which is expected to last until the middle of next month, is being undertaken to establish a reserve that will enable the hospital to maintain its standards of medical efficiency against its growing post-war needs. The Julius Rosenwald fund has offered a gift of $50,000 when the hospital raises $150,000.

Provident hospital at 426 E. 51st st., is located in the former Chicago Lying In hospital. It moved to this location from 36th and Dearborn sts. in 1933. Medical authorities consider it one of the finest Negro hospitals in the world.

Provident has 167 beds, including bassinets, about 88 physicians on the attending staff, 47 graduate nurses, and 44 cadet nurses. It has the largest clinic in Cook county, with the exclusion of the County hospital.

It is the first hospital to offer the Negro physician accredited post-graduate training, its training school is the oldest Negro school of nursing in existence, and the Rockefeller Foundation has awarded two teaching fellowships for nurses to the hospital and a number of scholarships have been made available to Provident nurses for advanced study in nursing education at the University of Chicago.

The pride of the hospital is its fluoroscopy department, the equipment of which is valued at $1,500. It was originally placed in the Provident by the Julius Rosenwald fund for tuberculosis research by the University of Chicago and when the project was completed it was donated to the hospital. Of the 35,000 patients fluoroscoped since 1939, 3 per cent were found to have the disease. Dr. J. Edmund Bryant, in charge of the unit, says approximately 30 new patients a day pass thru the department. It is the only hospital that makes such an examination compulsory for every patient who is attended at the clinic.

These examinations are also made upon Negroes who may be exposed to tuberculosis patients, for cardiac pathology, and in pre-natal cases.

Another department which is always bustling with activity is the pharmacy section. Two pharmacists and four apprentices are active all day long filling prescriptions, approximately 300 a day, 75 per cent of which are given out free of charge.

Provident is affiliated with the University of Chicago for teaching purposes. The nurses from Provident obtain their obstetrical training at the Chicago Lying In hospital and their contagious diseases instruction at the County hospital. The students of the University of Chicago in turn get some of their instruction at Provident.

The clinic, which grants more emergency service than any other hospital except the County, which is the world's largest, treats approximately 1,000 patients a month. The clinic was given to the hospital by Max Epstein. Its expert staff pauses in awe when the clinic is compared with Provident's pioneer beginnings which were housed at 29th and Federal sts., so inadequate and shabby, and later at 36th and Dearborn sts.

One more fact of which Provident can boast is that it has been certified for graduate training in surgery by the American College of Surgeons and is the only Negro hospital so accredited.

Dr. T. K. Lawless, distinguished dermatologist and head of Provident's dermatology department, is serving as chairman of the hospital's financial drive.

A Golden Day Becomes a Red Letter Day in Their Lives

When Mr. and Mrs. John Meister of Oak Park celebrated their golden wedding these friends wouldn't have missed the party for anything. Almost like part of the old guard, they grew up with the Meisters on Sherman st., and attended grade school together at St. Peter's church, 816 S. Clark st. They have remained friends for many years, often meeting for supper parties—and always singing. Left to right, they are Louis Tanner, 9040 Longwood dr.; Frank Koch, 5417 S. Racine av.; Mrs. John Richard, 9901 S. Damen av.; John Richard, her husband; Mrs. Louise Fugate of Oak Park; Frank Dudenhoeffer, 4916 N. Fairfield av., and Mrs. Margaret Buddinger of Wilmette. Howard Wendt of Elmhurst is at the piano.

More than 90 guests shared the wedding dinner with Mr. and Mrs. Meister. A large wedding cake topped with golden bells, was cut by Mrs. Meister while her husband looked on.

Mrs. Meister and her husband's sister, Mrs. Minnie Small, 4147 Congress st., drink a toast before the wedding dinner. Both women can recall many happy childhood memories when they resided on Sherman st., then a neighborhood of small frame houses. In those days all the activities of the family centered around St. Peter's church, 816 S. Clark st.

Singing has been almost as important a part of the lives of the group which grew up on Sherman st., as eating and sleeping. The four Meister brothers who played ball with the other boys on vacant lots in the block where tall skyscrapers now stand, give out with a few old airs. The brothers are Joseph Meister of Wheaton, John, Max Meister, 7306 Blackstone av., and Frank Meister of Downers Grove.

Garden Plans Replace Hot Stove League

BY ONEY FRED SWEET.

It took a world war to make people think scientifically about garden and poultry raising, in the opinion of "Uncle Gus" Pearson. Before becoming fully food conscious, suburbanites were more inclined to trust to chance in conducting their agricultural hobbies.

On a spring Saturday night the Pearson store on 3d street just west of York rd. in Elmhurst is a meeting place for persons relaxing over the week-end and in the mood to give, take, and exchange advice on subjects ranging from the proper slicing of potatoes for planting to the problem of cutting down an overly ambitious cottonwood tree.

Uncle Gus is not wholly convinced by the middle aged woman's insistence that she knows how to cut the potatoes. Her husband appears dubious, too. Uncle Gus pulls out his knife to demonstrate: "Like this, from top to bottom, and then you must let 'em dry for awhile."

Tree Problems a Topic, Too.

"The cottonwoood's got too big and it's too close to the house," the couple wearing gardening clothes explain to Elmer Boysen, back of the counter. Elmer is the proprietor's brother-in-law, and one of his assistants. Sidney Herbert also helps during busy hours.

"There's a man around town with a horse who'll cut the tree down for $10 Elmer advises. "That's his business. O, you want it taken down piece by piece? Of course he'll charge more for that. The stump? The stump? You'll have to tend to that yourselves."

The good natured personality of Uncle Gus pervades the place. He moves quickly, despite his bulk, and the white cap at the back of his head bears the advertisement of a brand of feed containing vitamin value. He has a roll top desk in the room at the rear of a storage room that is piled to the ceiling with sacks of fertilizer and feed. Half filled sacks, close to the desk, provide seats for those who wish to spend an evening in country store fashion.

Call It a "Town Meeting."

"I call it a town meeting," ventured Harry Wilkins, one of the sack sitters. "I live over in North Lake and work in the Douglas plant. Seldom I don't get here on Saturday night. I keep rabbits. I've been in big towns and little towns and I like the little towns best. There's something small town about this place in here. Everybody friendly and everybody knows everybody else."

Don Stephan, an insurance man, said he was going to hold off a little longer on his garden to see whether or not he'd be called into the army. Last year he had planted a vacant lot. He had a hen that wanted to set and he was going to supply her with a few duck eggs so he'd have live decoys in the fall.

A merchant marine, Richard Baldwin, home on leave, dropped in to get feed for his White Leghorns. He said that when he had been home all the time he had kept racing pigeons.

Not a Single Seed Lost.

There were some seeds in the glass jars on the south wall that Uncle Gus weighed with the precision of an apothecary. He made a ritual of holding the transparent receptacle at arm's length and studying its markings. Then he poured without spilling a single precious seed.

"A persons's got to know more than just what it says on the package," assured Uncle Gus. "He does if he's going to come in here this summer and say to his less experienced rivals, 'We've already had our first mess of beans.' That couple that just went out of here have come up from below the Mason and Dixon line."

"How could you tell?" he was asked.

"Easy," replied Uncle Gus, "they asked for okra, seven top turnips, and mustard greens."

PUPILS GIVE 7TH CONCERT NEXT SUNDAY

15 Schools to Have Part in Program.

Selected talent from 15 Lutheran schools will play in the seventh annual concert of the Lutheran Band and Orchestra Association of Greater Chicago to be presented at 3 o'clock next Sunday afternoon at Concordia Teachers' college, River Forest. Joint rehearsals of the musical groups have been held at the Garfield park fieldhouse in preparation for the concert, which have given the youngsters an opportunity to play together and form a better acquaintance.

The annual concert is presented by the Lutheran Band and Orchestra Directors guild, which had its beginning in the Chicago area in 1936 with 20 pupils of St. John's school, Forest Park, forming the first group. Peace school in Chicago soon joined the organization with 20 members. Today some 500 pupils belong to the association, and 145 of their number have been chosen to play in next Sunday's concert.

Aims of Guild.

Among the aims of the guild are the development of musical talent among children that may be used in the service of the church, the home, the school, and the community.

The first portion of next Sunday's concert will be presented by the Chicago and West Suburban Lutheran school band under the direction of W. F. Bertram, director of music at Immanuel church, Elmhurst, and who, with Andrew Wendelin, was instrumental in organizing the association.

Selections to be played by the band will be the national anthem, "The Pompous Major March," by Olivadoti; "Fortuna Overture," by Zamecnik; a clarinet solo by Carol Reinke, an eighth grade pupil of Immanuel school, and a military band novelty by Yoder.

All-School Orchestra.

Andrew Wendelin will direct the All-Lutheran School orchestra in the chorale "Jesus Guard and Guide Thy Members," by Bach; two excerpts from Symphony No. 6 by Tschaikowsky; "Fantasia," by Mozart, and "March of the Sarder," by Ippolitov-Ivanof. Paul Carlson of St. Stephen's school will play "Adoration," by Borowski.

In the third part of the program the Chicago and West Suburban Lutheran School band will be directed by William Thurn of St. Andrew's school, and will include "Little Champ March," by Mesang; "Victory Overture" and "Pop Goes the Weasel," by Yoder. The program will close with "America."

R. A. Wetzstein, director of instrumental music at St. Paul's school, Melrose Park, will direct the opening and closing selections on the program.

Schools on Program.

Schools represented are Bethany, Christ, Immanuel, Golgatha, St. Andrew's, Peace and Holy Cross of Chicago, Christ of Oak Park, Immanuel of Elmhurst, St. John's of Forest Park, St. John's of La Grange, Zion of Hinsdale, St. Paul's of Melrose Park, St. Paul's of Chicago Heights, and St. Paul's of Kankakee.

William F. Bertram of Elmhurst is president of the Lutheran Band and Orchestra Directors guild. Mildred Kauffman of Dolton is secretary of the organization. Each June the guild holds a picnic at Dolton.

CONGRESS PARK SEEKS $15,000 BUILDING FUND

"Something new will be added" is the slogan of a $15,000 building campaign under way by the Community church of Congress Park. The "something new" is an addition that will more than double the present capacity of the church, combined with a remodeling program.

The present building, erected in 1911, has served for more than three decades as a center for community activities as well as a place of worship. During the ministry of the Rev. Herbert Rasey, the congregation has grown until the inadequate overflow room is constantly in use.

Russell Cuthbert, chairman of the building fund committee, said plans call for raising the $15,000 during the next two years thru special donations and regularly weekly and monthly pledges. The money, as contributed, will be invested in war bonds. Actual construction will not be started until funds and conditions permit. More than one-third the required amount was subscribed before the drive was officially opened.

Holy Family Scouts Cited for War Service Record

Boy and Girl Scouts and Cubs at Holy Family church, Roosevelt rd. and May st., have received citations from the United States treasury department for war service on the home front since Pearl Harbor. They have been active in paper and metal salvage drives, traffic counts, and surveys, flag dedications, bond rallys, and poster distribution, and were among the first groups to sponsor a book drive for the service men.

LOOP BORN JOHN MEISTERS MARK GOLDEN WEDDING

BY MARY HOLSINGER.

Fifty years of happy living together were celebrated recently by Mr. and Mrs. John Meister of Oak Park. Reminiscences went much beyond the half century of a joyful marriage, for among the 90 guests present for the golden wedding at the Oak Park Arms hotel there were 10 former classmates of the Meisters from old St. Peter's grade school at 816 S. Clark st.

There was a large wedding cake topped by golden bells that bore a remarkable resemblance to that other bridal cake many years ago. There was a piano in the corner of the large reception room and there the old St. Peter's crowd gathered to sing the songs they used to sing as children and the songs they have continued to sing at their monthly supper parties thru the years. From childhood on, they never have played a game of cards.

Singing Still Pastime.

Mrs. Minnie Small, 4147 Congress st., older sister of Mr. Meister, was there too and was much the same belle she must have been as a young girl at her brother's wedding.

"We haven't seen you in a long time," the old group called out to the petite elderly lady who wore a lavender shawl over her head. "I can still dance as well as I ever did," she gayly answered back to her brother's old playmates and friends.

Singing seemed to be the order of the day for as soon as the old St. Peter's group paused for breath, Mr. Meister's three brothers, Joseph of Wheaton; Max of 7306 Blackstone av., and Frank of Downers Grove, sang a few jingles that brought down the house.

"We always have sung," Mrs. Meister explained. "Back there on Sherman st., there wasn't much else to do."

Two of the old group have died, but the remaining 10 manage to get together as often as possible. "We feel closer to them than we do our own families," Mrs. Meister remarked. Besides the Meisters there are Mr. and Mrs. Louis Tanner, 9040 Longwood dr.; Mr. and Mrs. John A. Richard, 9901 Damen av.; F. A. Dudenhoeffer, 4916 N. Fairfield av.; Mr. and Mrs. William A. Stol of Oak Park, and Frank Koch, 5417 Racine av.

Watch City Change.

For a city whose communities change, break up, and gradually disappear in the general expansion and migratory movement, the group has done well to stay so close together. The small frame houses which were built on the swampy lots on Sherman st. have long since given way to tall skyscrapers. The musical sounds of an organ and lusty voices have been replaced by the clank of the street car, the roar of the elevated close by, the hum of busy traffic, and the shuffling of many feet.

The old parish group at St. Peter's church has moved away and descendants of the staunch old German families now living in other parts of the city and the suburbs come back only for an occasional visit or special service.

Mr. and Mrs. Meister have lived in Oak Park for 25 years. Memories of a happy childhood on a small, neighborly, and modest street, of which only the name remains the same today, dulls, for the Meisters, the excitement of the busy loop in America's second largest city.

Until his retirement eight years ago, Mr. Meister was associated with Sawyer Biscuit company. He joined the company in 1901 as their first salesman and for 35 years worked on the west side going as far as Naperville.

He's 73, She's 69.

When Matilda Meister was married she added only one letter to her name. She had been Matilda Meiser, the daughter of Louis and Minnie Meiser of Serman st. Her grandfather was John Ranker, one of the first undertakers in Chicago and one of the first in the middle west to have a plumed hearse drawn by all black horses.

Mr. Meister was born the year of the fire, 73 years ago, and Mrs. Meister is 69.

"We have worked hard, but have had a good time out of life," Mr. Meister explained. And his statement is convincing.

The Meisters have no children and every summer found them on a trip with one of the crowd. They have seen just about all of the scenic wonders of the United States and Canada and even had a modest trip to Europe once.

Seeks Funds to Remodel Church

PICK SOPHOMORE CAST FOR YORK PLAY—'THE BAT'

A tentative cast for the mystery play, "The Bat," has begun rehearsals at York High school for a sophomore production May 12. Because students must portray older persons, changes in the cast may be considered necessary, but there was an unusually large tryout for roles, especially among the boys.

Those chosen for first rehearsals include Barbara Brehm, Joyce Anderson, Glennyce Wilson, Jack Harbron, George Kierspe, Donald Strong, Harold Bendigkeit, Robert Rucker, Robert Newton, and Lewis Musil.

"The Bat" was first presented on Broadway in 1920 and immediately became a success because of its thrills and suspense.

ANNUAL PARTY TO AID NURSERY SET FOR FRIDAY

The annual spring card party for the benefit of St. Columkille day nursery, 527 N. Paulina st., will be held at 8 p. m. Friday in the Edgewater Beach hotel. The party is sponsored by the nursery auxiliary.

Proceeds from the benefit are used for the maintenance and support of the nursery, which takes care of the children of working mothers.

100 Children at Nursery.

More than 100 children, ranging in age from 2½ to 10, are cared for at the nursery. Fifty-five of the smaller children stay there all day and 40 to 45 of school age attend classes, have dinner at the nursery, and remain there until 6 o'clock.

Sister Mary Eileen, superintendent of St. Columkille's nursery, said that the benefit party is particularly important this year because of the increased number of children whose mothers, engaged in defense work, depend upon the nursery, which was founded 27 years ago.

Mrs. Flynn Heads Auxiliary.

Mrs. Charles J. Flynn, 2726 N. Francisco av., is president of the auxiliary. Chairman of arrangements for the party is Mrs. Hiram Barber, 2730 N. Richmond st.

She is assisted by Miss Helen and Miss Catherine Clines, 3637 N. Janssen av.

Other committee members include Mrs. Ann Fisher, 2201 Greenleaf av.; Mrs. Harold A. Meredith, 3056 Lawndale av.; Mrs. Edward O. Dase, 6440 Bell av.; Mrs. G. A. Armbruster, 2046 Hutchinson av., and Miss Mary E Ford, 4923 Washington blvd.

The pupils of Chicago's public and parochial elementary schools are continuing their record breaking pace in collecting waste paper for use in the war program.

During the week of April 2-7 a total of 1,087,337 pounds was turned in by elementary public school children, and approximately 400,000 pounds by parochial school pupils, making a grand total of almost a million and a half pounds, it was disclosed by Don C. Rogers, assistant superintendent in charge of elementary schools, and Msgr. D. F. Cunningham, superintendent of parochial schools.

Give Record for Three Weeks.

During the last three weeks alone, in the second five week period of the current drive which will end April 21, elementary public school children have collected more than three and one-half million pounds. At the close of the period the leading school in each district will be awarded an American flag and standard, and $1,000 in prizes will be donated by the Chicago waste paper campaign committee.

Must be guaranteed to stretch any standard hour to 90 minutes or better to permit us to handle the greatly increased volume of dry cleaning with a hard-working staff depleted by wartime man power demands.

Since no such article is available, we urge you to allow a little extra time on dry cleaning so that we may continue to render a good service. The importance of quality cleaning is now greater than ever because clothes still must be conserved.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, April 17.

Grow flowers in your garden and if the space is very small utilize it for flowers entirely. There is little that can be grown in the way of vegetables in a limited space but there are possibilities for growing flowers, and especially low growing kinds.

Plants received at Easter, especially foliage plants, should remain indoors for they have been growing in damp greenhouses and the changes to varying conditions of the home is not beneficial.

Tuesday, April 18.

Thin vegetable plants in the rows as soon as they can be handled. Few home gardeners realize the importance of thinning. It stands to reason that plants growing close together can never bear their maximum number of flowers or fruits, and those that are utilized for their edible leaves cannot produce as large a plant unless given room to do so.

All gardening operations should be done on time. Work the ground when it is dry enough so that it does not stick to the tools but do not delay until it is very hot.

Wednesday, April 19.

There is nothing finer or more attractive than a well kept, luxuriant lawn, but to have such a lawn requires constant attention, at least during the first three years when it is becoming thoroly established. Give it an application of a complete plant food or fertilizer, if it has not been done.

Thursday, April 20.

Now is the proper time to plant magnolias, such as magnolia stellata and soulangeana. The tulip tree makes a fine hardy tree for suburban sections, but if you want a shade tree and one that grows almost as rapidly as a willow, try the Chinese elm. It can be trimmed to almost any shape.

Take care of the trees while they are young and keep it up every year or two and huge branches will not have to be removed when they grow into veterans. Never overplant by using too many trees for some will need removal just when they have attained an attractive appearance. Watch for insects and spray on time.

Friday, April 21.

Just as soon as the fast growing and rapidly spreading perennials are large enough to transplant separate them. These include the hardy asters like Harrington's pink, physostegia vivid, the Oswego tea or monarda, and the golden glow.

As soon as the buds show on peonies, disbud for larger bloom. An application of plant food will help them develop. Remove all old foliage from around hollyhocks and delphiniums. It is helpful to spray the ground around these plants with Bordeaux mixture.

Saturday, April 22.

Prune evergreens but not severely. Cut back the growth made last season, but no other. Cut back those shrubs that flower on the new wood, such as hydrangeas, althaeas, buddleias and others that have been winter killed.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield park conservatory.

GRACE LUTHERAN CHURCH JUNIORS TO SING TONIGHT

Altho the celebration of Christ's resurrection is past for this year, Grace Evangelical Lutheran church, 28th st. and Karlov av., will not climax its Easter activities until tonight when the junior choir presents a cantata, "The Glory of Easter."

The chorus of 26 voices will be directed by Louis B. Abraham. Miss Dolores Otto will sing "Lift Up Your Voices," and will appear in a duet with Miss Dolores Zink in "There Is a Green Hill Far Away."

Armin Wissmueller will accompany the chorus on the organ.

Annual Parade Will Be Held Later.

The annual federal inspection of high school units of the Chicago reserve officers training corps will be held May 3 to May 23 by army officers headed by Maj. George L. Hudson, senior inspection officer, it has been announced by Col. William F. Morrison, professor of military science and tactics for Chicago high schools.

The parade sponsored jointly by the Chicago board of education and THE TRIBUNE, in which 12,000 city R. O. T. C. cadets, representing 29 public high schools and one parochial school, St. Mel's, will participate, is to be held at a later date. Schools ranking first and second in the inspection will at that time receive The Tribune award, two sets of flags, and will march at the head of the columns. Flags to be awarded include the national colors and the high school colors.

Inspect Cadets Individually.

At the inspection, platoons of the individual schools will parade in review before the inspecting staff, which will inspect the cadets in rank as a unit as well as individually. Examination will be both practical and theoretical that is, both on the field and in the classroom.

Humboldt Park Hobbyists Turn Stones Into Beautiful Jewelry

A piece of agate is not just an item for the curio shelf to members of the Lapidary club at the Humboldt park craft shop. In it they see potential rings, pins, and pendants. The group meets each week for a session over the cutting wheels and polishing benches, making silver settings for rings, and grinding the stones to go into those settings. At a recent meeting, Mrs. George Huss, 1718 S. Jefferson st., right, brought a slice of Wyoming agate, which is being inspected under the light by William Menzel, 1840 N. Austin blvd. Pausing for a moment at his task of grinding another stone is Val H. Rutkowski, 1570 Miner st., Des Plaines, who also looks over the vivid colorings of the agate slice. Mr. Rutkowski, one of the most ardent of the hobbyists, has a complete lapidary shop in his basement at home.

Carlos Cossia, 2507 N. Ashland av., is a machinist at the Automatic Screw Machine company. He applies his trade skill when he makes jewelry in the lapidary shop, working from a solid piece of silver, and filing patiently away until he turns out an exquisite butterfly setting for a brooch, or a minute pair of scissors for a charm bracelet. Mr. Cossia came to this country from Italy in 1917. His formula for jewelry making is "time and patience," but the fact that he turned out 32 intricate charms for a bracelet during two weeks shows that by his skill he has practically eliminated the "time" element.

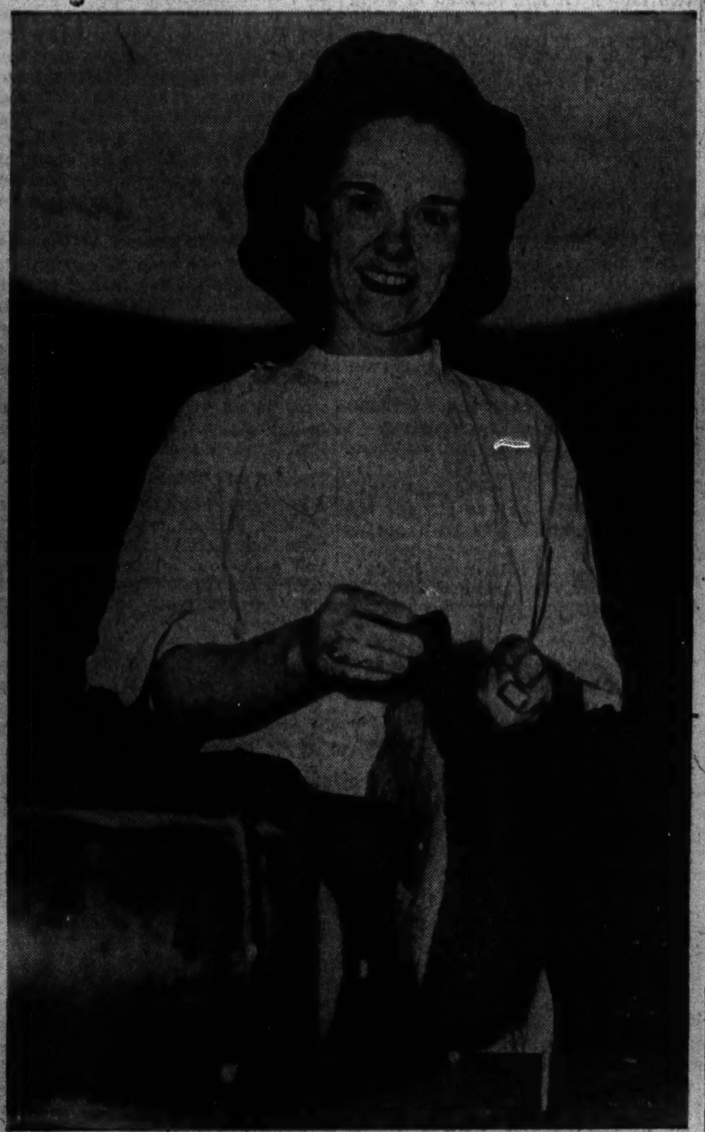
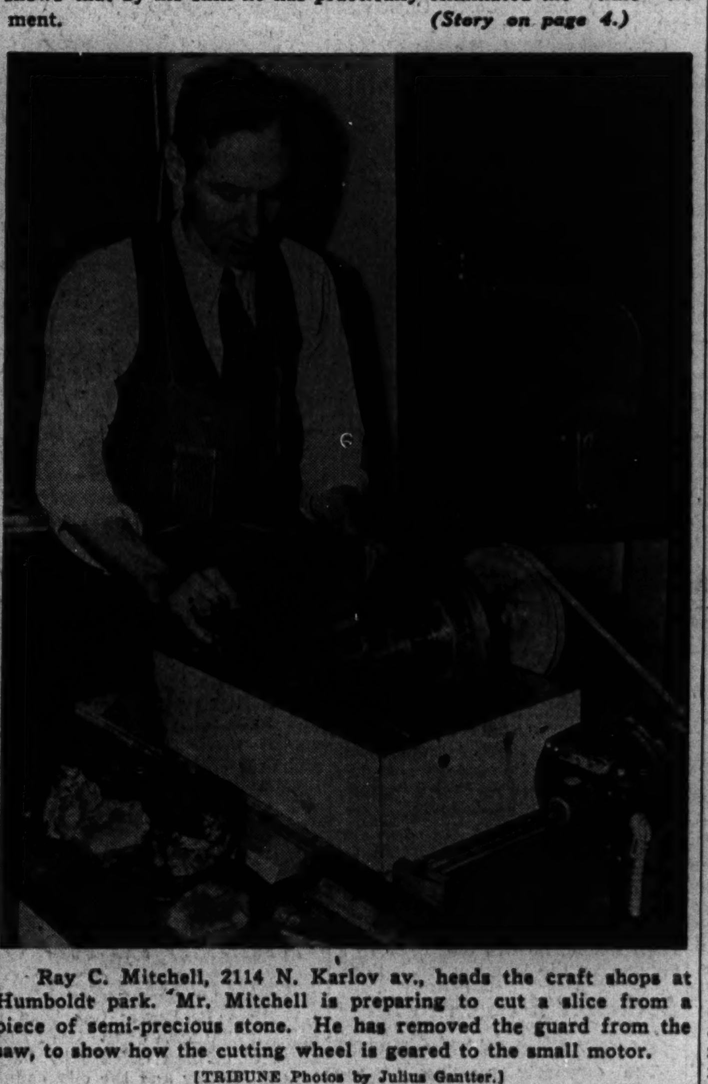
Professionally, Mrs. Val H. Rutkowski is a chemist at Presbyterian hospital. But when she leaves the lab behind, she becomes an artisan in metal, spending much of her leisure time in the Humboldt park craft shop, or in Rutkowski's own basement lapidary shop. Here she holds a ring over the burner, soldering it into a circle. She is demonstrating the proper method to Mrs. Charles Clark, 6330 Kenwood av., a pathological technician at the hospital, who is also one of the lapidary enthusiasts.



After a ring is finished, and the stone placed in the setting, a final polish must be given on the felt polishing wheel. Miss Margaret Redfern, 2970 Sheridan rd., a pathological secretary at Presbyterian hospital, shows how the polishing is done.



Ray C. Mitchell, 2114 N. Karlov av., heads the craft shops at Humboldt park. Mr. Mitchell is preparing to cut a slice from a piece of semi-precious stone. He has removed the guard from the saw, to show how the cutting wheel is geared to the small motor.

To the uninitiated, it seems improbable that such an array of crude stones, silver wire, and sheet metal could be turned by amateurs into objects of value and beauty. But this is the stuff with which the Humboldt park lapidarists begin to work. In the photo are pieces of rock crystal, Egyptian hematite jasper, turtle-back agate, calcite, obedite, limonite, Texas agate, Oregon thunder egg, Montana moss agate, and petrified wood, a piece of sheet silver, and coils of plain and twisted silver wire.

N. W. SIDE TEEN AGERS ASSIST AT HOSPITAL

Gain Experience in Leisure Time.

Teen age girls on the northwest side are finding help these days in the solution of three major problems: how they may aid in war activities, how they may utilize their leisure time, and how they may prepare for future careers.

The 50 girls thus far enrolled in the program are members of the Book Worm club at Northwesttown branch library, 1615 N. Pulaski rd., under the direction of Mrs. Helen Gordon, and two Camp Fire Girls units sponsored by Mrs. George Nelson, 2238 N. Lawler av. In operation only a few weeks, the movement gives every indication of expanding into a much larger group, and the enthusiasm with which it has been met will undoubtedly inspire other teen age groups to institute similar programs.

Work at Hospital.

Each Wednesday evening the girls report to Walther Memorial hospital, Kedzie and Haddon avs., where the major portion of the group spends the evening making bandages and swabs for hospital use. Others have been given duties on the vistors' desk, writing out passes and checking visitors in and out of the hospital. As the group increases, other jobs will be found for them.

The hospital aid project met with much enthusiasm among the girls, many of whom plan on becoming nurses. Impressed by the hospital routine, they handled the jobs assigned them with a zeal and skill that has surprised both their leaders and the hospital authorities.

The interest has spread like a contagion. The dining room of the hospital, turned over to the girls on Wednesday nights, was filled for the first session, and each week the girls bring more of their friends. Older girls are volunteering for assignments other evenings in the week.

To Wear Service Apron.

To date the girls have no standardized uniform to wear at their work. The Camp Fire girls wear their uniforms, the others light frocks. All have white headpieces, and all religiously remove their nail polish for the Wednesday evening sessions. The latter, leaders point out, can be interpreted as quite a sacrifice for teen age girls who have just begun to adopt such sophistications.

As the girls complete 25 hours of service in the hospital, they will be allowed to wear white aprons, symbol of their faithfulness. These aprons, of white organdy, will be made as a Camp Fire project, and members of that group will be allowed to wear their service emblem embroidered on the apron, while Book Worm club members will have a red cross embroidered on theirs.

Club Started with 200.

The Book Worm club, organized at Northwesttown branch library early in March with a membership of 20, has responded almost 100 per cent in the project. The club members take turns at being chairman, and Elaine Cooper, 1405 N. Harding av., has charge of the details of bookkeeping, recording the hours the girls spend at the hospital, and their attendance at club meetings.

The two Camp Fire units under Mrs. Nelson's guidance include 43 girls, and every one of them is interested in the hospital work. Organized five years ago under the sponsorship of the Lloyd Parent-Teacher association, the two groups are headed now by Phoebe Faulhaber and Harriett Trapp.

In conjunction with their work at the hospital, members of the Book Worm club are embarking on a series of career council meetings with a correlated reading program. The first forum featured an informal talk by Dr. Henrietta Katz, 2858 Shakespeare av., a pediatrician.

Hear Business Girl.

In the second session, Cecelia Rodgers, a member of the advertising department of a large mail order house, conducted a forum on career possibilities in office work. Subsequent forums will feature workers in other fields. These meetings are held each Friday evening at the library.

NORWOOD PARK RED CROSS UNIT ENDS 2D YEAR

Community Project Sets Good Record.

Altho the Norwood Park Red Cross production unit celebrated its second anniversary recently, the nucleus of the organization actually dates back a number of years. It originally operated under the auspices of the Norwood Park Woman's club, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Clyde E. Culpepper, who founded the unit.

Immediately after Pearl Harbor, however, the unit was released from the club, and became the community undertaking it now is. Two members of the unit have an outstanding number of hours to their credit: Mrs. Gilbert L. Stadtler and Mrs. Richard W. Stretch have each put in more than 1,200 hours. They wear two bars, denoting two years of service. Mrs. Clyde E. Culpepper wears two year bars, and also wearing two bars for having completed the required number of hours are Mrs. Harry Bell, Mrs. Peter I. Bukowski, Mrs. Earl V. Essington, Mrs. Edith Hall, Mrs. Frank C. Knickle, Mrs. Joseph S. Kula, Mrs. Eugene L. Steeb, and Mrs. Peter Chell.

31 Work 288 Hours.

One bar, denoting 288 hours' service within one year, is worn by 31 women in the unit. A large cross, awarded for 144 hours' service, is worn by 31 more, and 32 other members wear the small cross, indicating that they have served 72 hours.

At first the unit was occupied principally with relief and disaster articles, and in this period completed 370 layette pieces, as well as 175 pairs of boys' trousers, 45 tailored coats for girls and women, 240 dresses, and 176 other garments.

For the services, the sewing department produced 299 army "housewives," 75 convalescent kits, 461 army kit bags, and 25 nurses' apron kits. As donations, the department sent in 186 miscellaneous layette and relief pieces, as well as two lap robes and 18 large quilts. Recently, when the Chicago chapter called for an emergency effort to make army kit aprons, the unit responded by making 460 within a month's time.

Knit 216 Sweaters.

The knitting department of the unit purchased yarn and donated 20 white sleeveless sweaters for nurses, as well as 11 large afghans. The knitted articles completed included 193 for civilian use, 216 sweaters for the army and navy, and 545 other knitted articles for service men.

The surgical dressing division sent in 67,396 hand folded dressings and 1,521 larger machine stitched dressings.

At the present time, the Norwood Park Red Cross unit is under the following leadership: Mrs. Peter I. Bukowski, chairman; Mrs. Clyde E. Culpepper, and Mrs. Frank C. Knickle, co-chairman; Mrs. Richard Stretch, treasurer and canteen chairman; Mrs. Eugene L. Steeb and Mrs. Joseph S. Kula, co-chairmen of dressings; Mrs. Gilbert L. Stadtler, knitting chairman; Mrs. Earl V. Essington, sewing chairman, and Mrs. Walter M. Gibbs and Mrs. George S. Madsen, sewing co-chairmen. Dressing instructors include Mrs. Walter J. Foerster, Mrs. Soerren Moe, and Mrs. Robert Talbot.

Arlington Heights Garden Club Elects New Officers

At a recent meeting of the Arlington Heights Garden club, the following officers were elected: Palmer Gilbertson, president; Lee Biderman, vice president; Ira Parker, secretary, and Clyde Emerick, treasurer. L. T. McAuliffe, retiring president, was named chairman of the program committee.

TRIBUNE ARTIST DRAWS N.W. SIDE BOYS IN PACIFIC

Makes Sketches at the Island Outposts.

Three northwest side residents recently took time out from their duties in the Southwest Pacific theater of war to pose for pictures by Gary Sheahan, Tribune staff artist. The peripatetic sketcher, who carried his "studio" in his artist's kit to battle frontiers in the Southwest Pacific, made drawings of Lt. Warren A. Johnson of Park Ridge, Pvt. George Motzko, 2033 N. Winchester av., and Sgt. Mel Christensen, 7739 Higgins rd.

Lt. Johnson, 25, is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Johnson of Park Ridge. Inducted in May, 1942, he received his basic training at Claybourne, La., and attended officers candidate school at Camp Belvoir, Va. He has been serving with an engineers' battalion in the Southwest Pacific since last June.

Attended Maine High.

In letters to his parents he says that he is with a "jolly bunch of fellows" whose companionship helps to make jungle life bearable. He has acquired a sun tan that has made his skin a rich saddle brown, and says that if it weren't for the mosquitoes, life in the tropics would come well recommended.

Lt. Johnson attended Maine Township High school and North Park college. His brother Norman is also in the service. A sergeant in the army, Norman is stationed at Camp Swift, Tex.

Pvt. Motzko, subject of another of Gary Sheahan's sketches, has been in the Southwest Pacific for almost two years. The son of Mr. and Mrs. George Motzko of the Winchester av. address, he was inducted in February, 1941.

Overseas a Year.

Pvt. Motzko, who received his basic training at Camp Grant, Rockford, is a graduate of Lane Technical High school. Before entering the army he was employed by the Stewart Warner corporation.

The third northwest sider sketched recently is Sgt. Mel Christensen of the army motor corps. Inducted 22 months ago, he has been on overseas duty for the last year. A former student of Carl Schurz High school, he was employed as a civilian by the Ringsby truck lines.

MRS. R. E. MAROCK MOTHERS 27 FIVE DAYS EACH WEEK

Directs Cleveland School Child Center.

Mrs. Raymond E. Marock has 27 children. Of course only one of the 27 is her own, and the other 26 are away from 5 o'clock each afternoon until 8 o'clock the next morning. But for eight hours a day, five days a week, Mrs. Marock is the epitome of maternal discipline, affection, and understanding to her brood.

The children, ranging in age from 5 years thru 13, are those enrolled in the child care center at Cleveland school, 3850 N. Albany av. For a fee of $2 per week the children are supervised from 8 each morning until 5 in the afternoon, and given noon lunch and an afternoon snack. The program is subsidized by the board of education and the federal government to aid mothers' engaged in war industry. One other such child care center is located on the northwest side, at Avondale school, 2945 N. Sawyer av.

As the children arrive each morning, and before their classes convene, they are given thoro physical inspections, with attention to nose, throat, ears, and glands. Mrs. Marock had to complete the regulation Red Cross first aid course to qualify for this portion of her duties. The inspection is especially effective in noting early symptoms of scarlet fever, measles, and mumps, and in keeping these diseases from spreading among the children.

Have Play Period.

From 8 until 9 o'clock, the children have supervised play, occupying themeselves with blocks, comic books, or dolls. Supplies for sewing, cut paper work, and drawing are available, and potted plants around the room appeal to the gardeners in the group.

At noon the children gather in the PTA room for their lunch, which always features a hot dish, a salad, bread and butter sandwiches, milk, and dessert. The main dish may be spaghetti with tomato sauce, meat loaf with gravy and mashed potatoes, vegetable soup, or meat stew, but the dishes are always cleaned off.

In this Mrs. Marock has more success than most mothers of smaller families, for she has whipped up a keen competition between the groups of children who sit at the two tables. A flag planted in a big green vase acts as a traveling trophy, going from day to day to the table which has behaved best during the preceding meal time. Plates must be cleaned off before the dessert is served.

One reason why there's never any food left over is the cooking of Mrs. Ruth Huber, 3209 Beach av., who prepares all the meals. She helps with the serving, too, while the older girls in the group lend a hand as waitresses. Ella Small helps Mrs. Marock with meal time discipline. All the staff members join the children in their parties, and when Mrs. Huber had a birthday recently there was a party for her, too.

Help at Noon.

Many of the children help with the work of the noon lunch. Teddy Kroon, 3110 Irving Park rd., may be only a half pint sized first grade pupil, but he's the bus boy for the group, clearing tables with professional pride.

That the center is doing its duty in child training at a time when mothers haven't the opportunity is demonstrated in the table manners of the boys and girls. Twins Ronald and Donald Sjostrom, 3907 N. Francisco av., keep reminding each other "a gentleman wouldn't do that," and join in chorus if Tommy Johnston, 3753 N. Mozart av., who sits across from them, wolfs his third helping of potatoes too fast. The table talk is lively, shifting from wild west movies to comic books to war time heroes. That gives Vance Norum, 3645 N. Sacramento av., a chance to tell about his dad, an army corporal, who has sent him souvenirs from desert maneuvers. Vance's brother, Neil, 5, is also enrolled in the center.

At 3 o'clock each afternoon the children are given a snack of milk and cookies. Often this session becomes a party, as when Shirley Goldstein, 3209 Irving Park road, brought a cake to celebrate her birthday a few days ago. Older girls helping with the work include Lois Falknor, 3624 N. Mozart, and Mrs. Marock's daughter, Alice.

Starts "Manicure Club."

Personal habits are highlighted by Mrs. Marock, who has started a "manicure club" for the children, and plans on schooling the little girls in the proper care of their hair. All these things, she points out, would be done by their mothers if those same mothers did not have most of their time taken up with war jobs.

With the kindergarteners, who have a free afternoon or morning session, Mrs. Marock romps on the floor, building block houses, cutting out paper dolls, dressing a bridal party for little Geraldine DeGoey, 3907 N. Richmond st., and playing at war with miniature battleships and airplanes. On rainy days there are indoor games, when fine weather comes they will go out on the playground.

The center is open on holidays and during vacation periods, for most mothers are working those days as well as any other. During the cleanup week recess early in May the children will trek to Lincoln and Brookfield zoos, and the Goodman theater.

HUMBOLDT PARK STONE WORKERS EMULATE CELLINI

Turn Leisure Time Into Precious Gems.

A group of amateur Cellinis is hard at work these spring evenings in the craft shop at Humboldt park fieldhouse. Instead of spending their leisure evenings over a bridge table or at the movies, they utilize those hours to turn out delicately wrought jewelry, set with stones they themselves have cut and polished.

The lapidary shop at Humboldt park, which has been operating for the last five years, is believed to be the largest purely recreational one of its kind in the United States. Ray C. Mitchell, 2114 N. Karlov av., who has been in craft work with the park district for the last nine years, has instructed lapidarists for four years.

From the stock of semi-precious rocks and stones the hobbyists pick up at auctions, thru bartering, and on their own travels, they turn out exquisite rings, earrings, and pendants. Some of the amateur craftsmen work only in metals, making delicately wrought brooches, charm bracelets, and clips.

Furnish Own Gold.

The silver for the jewelry made in the shop is furnished thru the park district at 10 per cent over cost. The little gold used comes thru the craftsmen themselves, being recovered from old gold objects, dental fillings, and gold plated pieces. The shop has complete equipment for recovering this old gold.

Settings for most of the rings, and many of the other metal pieces used in the jewelry making, are cast. The setting is modeled in wax and the model enclosed in a plaster cast. This cast is then "burned out" for two hours, during which process the wax model burns out, leaving the impression in the hardened plaster. Into this impression the silver is poured, being driven into every crevice with centrifugal force. Once the metal has hardened, the plaster cast is broken open and the setting removed for finishing and polishing.

Stones to be placed in the settings are made from crude chunks of agate, petrified wood, onyx, moonstone, opal, or other semi-precious stones. The stones are cut with diamond saws, discs of steel or copper which are charged with diamond fragments around the edge. These discs were donated to the shop by the Western Electric company, thru the efforts of George A. Greenlee, 2673 Orchard st.

Select Best Plane.

Among the varieties of stones fancied by the hobbyists are Lake Superior agate, found north and west along the Rock river valley; opal; malachite; agate in a half dozen different varieties; onyx, and carnellian. The cutting is a painstaking operation, for the cutter must decide what plane will bring out the stone's pattern to best advantage, and at just which spot in the stone the color will be most vivid.

After the cutting, when the lapidarist has a slice of stone to work with, the grinding and polishing begins. The stone is ground to the oval or round shape desired, then polished to a high gloss, first by hand with emery paper, then on wheels of wood and felt.

The members of the Humboldt lapidarists come from widely varied fields. Between 50 and 60 members are registered, and an average attendance of 15 shows up every night the shop is open between October and May.

Several of the hobbyists are technicians on the staff of Presbyterian hospital. Mrs. Val H. Rutkowski, 1570 Miner st., Des Plaines, is a chemist at the hospital; Mrs. Charles Clark is a pathological technician, and Miss Margaret Redfern a pathological secretary.

Makes Synthetic Emerald.

William Menzel, 1840 N. Austin blvd., one of the group, is an expert on synthetic gems. He has built a synthetic emerald believed to be the only one of any size in existence. Altho he had been working on the project for some time, the stone materialized thru some accident of science, and he has been unable to duplicate it. This synthetic emerald was built in approximately four hours, while nature would take about a million years to make one of similar size.

Secretary to the group is Archie Nisbet, who has a wood turning shop at 1818 Milwaukee avenue. Mr. Nisbet's other hobby is astrology. Other members of the group include Carlos Cossia, 2507 N. Ashland av., a machinist at the Automatic Screw Machine company; Russell McFall, member of The Tribune editorial staff, and Glen Putnam, 1923 N. Neva av., personnel manager for Dallas Brass company, who attends with Mrs. Putnam. Many jewelers drop in occasionally, to use the equipment, which is much more complete than that of most small jewelery shops.

Altho the shop is located in Humboldt park, in the heart of the northwest side, lapidarists from all over the city use its facilities. And, as Instructor Mitchell genially points out, there is always room for a few more ardent hobbyists.

HE'S HAD PLENTY OF TIME ON HIS HANDS AT TRADE

Frank Schneider Repairs Watches 55 Years.

BY MAURINE MYERS.

When Frank J. Schneider, 4059 Melrose st., celebrated his 70th birthday recently he also completed 55 years in the watch repair trade. The third of four generations of watchmakers, he estimates that the Schneiders have repaired half a million watches since his grandfather, Henry Schneider, learned watch repairing in Germany and became jeweler by appointment to the duke of Brunswick.

Mr. Schneider and his son, Edward, are now engaged in their trade at 4105 North avenue, where they have been repairing watches for the last three years. But the equipment they use today and the methods employed are vastly different from those Mr. Schneider learned from his father 55 years ago in Galena, Ill.

Did Job for Gen. Grant.

When the father, Henry Schneider Jr., had his watch repair shop in Galena, Gen. Ulysses S. Grant came there to have some work done on his watch. Mr. Schneider was only a child then, but remembers that Grant picked him up, put him on the back of a big Newfoundland dog, and that he rode around the shop, with the general patting his head.

In 1909 Mr. Schneider opened his own shop in Chicago on the spot where the Pioneer bank is now located at Pulaski and North avs. For 35 years he lived in that neighborhood, moving there when the pavement was made of wooden blocks and the area was sparsely populated.

The oldest watch Mr. Schneider repaired was a chain-drive watch made in Liverpool, England, in 1818. A huge silver pocket watch, it had one diamond jewel and 144 sapphires. Mr. Schneider's collection includes one older watch, made in Switzerland, with even the small screws turned out by hand, and the hours struck by a tiny handmade mechanism.

Does Work for Soldiers.

Today much of Mr. Schneider's work comes from service men, who send their watches from points all over the globe. He has the jeweler's usual fine scorn for women's fashions which dictate tiny wristwatches, and recalls having predicted dourly that "the things will never run" when they first came on the market. He lived to see himself proved wrong, but still remains awed at how the minute mechanisms manage to remain accurate.

The watches on Mr. Schneider's bench these days come from Guadalcanal, the Pacific zone, England, Italy, and Australia. He also is busy engraving identification bracelets for service men.

Mr. Schneider's hobbies include bowling and three cushion billiards. He is a member of a North avenue bowling team organized in 1910, which still meets each Monday evening. He admits, however, that after 34 years of bowling his average is still only 155. Of his skill as a billiard player he is a little more proud, explaining that watchmaking and its accompanying skill of figuring out the meshing of gears and levers aids the billiard player in figuring angles for trick shots.

Called "Trouble Shooter."

He also is a member of Humboldt Park Commandery of the Knights Templar.

In the trade, Mr. Schneider is known as a "trouble shooter," being able to make by hand parts that are often unobtainable nowadays. But of this skill he is not half so proud as he is of his tiny granddaughter, Carol Ann. If the man power shortage continues, he contemplates teaching her his trade, and making the fifth generation of Schneiders to follow the family profession.

BOMBER GUNNER FROM N.W. AREA WINS 2D MEDAL

Sgt. Poplawski Trains New Air Crews.

The distinguished flying cross for "extraordinary achievement" has been added to the air medal with three oak leaf clusters already held by Sgt. Harry J. Poplawski, 2022 N. Winchester av., formerly top turret gunner and engineer on the Flying Fortress, Piccadilly Queen.

Sgt. Poplawski.

Taking part in some of the most successful bombing attacks against Hitler's Europe, Sgt. Poplawski participated in raids against the ball bearing factories at Schweinfurt, plane assembly plants at Marienburg, the U-boat pens, ship yards, and installations at Kiel, Bremen, and Wilhelmshaven, and other objectives.

Downs Nazi Plane.

Sgt. Poplawski is officially credited with the destruction of a Focke Wulf-190, shot down during an attack on Stuttgart. From his vantage point in the top turret of the Piccadilly Queen he has also damaged many more.

As a ground instructor at an 8th air force bomber station in England, Sgt. Poplawski is now giving new crews the benefit of his experience gained during months of aerial warfare.

Former Defense Worker.

The 24 year old gunner is the son of Mrs. Adeline Poplawski of the Winchester av. address. He was employed by a defense plant before entering the air corps in March, 1942.

After attending airplane mechanics' school at Keesler field, Miss., and B-17 specialists' school at Burbank, Cal., Sgt. Poplawski volunteered for aerial gunnery. He received his wings in November, 1942.

A ROSE GROWER TAKES JUNGLE RIGHT IN STRIDE

Des Plaines Soldier Wins Thru India Ordeal.

"A story book adventure" was how Corp. Peter C. Carlin of Des Plaines recently described more than a month of enforced solitude in the jungles of India with only the chattering of apes for conversation and no road maps to guide him back to civilization.

Peter C. Carlin.

Reported "missing in action" after he was forced to bail out of his plane while flying over the "hump" between India and China, Corp. Carlin wandered 32 days without sight of another human being. Finally he met two natives who guided him to an American base, 39 days after his landing in the jungle. Sent to the hospital for a routine checkup, his health was reported perfect.

Can't Understand His Good Health.

"The people here cannot get over my being in such good shape after being in the jungle for so long; so let the hospital be the least of your worries," he declared in a recent letter to his brother, Joseph Carlin.

Corp. Carlin, 38, entered military service in the spring of 1942. He was stationed at Keesler field, Miss., and at Fort Wayne, Mich., before being sent overseas. A flight engineer in the air transport command, he has been in the Asiatic area for the last year.

Was on 50th Mission.

The flight in which he had to "abandon ship" was his 50th mission with a crew taking supplies into China.

For 14 years before entering the services, Corp. Carlin was employed as a rose grower in Des Plaines. "I guess all those years of climbing thru thorns provided good practice for struggling thru the tropical undergrowth," commented Joseph Carlin last week. "After Pete's experience with rosebushes, he apparently just took the jungle in his stride."

This Week in the Garden

Monday, April 17.

Grow flowers in your garden and if the space is very small utilize it for flowers entirely. There is little that can be grown in the way of vegetables in a limited space but there are possibilities for growing flowers, and especially low growing kinds.

Plants received at Easter, especially foliage plants, should remain indoors for they have been growing in damp greenhouses and the changes to varying conditions of the home is not beneficial.

Tuesday, April 18.

Thin vegetable plants in the rows as soon as they can be handled. Few home gardeners realize the importance of thinning. It stands to reason that plants growing close together can never bear their maximum number of flowers or fruits, and those that are utilized for their edible leaves cannot produce as large a plant unless given room to do so.

All gardening operations should be done on time. Work the ground when it is dry enough so that it does not stick to the tools but do not delay until it is very hot.

Wednesday, April 19.

There is nothing finer or more attractive than a well kept, luxuriant lawn, but to have such a lawn requires constant attention, at least during the first three years when it is becoming thoroly established. Give it an application of a complete plant food or fertilizer, if it has not been done.

Thursday, April 20.

Now is the proper time to plant magnolias, such as magnolia stellata and soulangeana. The tulip tree makes a fine hardy tree for suburban sections, but if you want a shade tree and one that grows almost as rapidly as a willow, try the Chinese elm. It can be trimmed to almost any shape.

Take care of the trees while they are young and keep it up every year or two and huge branches will not have to be removed when they grow into veterans. Never overplant by using too many trees for some will need removal just when they have attained an attractive appearance. Watch for insects and spray on time.

Friday, April 21.

Just as soon as the fast growing and rapidly spreading perennials are large enough to transplant separate them. These include the hardy asters like Harrington's pink, physostegia vivid, the Oswego tea or monarda, and the golden glow.

As soon as the buds show on peonies, disbud for larger bloom. An application of plant food will help them develop. Remove all old foliage from around hollyhocks and delphiniums. It is helpful to spray the ground around these plants with Bordeaux mixture.

Saturday, April 22.

Prune evergreens but not severely. Cut back the growth made last season, but no other. Cut back those shrubs that flower on the new wood, such as hydrangeas, althaeas, buddleias and others that have been winter killed.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield park conservatory.

GAMMA PHI BETA ALUMNAE PLAN MEETING FRIDAY

The North Shore Alumnae group of Gamma Phi Beta will hold its next meeting on Friday in the Northwestern university chapter house. The newly elected president, Mrs. William W. Heusner, will be in charge.

Other new officers of the group are Mrs. Douglas Stevens, vice president and social chairman; Mrs. D. M. Graham, recording and corresponding secretary; Mrs. Douglas Cunningham, treasurer; Mrs. Justus P. Bauer, program chairman; Mrs. Joseph D. Landes Jr., publicity chairman; Mrs. Elmer Young, membership and hospitality chairman; Mrs. Carl Granquist, finance chairman, and Mrs. Norman Hoff, war work and special services chairman.

Mrs. J. K. Turner will be tea hostess at the Friday meeting. Assisting her will be Mrs. Roger McColl, Mrs. Benjamin Becker, Mrs. Ellis Jones, and Mrs. Donald Brewer.

Brynsord Dance.

A service men's benefit dance will be held Saturday evening in Bohemian hall, 4624 N. Pulaski rd., by the Brynsord Park community.

DELIVERY DRIVER DELIVERS GOODS IN BOUGAINVILLE

BY HAROLD SMITH.

BOUGAINVILLE, Solomon Islands, April 10.—Pvt. Walter L. Zawadzki, former delivery driver for a Chicago wholesale druggist, is one of many reasons why the former Illinois national guard unit now in the 37th division outfought the Japs decisively in their latest abortive assault on our firm beachhead.

Pvt. Zawadzki, 22, son of Mrs. Victoria Zawadzki, 2417 Huron st., Chicago, entered the army in December, 1942, and since his arrival overseas has been a driver attached to a machine gun section.

In recent action has was without a vehicle, but found plenty of odd jobs.

In three counter attacks he obtained a Browning automatic rifle and assigned himself to front line infantry accompanying our tanks sent in to push back the infiltrating Japs, killing several without getting a scratch.

He volunteered for the fourth tank assault but his plea was denied by the commanding officer on the grounds "you're living on borrowed time now." But Walter felt lucky and went on liquidating the enemy in isolated skirmishes.

On one occasion he crawled into no man's land under fire to help a wounded comrade back to an aid station. On another occasion he braved flying Jap bullets to carry bodies of two slain members of his outfit from the battle field. Admiring buddies call him "fire eater."

Jewish Institute.

Municipal Judge Jacob M. Braude will address the annual meeting of the Woman's auxiliary to the Jewish People's institute Wednesday noon in the Standard club, 203 Plymouth ct.

R. O. T. C. CADET INSPECTION TO START MAY 3

Annual Parade Will Be Held Later.

The annual federal inspection of high school units of the Chicago reserve officers training corps will be held May 3 to May 23 by army officers headed by Maj. George L. Hudson, senior inspection officer, it has been announced by Col. William F. Morrison, professor of military science and tactics for Chicago high schools.

The parade sponsored jointly by the Chicago board of education and THE TRIBUNE, in which 12,000 city R. O. T. C. cadets, representing 29 public high schools and one parochial school, St. Mel's, will participate, is to be held at a later date. Schools ranking first and second in the inspection will at that time receive The Tribune award, two sets of flags, and will march at the head of the columns. Flags to be awarded include the national colors and the high school colors.

Inspect Cadets Individually.

At the inspection, platoons of the individual schools will parade in review before the inspecting staff, which will inspect the cadets in rank as a unit as well as individually. Examination will be both practical and theoretical that is, both on the field and in the classroom.

The status of the various school R. O. T. C. groups will thus be determined according to war department rank: Honor, excellent, or satisfactory.

Tribune Will Award Medals.

Medals will be awarded by THE TRIBUNE, the R. O. T. C. department, the PTA, certain American Legion posts, and the Spanish-American War Veterans auxiliary.

Maj. Hudson of the 3d district, 6th service command, has been a member of the officers reserve corps for 15 years. A graduate of the University of Minnesota, he has been stationed at the University of Wisconsin, Illinois Institute of Technology, University of Chicago, and at Fort Sheridan.

Fathers Wait for Tribune V-Mail Photos of Children

Margaret Mary Power and Hugh Patrick McGourty Jr. already have much in common, altho they are only seven months old. They were born in the Little Company of Mary hospital on Sept. 16. Their mothers shared the same room, were attended by the same physician, and, two months later, their fathers met many thousands of miles away during the invasion of Tarawa.

Their parents had never met before, but both mothers are now busy comparing notes on the progress of their babies. Margaret Mary's mother is Mrs. Joseph A. Power, 4540 Wallace st. Hugh Patrick's mother is Mrs. Hugh P. McGourty, 8058 Hermitage av.

Both wives are living with their mothers. Mrs. McGourty attended Mercy High school, Chicago Teachers college, and Loyola university. A further coincidence regarding the two families is that Mrs. McGourty graduated from Loyola in June 1938 in the same class with Mrs. Power's husband altho they were strangers at the time.

Fathers in Pacific.

Both fathers are serving in the Southwest Pacific with the navy and are anxiously awaiting Tribune V-mail pictures of their babies. Mrs. McGourty's husband is Hugh P. McGourty, a machinist mate. He enlisted in the navy shortly after the attack on Pearl Harbor and has taken part in the American operations on Sicily, Tarawa, and the Marshall Islands. Mrs. Power's husband is Lt. [j. g.] Joseph A. Power. He also enlisted shortly after Pearl Harbor and is now a communications officer aboard a destroyer in the southwest Pacific.

After the wives realized their husbands were serving in the same area, they sent letters to the men suggesting that they keep on the lookout for each other. After the invasion of Tarawa they met. According to the mothers, who are constantly comparing notes, both babies said their first word on the same day. It was "dada."

If Sally Lee Davidson takes after her parents in her choice of profession, she will be an aviatrix. Her father is Capt. Robert E. HELP PLEDGED BY INDUSTRIES OF SOUTH AREA

Hope to Build When the War Ends.

A $700,000 Young Men's Christian association building, a memorial to Thornton Township soldiers of World War II., is being planned for Harvey when war time building restrictions are lifted. A campaign to raise $300,000 thru neighborhood donations is now being organized. Services of the new building would be available to the 80,000 persons living within a five mile radius of Harvey.

The campaign will be undertaken the latter part of May, it was decided recently by a committee of the Harvey Association of Commerce headed by John R. Hoffman, president of the National Bank of Harvey.

Get Pledge of Support.

Frank A. Hathaway, general secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Chicago, speaking for the board of managers, has assured the committee that when $300,000 is raised thru local contributions, an additional $150,000 will be appropriated by the Y. M. C. A. of Chicago. In addition, $250,000 for the dormitory will be advanced from the productive funds of the Y. M. C. A. of Chicago.

According to Hathaway, "every industry in Harvey has given us assurance of financial support. Our campaign in Harvey and surrounding communities, such as Blue Island, Riverdale, South Holland, Dixmoor, and Calumet City, probably will bring us the balance of the $300,000."

Building of Two Sections.

The activities portion of the five story building, including gymnasia, a swimming pool, clubrooms, and lounges, would cost $450,000 and the additional $250,000 would be used to build the dormitory section. Plans of the building can be completed by January, 1945, and construction would begin thereafter as soon as government building restrictions were lifted.

Money collected during the campaign will be invested in short term government bonds on behalf of the Y. M. C. A. until construction begins.

A survey, made by A. R. Freeman, state secretary of the Y. M. C. A., at the request of the Harvey Association of Commerce, is the basis of the committee's decision to build a Harvey Y. M. C. A.

Cites Recreation Needs.

According to the survey, organized recreational facilities on a noncommercial basis for youth in Harvey "are so limited as to be almost nonexistent. There is an obvious and urgent need for a recreation center in Harvey with facilities offering not simply a place where youth may go but where leisure time may be properly and constructively used."

ARMY TO SHOW HOW AEF GETS NEWS BY RADIO

Sgt. Hargrove to Speak on Broadcast.

BY LARRY WOLTERS.

The Army hour in its broadcast over WMAQ-NBC at 2:30 p. m. today will show how the soldier in the South Pacific keeps up with what is going on in the rest of the world by means of radio, news and motion pictures. From Hollywood will come a demonstration of how radio programs, both short wave and recorded, are prepared and shipped to army low power transmitters on many fronts.

The program also will feature a two way conversation between Sgt. Marion Hargrove, author of "See Here, Pvt. Hargrove," from the United States and a correspondent for Yank in the South Pacific. Corp. Mel Allen will interview a veteran who killed 50 Japs with hand grenades.

The Catholic hour will present a new dramatic series over WMAQ-NBC at 5 p. m. Sundays, starting today. The first drama, titled "Letter to Jackie," is written around the letter the late Lt. Comdr. John Joseph Shea sent to his 5 year old son. Comdr. Shea wrote the letter shortly before he lost his life when the aircraft carrier Wasp was sunk in the South Pacific. The Rev. Timothy Mulvey adapted the letter for dramatization.

Arch Oboler has written a series of five plays titled "The Adventures of Mark Twain," which started on WMAQ-NBC at 10:15 last night. Another will be aired at 10:30 tonight over WMAQ and two more next week-end.

Boice Smith, who made his bow as a W-G-N singer last Monday, is versatile. He is featured in 15 minutes of songs and piano music Monday thru Friday at 11:45 a. m. He is an ensign in the naval reserve and is studying dentistry at Loyola university. He has been featured with the Three Romeos and formerly played drums with Don Pedro's orchestra.

OFFER HOFFMAN ARRANGEMENT ON AIR THEATER

A special arrangement of Bach's "Passacaglia and Fugue" by Adolph Hoffman, W-G-N cellist, will be presented on the Chicago Theater of the Air Symphony hour over W-G-N between 11 p. m. and midnight tomorrow. The Symphony hour features the orchestra under the direction of Henry Weber.

The program also will include a string orchestra performance of Arensky's Variations on a Theme by Tschaikowsky, and several movements from Mozart's Symphonic Concertante for Violin and Viola, featuring Robert Quick, violinist, and Armand Roth, violist. Mr. Weber comments briefly on each number.

AIR OFFENBACH FANTASY NEXT ON THEATER OF AIR

Jacques Offenbach's grand opera fantasy, "Tales of Hoffmann," will be presented on the Chicago Theater of the Air before an audience of more than 4,000 persons at Medinah temple from 8 to 9 p. m. next Saturday. W-G-N and the Mutual network will carry the program.

Col. Robert R. McCormick, editor and publisher of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, will speak. Marion Claire will sing the roles of Juliet and Antonia, and Gilbert Russell, Hoffmann, the poet. Supporting roles will be taken by Bruce Foote and Ruth Slater. The W-G-N orchestra, under the direction of Henry Weber, and the chorus, coached by Robert Trendler, will provide the musical setting.

WORLD OF SONG SERIES TO OPEN ON BLUE TODAY

A musical program titled, World of Song, is to make its debut over WENR-Blue at 3:30 p. m. today. Each Sunday the program will feature two singers who have become members of the Metropolitan Opera company thru competition on the Metropolitan Opera Auditions of the Air. Wilfred Pelletier will direct the orchestra. Leonard Warren, baritone, and Frances Greer, soprano, will appear on the premiere broadcast.

AIR BEETHOVEN, BRAHMS WORKS AT 2 P. M. TODAY

The New York Philharmonic Symphony orchestra, in its concert to be broadcast over WBBM-CBS at 2 p. m. today, will feature the first symphonies of Beethoven and Bach, the former in C major and the latter in C minor. Dr. Artur Rodzinski will be the conductor. Carl Van Doren will present another chapter of "American Scriptures" during the intermission.

S. WEST FLYER WINS AIR MEDAL IN PACIFIC AREA

Lt. Kross Takes Part in 65 Missions.

Second Lt. George Kross, marine flyer, whose home is at 3237 W. 64th pl., has been awarded the air medal and a gold star in lieu of a second award for "excellent and courageous airmanship."

Lt. Cross participated in 65 missions in the Pacific as a member of the Fighting Corsairs, a marine squadron which downed 135½ Japanese planes and had a roster of 10 aces, including Capt. Donald Aldrich, Chicago, who bagged 20 Zeros.

Close Brush with Death.

It was in a raid over Rabaul that Lt. Kross shot down a Zero that he experienced his closest brush with death.

"Caught in a trap of flaming Zeros," related Lt. Cross, "I was like a sitting duck. They riddled me almost at will. Three of their 20 millimeter shells tore thru my fuselage before I finally lost them in a cloud.

Hedge Hops 230 Miles.

Lt. Kross' Corsair burst into fire as he headed back. Flames 15 feet long leaped out of the wing and his ammunition began to explode. But rather than bail out over Jap territory he stuck to the flying inferno. "I hit the silk after hedge-hopping for 230 miles," he disclosed, "and came close to drowning in the water because of a tangled parachute."

Kross was graduated from Tilden Technical High school and joined the marine corps in 1935. He was commissioned in the combat zone last August.

Father Mao to Give Farewell Address Today

Father Mao.

The Rev. John T. S. Mao will give his farewell sermon today in the church that he established here in 1940. It is St. Therese Chinese Catholic mission, 2302 Wentworth av., the first Chinese Catholic mission in the midwest. He also started the Chinese Catholic school and Chinese C. Y. O. Recently he was appointed procurator of the Nanking, China, diocese, which entails the raising of funds for the rehabilitation of this war wrecked diocese in occupied China.

Father Mao has been touring Canada and the United States, making surveys and dispatching reports to the Chinese government for the rehabilitation program after the war. He visited 80 towns and villages studying the fisheries, farms, lumber camps, hospitalization, factories, and manual work. He believes China will pattern its program after the democratic system of the United States and Canada.

He has just started a tour of the United States and will return to Washington, D. C., when he leaves Chicago tonight. During his two week visit in Chicago he studied the University of Chicago social service plan.

Father Mao will be presented a purse in appreciation of the work he performed in Chicago for both Chinese and Americans. The purse will be made up of contributions made at a mass at the mission.

The Rev. Augustine Chow is Father Mao's successor.

This Week in the Garden

Monday, April 17.

Grow flowers in your garden and if the space is very small utilize it for flowers entirely. There is little that can be grown in the way of vegetables in a limited space but there are possibilities for growing flowers, and especially low growing kinds.

Plants received at Easter, especially foliage plants, should remain indoors for they have been growing in damp greenhouses and the changes to varying conditions of the home is not beneficial.

Tuesday, April 18.

Thin vegetable plants in the rows as soon as they can be handled. Few home-gardeners realize the importance of thinning. It stands to reason that plants growing close together can never bear their maximum number of flowers or fruits, and those that are utilized for their edible leaves cannot produce as large a plant unless given room to do so.

All gardening operations should be done on time. Work the ground when it is dry enough so that it does not stick to the tools but do not delay until it is very hot.

Wednesday, April 19.

There is nothing finer or more attractive than a well kept, luxuriant lawn, but to have such a lawn requires constant attention, at least during the first three years when it is becoming thoroly established. Give it an application of a complete plant food or fertilizer, if it has not been done.

Thursday, April 20.

Now is the proper time to plant magnolias, such as magnolia stellata and soulangeana. The tulip tree makes a fine hardy tree for suburban sections, but if you want a shade tree and one that grows almost as rapidly as a willow, try the Chinese elm. It can be trimmed to almost any shape.

Take care of the trees while they are young and keep it up every year or two and huge branches will not have to be removed when they grow into veterans. Never overplant by using too many trees for some will need removal just when they have attained an attractive appearance. Watch for insects and spray on time.

Friday, April 21.

Just as soon as the fast growing and rapidly spreading perennials are large enough to transplant separate them. These include the hardy asters like Harrington's pink, physostegia vivid, the Oswego tea or monarda, and the golden glow.

As soon as the buds show on peonies, disbud for larger bloom. An application of plant food will help them develop. Remove all old foliage from around hollyhocks and delphiniums. It is helpful to spray the ground around these plants with Bordeaux mixture.

Saturday, April 22.

Prune evergreens but not severely. Cut back the growth made last season, but no other. Cut back those shrubs that flower on the new wood, such as hydrangeas, althaeas, buddleias and others that have been winter killed.

Prepared in coöperation with Garfield park conservatory.

Book prices are slightly higher in Canada but the Club ships to Canadian members, without any extra charge for duty, through Book-of-the-Month Club (Canada), Ltd.

WHAT A SUBSCRIPTION INVOLVES: Over 500,000 book-reading families now belong to the Book-of-the-Month Club. They do so in order to keep themselves from missing the important new books they are really interested in.

As a Club member, you receive an advance publication report about the judges' choice—and also reports about all other important coming books. If you decide you want the book-of-the-month, you let it come. If not (on a blank always provided) you can specify some other book you want, or simply say: "Send me nothing."

Last year the retail value of free books given to Club members was over $7,000,000—given, not sold! These book-dividends could be distributed free because so many subscribers ordinarily want the book-of-the-month that an enormous edition can be printed. The saving on this quantity-production enables the Club to buy the right to print other fine library volumes. These are then manufactured and distributed free among subscribers—one for every two books-of-the-month purchased.

Your obligation as a member is simple. You pay no yearly fee. You merely agree to buy no fewer than four books-of-the-month in any twelve-month period. Your subscription to the Club is not for one year, but as long as you decide; you can end it at any time after taking four books-of-the-month. You pay for the books as you get them—the regular retail price (frequently less) plus a small charge to cover postage and other mailing expenses. (Prices are slightly higher in Canada.)

New Corliss Archer a Charming, Talented Actress

Miss Watt Fits Perfectly Into 'Kiss and Tell'

By Claudia Cassidy.

So another Cinderella tried on an acting slipper and it fit. Her name is Billie Lou Watt and she is the new Corliss Archer in "Kiss and Tell," a surprise package sent to the Harris by George Abbott to replace Patricia Kirkland, whose reward for nearly 12 months of sparkling service was a leading role in the new F. Hugh Herbert play.

Miss Watt looks a little like Dorothy McGuire and even more like herself. Pretty and little-girl chubby, with soft, fair hair and shining blue eyes, she is the dirndl type. She has all the qualities Corliss needs to make her plausible—the combined airs of what she calls "a ninfant" and an enchantress—and she fits in the play like a kitten in a basket. Which is all very nice, because "Kiss and Tell" is one of the town's treasures, a comedy that keeps its audiences howling with laughter when laughter is hard to come by. Not so long ago Mr. Herbert, who wrote it and spends much of his time traveling about to watch the four companies and keep a dazed eye on the profits, told Mr. Abbott, the producer, that of all four troupes Chicago's was doing the best job. Certainly Chicago has made no complaints.

Maybe there ought to be medals for actors. Not just the first night kind, won when reputations are made or broken, when excitement is in the air and a taut tingle runs thru a show which may never be quite that good again. I mean the long run kind. For holding up night after night, when the thrill is gone, and maybe a better part is just around the corner, if you could get out of your contract. Giving the customer his money's worth and keeping the theater tradition alive with warmth and reality. A good picture has this advantage, that once a fine performance is screened it exists until the end of time, or at least as long as the film holds out. But a play has to be recreated at every performance. Every time you see a bedraggled, down at heel performance your pleasure in playgoing is sabotaged. But every time you see a good one that pleasure leaps high as a trout in sunshine.

"Kiss and Tell" is just as good a show as when I first saw it almost a year ago, and it has sprouted some new lines with various Herbert visits. Its family squabbles have an air of hilarious honesty about them, so that the stage setting doesn't seem just a make-believe back porch in a small town, but a part of a community with back yards and air raid wardens and touchy feelings and old friendships that go deeper than fights about children.

Thrust into such an atmosphere, created so carefully all these weeks by actors who seldom let you see them work, the wrong Corliss Archer could have wrecked the show. She could have snarled and tangled and muddled the performance—worst of all, she could have cheapened the play. For it isn't cheap, tho it comes perilously close to losing its balance when it has Corliss' parents hinting at their own youthful indiscretions. The scene is awkwardly managed and serves no real purpose in the plot, as Corliss and Dexter are obviously babes in the wood of experience. It has to be unmistakable that they are nice youngsters caught in the trap of their own gallantry, otherwise the comedy would leer instead of smile and snicker instead of sending its audience into shouts of laughter.

Miss Watt is 19 and she looks like Corliss Archer might look, young and lovable and a born charmer. But that isn't quite enough to handle a sizable role, so she has talent, too, and skill. For all her youth she has been some time learning her chosen trade.

She was born in St. Louis and during her high school years she appeared with the St. Louis Municipal Opera, in stock with the St. Louis School of the Theater, and on the radio. Then Charlie McCarthy came into her life, at least by indirection. She won an Edgar Bergen scholarship to Northwestern university's school of speech, and appeared there with the university theater. Last January, in her junior year, she decided to try Broadway. She got there Jan. 10 and made straight for the George Abbott office, knowing that Mr. Abbott specializes in plays about the young.

According to legend she should have sat drearily in outer offices, snubbed, ignored, and thwarted in her search for fame. But it didn't happen like that. Robert Griffith, a stage director, took one look at her and said, "You're Corliss Archer." All four companies were cast, but Mr. Abbott offered to send her to the coast as understudy. She didn't go. After all, she had just reached Broadway and she wanted to stay. But her luck held. In February she rehearsed the role of Corliss and played it for an audience of one, Mr. Abbott. He put her in the New York company as understudy for three weeks while the regular understudy played one of the roles. Then he arranged for her to play Corliss at a matinee when Mr. Herbert was in town. They both agreed they had another Dexter tormenter on their hands, if they just knew where to put her.

Then Gilbert Miller decided to stage Mr. Herbert's new play and wanted Patricia Kirkland for its young heroine. Mr. Abbott said he would release her only when he had a first rate Corliss as substitute. He sent for Miss Watt, who had gone out of town. But telephone messages finally reached her and she found she was coming to Chicago on the first train. She did and they are still fitting her Corliss costumes. But she fits Corliss without alterations.

NEW ON HARRIS STAGE

There's a new Corliss at the Archer house, meaning "Kiss and Tell," at the Harris. She is pretty Billie Lou Watt, shown in the center of a family group including Mrs. Archer, played by Katharine Warren, and embattled Mr. Archer, played by Clay Clement.

THE BUILDING OF JALNA

By MAZO DE LA ROCHE

(Copyright: 1944: By Mazo de la Roche.)

INSTALMENT IV.

FOR A WEEK they pressed forward in fair weather. Then the head wind increased in strength and the ship struggled on against it and against the rising green waves that crashed on her bow, enveloping her in spray. It was no longer possible to stay on deck. They must spend the long hours below where there was not only the close air but the smells and noises from the steerage to be endured. The ayah became seasick and Adeline had the care of the baby on her hands.

They were going to their berths early one stormy night when there was a thumping on the door and Conway's voice called out:

"Philip! There's a leak sprung!"

"What?" shouted Philip, staying the unbuttoning of his waistcoat.

"She has sprung a plank! She's leaking!"

Then there came the heavy tramping of feet overhead and the shouts of officers.

Adeline turned pale. She had the quietly whimpering baby in her arms.

"Will the ship sink?" she asked.

"Certainly not. Don't be alarmed," said Philip. He threw open the door.

Conway stood there supporting himself by the brass railing which ran along the passage. He wore a bright colored dressing gown. With the door open the noise of tramping feet and vehement shoutings, the roar of the steadily rising squall, the thunder and rattle of canvas and tackle, was increased. The sails were being lowered.

"They're lowering the sails!" shouted Conway but his voice came as no more than a whisper. "It's blowing a terrible gale."

His brother stood close behind him, clinging to the railing. He looked green with seasickness. Adeline said to him:

"Come in and lie down in my berth, Sholto. You must keep the baby while we go to see the captain."

The boy obediently stumbled into the cabin and threw himself onto the berth.

Adeline placed the baby beside him.

"You are not to come, Adeline," Philip shouted.

Her eyes flashed rebellion. She gripped his arm in her hands. "I will come!" she shouted back.

Clinging to the rail and to each other they gained the companionway. They found the captain and the first officer supervising the lowering of the sails. The great canvas thundered deckward as in terrifying capitulation. The stark masts looked suddenly fragile and the ship vulnerable. The wind blew with terrific force and green walls of water reared themselves, then came crashing against the side of the rolling ship. The heaving wash of the waters was palely illumined by a cloud bound moon, that only now and again really showed herself. Adeline had seen storms at sea before this and they were tropic storms, but the ship had been larger, the company more numerous. There was a loneliness about this storm. The little group of people seemed helpless, the wind was piercing cold. However the captain spoke with equanimity.

"It's nothing but a squall," he said in his hearty, Yorkshire accent. "I've been round the cape many times myself and this is naught but a puff of wind. So you'd best go back to your berths, ladies, and not worry."

Above the noise of the storm came confused shoutings and tramping from the companionway. The steerage passengers were pouring up from below. They looked wild eyed, rough, and terrified.

Capt. Bradley strode over to them. "What does this mean?" he demanded.

The second mate shouted back, "I couldn't keep them down there, sir! The water's pouring in below."

The captain looked grim. He pressed his way thru the crowd, ordering them to descend with him, which they did in great confusion.

Adeline heard him shout, "All hands to the pumps!"

Philip was patting her on the back. He was smiling at her. She smiled bravely back. He raised his voice and said, "The squall is passing. Everything will be all right."

"Take Mrs. Cameron's arm," she said. "She looks ready to drop."

Mary Cameron had left her mother's side. Conway Court had his arm about her. Neither of them looked frightened. Philip helped Mrs. Cameron back to her cabin. The wind was falling. Yet the sea was still heavy with great thundering waves and the wind still fierce enough to fill the storm-sails to which the ship had been stripped, to bursting point. In the welter of the waves the Alanna lay almost on her beam-ends. Now a rainstorm advanced like a wall, seeming to join with the waves in the effort to drown those aboard.

But Capt. Bradley was not downcast. He went about, ruddy faced and cheerfully shouting his orders. Adeline felt that, if she went below, she should be desperate with fear. Here in the midst of the activity she felt herself equal to Philip in courage. She drew Mary Cameron and Conway to her side and the three linked themselves, waiting Philip's return.

"I gave her some brandy," he said as he came up. "She needed it, poor lady, for she is half dead with cold." He turned to the girl. "Shall I take you down to your mother, Mary?"

"Did she ask for me?" Mary's voice was slightly sulky.

"No. I think she'll sleep. Perhaps you are better with us."

Mr. Wilmott came up to them.

"The officers are not alarmed," he said, "but the leak appears to be a bad one. The four pumps are working like the devil. Mr. D'Arcy and Mr. Brent are helping to man them and I'm ready to give a hand when I'm needed."

When morning came there was 5 feet of water in the hold. The pumps were working hard and the captain said he had the situation under control. A stewardess brought breakfast to Adeline in her cabin. She had changed into dry things, but had not slept. The tiny room was in a state of disorder, her wet clothing, the belongings of Philip and the baby, scattered promiscuously and depressingly. She felt herself being sucked into a vortex of confusion, rather than of fear. But the hot tea, the bread, and bacon put life into her. She sat on the edge of the berth and combed out her hair. A pale sunlight filtered in at the porthole. She noticed the lively beauty of her hair. "It would look like this, even if I were drowning," she thought, half resentfully.

Adeline crossed the passage to the ayah's cabin and looked in. In the pale sunlight nurse and infant looked equally fragile and remote. But they were sleeping peacefully.

Adeline went to Mrs. Cameron's cabin. The poor woman lay on her berth exhausted after her last bout of sea sickness. The air was heavy with the scent of eau de Cologne. Mary was seated in front of the tiny dressing table gazing at herself in the glass with a fascinated look. She was unaware of the opening of the door, but continued to give her large-eyed reflection stare for stare, while the ship heaved and a cupboard door flew open, then banged shut, with each roll. Adeline laughed.

"Well, what do you think of yourself?" she asked.

"O, Mrs. Whiteoak," answered Mary. "I'm pretty—pretty! I have traveled right 'round the world and never found it out till now."

"Well," said Adeline, "it is a queer time to have discovered it. But if it's a comfort to you, I'm glad you think so."

Adeline found Sholto recovering from his sea sickness. He was sipping coffee and eating a hard biscuit, but he was very pale. Conway was changing into dry clothes.

"O, Adeline," exclaimed Sholto, "I wish I'd never come on this voyage! We shall quite likely go down. O, I do wish I were back in Ireland with mama and papa and Timothy and all!"

"Nonsense," said Adeline, sitting down on the side of the berth. "In a few days you'll be laughing at this. Here, eat your biscuit."

She turned to Conway. "Go and find Philip and tell him I want him. Just say I must see him and that it is important."

He opened the door and went into the passage, but it was a struggle to close the door after him against the rolling of the ship. Adeline had to go and put her weight against it.

She returned to Sholto. "I suspect Conn of making up to that little Cameron girl. That's why I sent him away—so I could ask you. Sholto, tell me, has he been telling her she's pretty? Has he been making up to her?"

Sholto's green eyes were bright. "Indeed he has! We are never alone but he is up to his tricks. 'O, but you're the pretty thing!' he says. 'O, the lovely little neck on you!' he says. 'O, the long fair eyelashes! Come close and touch my cheek with them!'"

"And did she?"

"She did."

Adeline bent her brows into a somber line. "I shall tell Mary's mother," she said, "to keep her away from the rascal."

The door opened and Conway, clinging to it, looked in. He said:

"Philip has gone to your cabin. He's as wet as a rat."

"Come in and shut that door!" He did and stood pale and smiling before her.

"Conn," she said, "you ought to be ashamed of yourself—making love to a child!"

"What has that little twister been telling you?" he demanded, his cold eyes on his brother.

"Philip, are we in danger? Will the ship carry us safely to Newfoundland?"

"I did not need to hear it from him," said Adeline. "She told me herself that she'd just discovered she was pretty and I've been watching you. Now, I say no more of it!"

Adeline found Philip standing in the middle of their cabin waiting for her. His clothes were wet and crumpled, his fair hair plastered in a fringe on his forehead. He looked so ridiculous that she would have laughed, but she saw the frown on his face. He asked curtly:

"Why did you send for me?"

"I was anxious about you."

"I've been standing here waiting for you."

"Only a few moments! I have been with Sholto. He's sick."

"So is everyone. What do you want of me?"

"I want you to change into dry things."

He turned toward the door. "If that is all—"

She caught his arm. "Philip you are not to go! You'll get your death!"

"I should make a poor soldier if this would kill me."

"But what can you do?"

"For one thing, I can put some courage and order into the steerage passengers. They are on the verge of panic. As for you, you might tidy up this cabin. It's vile!"

"What do you expect!" she cried. "I have a sick baby! I have an ayah who is half dead! I have Mrs. Cameron to visit! I have my young brother to look after! I worry myself ill about you. And you ask me to tidy up the cabin!"

In a fury she began to snatch up garments and to thrust them into boxes or on pegs.

Philip's face relaxed. "Adeline," he said, "you make any situation ridiculous. Come, my pet, don't let us quarrel." He put his arms about her and his lips to her hair. "Do find me a pair of gloves for I've blistered my palms at the pump."

She was instantly solicitous for him. First she kissed the blistered palms, then she bathed them, applied a soothing ointment, a bandage, and found a pair of loose gloves for him. So administered to he became quite meek and changed into dry clothes and brushed his hair.

"Philip," she asked as she coiled his hair, "is everything as simple as the captain says? Are we in danger? Will the ship carry us safely to Newfoundland?"

"We can cope with the leak," he answered gravely. "And if only this damned head wind would fall and a favorable wind spring up we should do very well."

They did keep the leak under control, the sun came out fitfully; a kind of order was created on the ship, the wind promised to fall. Regular shifts at the pumps were arranged and, when the time of changing came, the cry of "Spell ho!" rang out from Grigg's enormous mouth. The captain looked determinedly cheerful. The Alanna pushed on thru the buffeting of the waves. She seemed running straight into the ruddy sunset. A sailor came bounding up to the captain who was talking with Philip and Mr. Wilmott.

"The cargo has shifted!" he said out of breath.

Philip went to where Adeline and her brothers had found a sheltered corner on the deck. The boys were tired and had stretched themselves in complete abandon on either side of her. Conway's head lay against her shoulder, Sholto's on her lap. Upon my word, thought Philip, they look no better than the emigrants. Adeline raised her eyes from the pages of Esmond.

His stern expression startled her. She sat upright. "What is it now?" she demanded.

Conway woke and sprang to his feet. He looked dazed. He stammered:

"Why—Philip—why? Adeline—the deck! Look at the deck!"

"Yes," said Philip. "The ballast has shifted. She's listing badly. The captain says there's nothing for it but to go back to Galway for repairs."

"Back to Galway for repairs!" repeated Adeline and Conway in one voice. Then he laughed. "What a joke on us!" He shook his brother by the shoulder. "Wake up, Sholto! You're going to see dear old Ireland again!"

"How long will it take?" asked Adeline.

"With this wind behind us we'll do it in a few days."

"We must not let my mother know we are there. It would upset her so. She'd be bound to come all the way to Galway to see us, and the good-bys to say all over again!"

Sholto wore a strange look of joy.

The Alanna had turned back with the sound of thunder in her sails as she veered. Now to the wind she had struggled against for so many days she surrendered herself, let it drive her back toward Ireland and strained every inch of canvas to be there with the least loss of time. But the shifting of the ballast made her awkward. No one could forget the way she listed. It was as tho every one on board had suddenly become lame, leaning to one side when they walked.

A strange intimacy sprang up among the passengers. They seemed to have known each other for years. Their faces, their gestures, their peculiarities were etched on each other's minds. Then, on the eighth day, the dim shape of Ireland became visible on the horizon.

Galway bay lay blue and tranquil, church bells were ringing as the barque, at a melancholy angle, moved slowly into the port. Then, for the first time in 10 days, the pound of the pumps ceased. The eardrums of those on board were freed to take in the sound of the bells and the singing of birds.

Adeline stood in the bow facing the light breeze that carried the warm scents of the land. Her nostrils quivered and she gave a little laugh. Mr. Wilmott came up just in time to hear it.

"You are fortunate to be able to laugh, Mrs. Whiteoak," he said. "To me this is a most depressing return."

She looked at him over her shoulder, her white teeth gleaming between her parted lips.

"Why," she exclaimed, "aren't you glad to smell the land again—and hear the bells?"

"Not the old land," he answered bitterly. "Not these bells. I never expected to be here again. I want the new world."

"Well, you'll get it, if only you have patience. You might be at the bottom of the sea. I'm thankful to be alive!"

"You are different. You are young and full of hope."

"But you aren't old! And you have told me of interesting plans you have. This is just a mood. It will pass."

He smiled too. "Of course, it will. I certainly cannot feel downcast when I am near you."

The ayah stood nearby with the baby in her arms, her pale colored robe fluttering about her emaciated figure. It was the first time she had been on deck since her bout of seasickness, and she looked scarcely able to stand, let alone carry the child. But her heavy lidded eyes shone with joy at the sight of the green land and little Augusta held out her hands toward the gulls that came circling about the ship.

Philip strode down the deck.

"I have the luggage ready!" he exclaimed. "I'm not leaving any of our valuables on board."

"The captain says they will be safe."

"Humph! Anyhow we shall need our things. This leak isn't to be mended in a jiffy."

"Have you seen my brothers?" Adeline asked. "Have they got their things together?"

"Here is Sholto to answer for himself." Philip eyed the boy sternly. He was laden with his belongings, gathered together in promiscuous fashion. His pale face was alight with exhilaration.

"I can scarcely wait," he exclaimed in an exaggerated brogue, "to plant me feet on the ould sod! Praise be to God I shall sleep in a dacent bed and put me teeth in some dacent food before long!"

"Where is Conway?" demanded Adeline.

"Merciful heavens!" cried Adeline.

Philip threw them both a warning look. Mr. Wilmott considerately moved away, out of hearing.

"She is packing his things for him," went on Sholto. "He says he is too tired and the silly girl believes him. She believes whatever he says and does everything he tells her."

"I shall attend to him," said Adeline.

Conway lay stretched on the berth, a happy smile on his face, his strange colored hair falling about his cheeks. Mary Cameron was bent over a portmanteau carefully packing his toilet articles, under his direction.

"Well, this is a pretty sight!" cried Adeline. "O, you lazy pig, Conn! Get up out of that and do your own work! Mary, you ought to be ashamed of yourself. Why aren't you helping your mother?"

Mary raised a flushed face. She said, with a touch of defiance:

"Everything is done for my mother. She is resting till we disembark."

"Then go and sit by her. Don't you know better than to be alone with a young man in his cabin? Have you traveled half way round the world and learned nothing?"

"My mamma has told me," answered Mary, "to be afraid of Indians and to be afraid of Chinamen and Frenchmen, but she has not told me to be afraid of Irishmen."

Adeline found it hard not to laugh but she said sternly,—"Then she did wrong, for they are the worst of all. Now, run off. If Conn needs help I'll give it him." She pushed Mary out of the room.

She came to her brother and took him by the ear.

"Conn," she said, "have you ever laid a hand on that girl?"

He twisted his head so he could kiss her forearm.

"I swear I've said nothing to Mary you might not have heard—or her mother."

She let him go. "Thank God for that! Now, get up and pack your bags."

What Has Gone Before

Having inherited a legacy from a greataunt, Adeline Court, an Irish beauty, visits her Cousin Judith in India. There she meets and marries Philip Whiteoak, dashing officer of the hussars. Their first child is delicate and Adeline's health is impaired. When Philip's uncle in Canada dies and leaves Philip heir to his property they decide to venture to the new world to establish their home. They sail for England, where Adeline meets Philip's family, then journey to Ireland to Adeline's old home where Adeline assures him true hospitality is dispensed. They are welcomed by Renny Court, her father; Lady Honoria, her mother, and three young brothers, Conway, Sholto, and Timothy. There are occasional fiery encounters between her father and Adeline, the only one of his 11 children who has no fear of him. Philip is anxious to get away. When they sail, Patsy O'Flynn, the coachman, and Adeline's two young brothers, Conway and Sholto, accompany them. On the ship they become friendly with two Irish gentlemen, D'Arcy and Brent; Mrs. Cameron of Montreal and her daughter, Mary, and an Englishman, Mr. Wilmott, who is going to settle in Canada.

Corsets and Plows Helped Make History

"PILLS, PETTICOATS, AND PLOWS," by Thomas D. Clark. [Bobbs-Merrill, $3.50.]

Reviewed by Marguerite Lyon.

Or, you might prefer "Bacon, Barbed Wire, and Bustles." The title refers to the almost incredible mixture of merchandise carried in the old time southern country stores, those amazing businesses that sprang up at cross-roads immediately after the Civil war.

Thomas D. Clark.

They were essential to the life of each community. Large purchases were no longer made by plantation owners. Instead numerous individual families, both white and black, must be supplied with groceries, meats, medicines, farm equipment, clothing, and coffins.

Credit for these purchases was given by means of lien notes which the owner of a few sandy, cotton growing acres could sign at the store each spring. Consistent crop failures meant that the cotton grower lost his land and moved elsewhere to start over as a tenant farmer. The merchant got the land, sometimes a doubtful asset.

In this absorbing work of Americana, Prof. Clark has ignored the magnolia and moonlight aspect. He gives us cold, hard bookkeeping facts gleaned from hundreds of old time country store ledgers, and thousands of ragged notes scrawled on newspaper margins and envelope backs asking the merchant to "Pls send by boy on mule" so much of this and that. These facts paint an authentic picture of the south thru an era ending with the advent of automobiles.

Altho an undercurrent of pathos and human misery runs thru these pages, your nostalgic memories of the open cracker barrel, the store cat, the yard goods counter, and the hot stove league will be completely satisfied.

Somehow Prof. Clark has contrived to put the very fragrance of a country store into these pages. Certainly he proves that the country store played an important part in the history of the south. Many a thriving town has sprung up around a cross-roads store. Many a politician has ridden to glory on his hitching post popularity. Many a southern romance has flourished thru the merchants' stocks of Hoyt cologne, Adm. Dewey corsets, starched shirt fronts, and paper collars.

Here's the Martini of Current Books

"MR. G. STRINGS ALONG," by Robert Wilder. [Putnam, $2.50.]

When the war came, Mr. G. felt that somehow his idyllic existence in North Carolina, manufacturing tin jumping frogs, was not quite essential. It was with considerable delight and amazement, then, that he greeted the government expediters and construction crews, come to convert him into a war goods maker. His delight turned to consternation, however, when he discovered that the government crew had built an ideal community but had forgotten the factory. Then follows one of the most hilarious trips to Washington ever recorded. Mr. G. ends up with a Brobdingnagian hangover and a blonde, and the story goes on its mirthful way. It is filled with impossible, delightful characters and opium dream adventures. It's the martini—extra dry—of the current book crop.

Industrialists warn us not to get too heated up about the possibility of flying flivvers, teardrop shaped cars, and family helicopters immediately after the war. But upon looking thru these two books even the most pessimistic reader will be impatient for peace to bring the marvels that have bubbled up from war's cauldron.

New cars with plastic, plywood, or light metal bodies will sell from $300 to $700, Mr. Cooley estimates, and engines of almost incredible efficiency, operating perhaps on 150 octane gasoline, will speed us on our way, safeguarded by radar against accidents.

Prefabricated houses, retailing at about $2,000, will be set up while we wait. We'll sleep in cool rooms under "blankets" of black light, and mother can listen to soap operas all day, because gadgets will do her work.

Television? You bet. And electronics will do amazing things. Four passenger helicopters will cost about $1,500. Eight engined transport planes will allow us to spend leisurely week-ends in London if we wish. Food and clothing will be simplier, better.

These are just a few of the things waiting around the corner—probably a little farther off than these enthusiastic authors are willing to concede. Mr. Cooley's book is illustrated with dozens of effective pictures. These two volumes are based on widely different material, and readers who would like a preview of the post-war world will find both of them highly intriguing.

Fresh Talent Is Seen in Work of Young Armenian

"THE DOVE BRINGS PEACE," by Richard Hagopian. [Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Edward Wagenknecht.

In these stories sounds the voice of a fresh, exciting, and possibly significant talent. Their 30 year old author, who is of Armenian extraction, has lived in New England, California, and the northwest, and has worked in music and religion as well as literature. He may lack some of Saroyan's pyrotechnics, but he has the same rich humanity, and he is already free of the astonishing and naive ineptitude that sometimes crops out so disconcertingly in the older writer, alongside of his finest achievements.

Hagopian writes of his own people—their memories of past joys and sorrows, their contacts with Italian neighbors in the tenements, their attempts to adjust themselves to a strange new world. He records European legend and American anecdote. "Snake on the Cob" is unabashed burlesque; "And We Always Came Back" is a chronicle of searing pain—happily quite free of the sadism which has been so ominous a note in much recent literature of this character.

Not all Mr. Hagopian's experiments in this collection have been successful. Sometimes he misses the effect he aims at; sometimes he simply spills out his notebook on the printed page. But when all allowances have been made, the transmutation of personal emotion into universal emotion has been accomplished in a gratefully large number of cases. Whether Mr. Hagopian can go on to the novel will now depend on whether or not he can make the jump to a less direct and transcriptional use of personal experience.

Third Edition of Science Year Book

"SCIENCE YEAR BOOK OF 1944," compiled by John D. Ratcliff. [Doubleday, Doran, $2.50.]

Twenty-nine articles from magazines of general circulation and a 20 page introduction by the editor make up the third of Mr. Ratcliff's science annuals. His introduction covers a number of "victories in the world of science" not reviewed in the reprinted articles. The entire book is entertaining, manifestly dealing with important material, and authoritative enough to satisfy the average lay reader.

Chicago Symphony Ends Its 53d Season This Week

on the Aisle
by Claudia Cassidy

OPERA and spring come hand in hand, unless the weather man double crosses us with one of those belated blizzards that needle the wind on Wacker drive, dyeing operatic noses pink and giving a haystack effect to what was once a cherished coiffure. Trying to get into the Civic Opera house on a windy night is one of the more spirited struggles of the universe. When Mike Todd had "Something for the Boys" over there, he seriously considered paying a man to do nothing but admit embattled females piled high with packages, or clutching piteously at precarious bonnets that would smash like eggshells once they succumbed to the sport of the winds. Nothing came of Mr. Todd's impulse, but at least it was sympathetic.

Opera (For Sure) and Spring (We Hope) Come Hand in Hand

Opera is an anachronism to some people, an adventure to the rest of us. Certainly the more opera you know, the more you want to know. It shares the lure of ballet in that you want to see all possible stars in all possible roles, just for what might happen. So even those who are sharply disappointed not to hear Helen Traubel's Isolde welcome the opportunity to hear Marjorie Lawrence sing the role, just as a few years ago they were curious about Miss Traubel's substitution for the beloved Kirsten Flagstad. Beecham's conducting of the opera will be Chicago news, as will Bruno Walter's revival of "The Masked Ball," Lauritz Melchior's singing of Parsifal, Patrice Munsel's debut as a highly touted coloratura, and the arrival of the Basque baritone, Martial Singher.

Mr. Singher sounds like he would have been an ideal recruit for our brilliant French wing when Mary Garden, now retired and writing what should be her fabulous memoirs, was its matchless star. I have heard him only as Dapertutto in "The Tales of Hoffmann," which was a sensitive foray into the sinister. He is the son-in-law of Fritz Busch, the conductor, and a singer of songs as well as of operatic roles from Pelléas to Mozart's Figaro. An informative article about him, written by Herbert F. Peyser in the current Musical America, tells an amusing tale of his meeting with Melchior, singing Iago to the great Dane's Othello as last minute substitute for Vanni-Marcoux. Carried away by the Moor's rage, the giant Melchior hurled the slight Singher into the footlights, smashing five of them and not doing the baritone any good, either. It is typical of Melchior's bear-like amiability that the two became the best of friends.

Parsifal One of Melchior's Great Roles.

Melchior's Parsifal is one of his great roles and it is one of those inexplicable quirks of casting that we have not yet heard it. As the "guileless fool" of Wagner's consecrational festival play, he is the Christ-like figure who alone can resist the wiles of enchanted Kundry, rescuing the sacred spear from the forces of evil that Amfortas, knight of the Holy Grail, may be healed. Kundry, too, will be new, sung by Kerstin Thorborg. A tragic wanderer on the face of the angry earth until redeemed by Parsifal, Kundry goes back into legend as Herodiade, condemned for laughing at the head of John the Baptist. Wagner changed her to a woman who laughed at the Saviour bearing His cross. All the others of the cast are new here, except Alexander Kipnis as Gurnemanz, who sings the tender glory of the Good Friday Spell. A lot of confirmed opera goers will tell you that Gurnemanz is a wordy bore, a conclusion given some ballast by the industrious Irving Kolodin's compilation of how he stacks up with other characters in the opera in the matter of verbosity. He figures that Gurnemanz has 369 lines to all other characters' 379. But I never have heard Kipnis sing Gurnemanz without being sad when he stopped singing.

Even if I disliked "The Masked Ball," and I like it very much, Bruno Walter in the pit would send me scurrying to the opera house. He is one of the great men of our time, and Chicago is poorer because he considers himself too old to accept a permanent post. No one else agrees, but the decision is up to Mr. Walter, and we accept it because we must. But it will be a pleasure to add some of Verdi's most tuneful music to what we know of his way with music drama.

"The Masked Ball" in Sweden.

"The Masked Ball" has long been a movable feast in the matter of locale and décor, and the Metropolitan has placed it in Sweden, because Verdi took his libretto from a tale of the assassination of Sweden's king, Gustave III. Verdi wrote the opera for Neopolitan carnival production, but because of an attempt made on the life of Napoleon III. the authorities clamped down on opera dealing with regicide. The locale was shifted to Boston, where a governor could be murdered with Italian impunity. In this transition some of the characters became Negroes and Ulrica, the seeress, often appears in blackface. However, the opera later was restored to Naples with a Spanish tint, because a vain tenor named Mario didn't fancy himself in Bostonian garb of the colonial era, nor did he care to be a mere governor when a ruffled grandee could be substituted. He became the duke of Olivares, and sang the barcarolle disguised as a Neapolitan fisherman.

The plot of "The Masked Ball" has its quaint moments, particularly when Renato does not recognize his own wife because a gauzy veil floats over her face, billowing gently as she sings. But it is filled with singable music, including some wonderful laughing choruses that range from the joyous to the sardonic.

Pinza and "Papaya."

Helen Traubel isn't singing for us this season, but she did come thru town on her way to California, and had breakfast at Henrici's, a handsome Juno eating whitefish. She told me a lovely story about Pinza, whose English is as sketchy as his basso cantante is magnificent. He was indignant about a certain radio program that had the temerity to ask him to sing a song he called "Papaya." "Papaya?" puzzled Miss Traubel, wondering what on the singer's earth that might be. "Yes, 'Papaya,'" insisted Pinza aggrievedly, "you know it, 'Papaya,' sailor man."

Orchestra to Be Heard in Five Concerts

For the final week of its 53d season, the Chicago Symphony orchestra under Désiré Defauw will be heard in five concerts. The first of these will be the concluding concert of the Milwaukee series tomorrow. This will be followed by a young people's concert on Wednesday, the Thursday-Friday subscription programs, and a Saturday afternoon concert for sustaining members of the Orchestral association.

Mr. Defauw gives the title "Great Love Poems" to his final Thursday-Friday program and lists under this heading Tschaikowsky's "Romeo and Juliet" overture, the suite from Faure's "Pelléas and Mélisande," the Prelude and Love Death from Wagner's "Tristan and Isolde" and Brahms' First symphony in C minor. The young people's concert on Wednesday at 3:30 is a repetition of the one played two weeks earlier, and programs an excerpt from Beethoven's Ninth symphony, Liszt's "Hungarian Fantasie" for piano and orchestra played by Lillian Najarian, and Paganini's first violin concerto with David Davis, 11 year old violinist, as soloist.

Lillian Najarian.

The program for the sustaining members will be on Saturday at 2 and will be of one hour's duration. It will be broadcast as the final program of the series of five sponsored by NBC. Mr. Defauw will conduct Strauss' "Don Juan," Debussy's "Afternoon of a Faun," Sibelius' "Swan of Tuonela," and the suite from Stravinsky's "Fire Bird."

Ruth Page, Walter Camryn, and the Concert Dance group with Betsy Ross, soloist, will give a program of new dances at the Civic theater this afternoon at 3:30. Miss Page will give several of her dance narrations to music of Lt. [j. g.] Lehman Engel, including Macleish's "Nocturne," Garcia Lorca's "Lament for the Death of a Spanish Bullfighter," Langston Hughes' "Death in Harlem," and Ogden Nash's "Lucy Lake." Mr. Camryn will present "Casey at the Bat" to music by Laura Aborn, "Boston John, the Shaker," and Symphony in C minor, with the ensemble, to music by Haydn. Miss Ross will appear as soloist in Heinrich Heine's "Adonis" to Lt. Engel's music, and Miss Page and Mr. Camryn will dance together in McKee's "Valse Cecile." Bentley Stone, Miss Page's former dancing partner, is on leave from the army air forces and will participate in the program.

Sybil Shearer will give a recital of original solo dances at the Goodman theater this afternoon at 3:30. She will be assisted by Jeanne Panot, pianist; Carl Rink, violinist, and Richard Beidel, cellist. Her program lists two dances to music of Bach, "Pastoral" by Corelli, a "Prologue" by Dane Rudhyar, "Spanish Reversal" by Fauré, "In a Vacuum" by Moussorgsky, "In the Field" by Villa-Lobos, and "In the Cool of the Garden" by Ravel.

• • •

The Northwestern University Symphony orchestra, under the direction of George Dasch, will give a concert in Cahn auditorium, Scott hall, Evanston, this afternoon at 4. The orchestra will play Brahms' First symphony and Tschaikowsky's "Nutcracker" suite. Annabelle Shrago, pianist, will be the soloist, playing Beethoven's Concerto No. 3 in C minor.

U. of Virginia Ceremony Marks Jefferson Birthday

School Omits Celebration of Charter Day

By the Rev. John Evans.

The University of Virginia celebrated last week the 201st anniversary of the birthday of its founder, Thomas Jefferson. This year also marks the 125th anniversary of the university's charter, but this will not be specially noted, the officers and faculty preferring to occupy themselves, over and above war duties, with plans for the curricular future.

By action of the Virginia general assembly the university has been consolidated with the Mary Washington college for women in Fredericksburg, and four years have been granted for working out merger details. The assembly also allotted more than 4 million dollars for the expansion of the university's plant, and the new buildings will be designed to conform to the original structures planned and constructed under Jefferson's supervision.

The committee on plans for the expansion of teaching is carefully considering Jefferson's ideals which rested on an abiding faith in democracy rooted in education; he believed you could trust men if you trained them, and what he wrote about the training of young men is more than ever pertinent today.

Featured in last week's ceremony was the presentation by Dr. Diogenes Escalante, ambassador from Venezuela to the United States, of a portrait of South America's liberator, Simon Bolivar, to be hung in the Sala Bolivar, a room in the university dedicated to inter-American friendship. It will hang beside the portrait of Don Francisco Bolivar, nephew and adopted son of Simon Bolivar, who was a student at the University of Virginia soon after its founding. The portrait is the joint gift of Fernando S. Bolivar of Caracas and Dr. Vicente Lecuna, Venezuelan historian.

The founder's day address was delivered by Dr. Dumas Malone, former chief editor of the Dictionary of American Biography on the theme "Mr. Jefferson Goes to War." Mr. Malone recently resigned as director of the Harvard university press to work on a comprehensive biography of Thomas Jefferson. He selected the University of Virginia for this work because historical material was collated some years ago when all Jefferson's writings were cataloged and indexed on more than 45,000 cards.

The University of Virginia became an important center for the study of American history in 1938 when the collection of the late Tracy W. McGregor was added to the Alderman library.

Foreseeing increased post-war emphasis on liberal education President Snyder of Northwestern university announces four additions to the faculty. Alfred I. Hallowell, an authority on the American Indian, is appointed professor of anthropology; Corwin D. Edwards comes from the department of justice to be professor of economics; Ray A. Billington of Smith college, and Philip Powell from the University of Pennsylvania will be professor and assistant in the history department.

Diana Barrymore and Bramwell Fletcher, a new husband and wife team, who come to the Selwyn tomorrow night in Daphne du Maurier's "Rebecca," dramatized by the author.

Notes of the Theater

Tomorrow night's opening is "Rebecca," dramatized by Daphne du Maurier from her best selling novel, and new to this country, altho it is said to have run more than two years in England, unperturbed by the smashing success of the picture. The Selwyn cast is headed by Bramwell Fletcher, Florence Reed, and Diana Barrymore, daughter of the late John Barrymore and Michael Strange, and the producer is Victor Payne-Jennings. The director is Clarence Derwent, who etched an unforgettable portrait of the Jewish doctor in Cornell's "The Doctor's Dilemma," and not so long ago was credited with stealing some scenes in the Lunt-Fontanne production of "The Pirate." Mr. Derwent also is in "Rebecca's" cast, along with Margaret Bannerman, Franklyn Fox, Claude Horton, Guy Spaull, Richard Temple, Edgar Kent, and Jacqueline Max. The play will be the fifth of the American Theater society subscription plays and will play Sunday nights.

Perhaps the sixth and last of the subscription plays will be the revival of the Rodgers and Hart musical, "A Connecticut Yankee." Rumor has it moving into the Studebaker, on the heels of "Abie's Irish Rose."

• • •

"The Open Road," an adaptation by Ann Ronell and Milton Lazarus of Johann Strauss' "The Gypsy Baron," will open the St. Louis Municipal Opera season June 1. Other productions planned include "Good News," "The Vagabond King," "Eileen," "Hit the Deck," "Naughty Marietta," "Maytime," "Irene," "The Bohemian Girl," "The Red Mill," and "Rio Rita." Laurence Schwab is the director, with E. J. Kennedy as production manager and Jack Sheehan as stage manager.

One of the stories in the wake of "Oklahoma's!" resounding success concerns the number of people who missed the boat. When the Theater Guild opened the musical more than a year ago it was, in race track parlance, a sleeper. Not even its rosiest boosters foresaw first year receipts of $2,500,000. Howard Kullman, the theater's No. 1 angel and a kind of bellwether for other angels, turned it down flat. Lee Shubert is credited, justly or otherwise, with wanting to withdraw his backing. Mary Martin turned down the role of Laurey, but did all right for herself in "One Touch of Venus." Ella Raines turned down another part, but went to Hollywood instead. And almost no one connected with the show thought much of the title, changed to "Oklahoma!" from "Away We Go," after consideration of such marquee legends as "Shore's Shootin'," "Beautiful Mornin'," "Ok'ahoma Hayride," "Territory Tale," and "Laurey's Dream."

Howard Lang, co-producer of "Good Night, Ladies," has a new farce comedy, "School for Brides," opening at the Geary theater, San Francisco, tonight, with plans for Vancouver and Seattle before starting east. In the cast are Glenda Farrell, Roscoe Karns, John Sheehan, Warren Ashe, and Joan Webster.

Possibly because the navy is nudging him, Michael Todd has changed his plans about the Mae West show, "Catherine Was Great." Instead of opening in California and jumping to Chicago, it will transfer its attentions to New York.

One of New York's theatrical institutions is no more. Sam Zolotow has suspended his advance theatrical guide, which for 20 years or more has told drama editors the facts of theatrical life, and has guided drama critics to the right theater at the right time on the right night. It was just too much work, said Mr. Zolotow when interviewed, which is no comfort at all to critics who aren't going to know where to go and when.

"Female Wanted," a mystery play by John Houston and Griff Morris, will be presented by the Actors company at Forester theater Wednesday evening. The action takes place inside an abandoned lighthouse on a deserted stretch of the New Jersey coast.

Erich Korngold, who arranged Offenbach's music for the Reinhardt version of "La Belle Helene" known as "Helen Goes to Troy," also will be its conductor when the musical opens at the Alvin theater in New York April 24. Jarmila Novotna has been borrowed from the Metropolitan for the title role, with Ernest Truex as chief comedian.

"King Lear" is the current production at the Goodman theater, where it will play nightly, except Mondays and Tuesdays, thru May 6, with a matinee April 27. The children's theater reports "Oklahoma!" business with "Jack and the Beanstalk" and has extended the run until the end of the season, May 27, postponing the "Cinderella" ballet until fall. "Jack and the Beanstalk" plays Saturdays at 2:30 with a Sunday matinée April 30 and a Saturday morning performance May 6. Meanwhile, there will be a special performance of "Mr. Pim Passes By" tomorrow evening at 8:30, to benefit the Austin Women's club.

Maeve MacMurrough, Irish actress once a member of the Abbey Players, will appear in a program of original character portraits this afternoon at 3:30, at Mercy auditorium, 8100 Indiana av. She once studied with Sara Allgood, redhaired Juno of "Juno and the Paycock" fame, now in Hollywood.

• • •

"Tars and Spars," the coast guard's variety revue, will open a nationwide tour in Philadelphia Friday.

Northwestern's university theater announces the production of William Congreve's "The Way of the World," to be presented April 26 thru April 29, and followed by Lennox Robinson's "Is Life Worth Living?" from May 24 thru May 27. All performances are given in the speech school auditorium on the Evanston campus.

Life in Deep South Makes Vivid Story

"THE MOCKING BIRD IS SINGING," by E. Louise Mally. [Holt, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Kenneth Horan.

If you don't know about the ways of life in New Orleans and Texas before and during the Civil war, this book will inform you without stint. The details are so numerous, the local color is so thick, the people themselves are so interesting, that the whole course of events is almost too lively to be clear.

E. Louise Mally.

Defenders of orthodoxies and traditions, the Beaumarcs' home in New Orleans was maintained in a kind of regal splendor. The only daughter of the family, beautiful young Therese, in love with her cousin, none the less married a young Scotchman, who took her to Texas to live, and here she tried to adapt her sophistication to pioneer life.

It was almost impossible, and the dour ways of the handsome Scot, who disliked the free spending of his wife's family, infuriated her. At times the heat of passion did its inevitable work, and Therese was desperately unhappy. But sense, in the balance with sensibility, won out at last, and she put her imprint on the new country, and when her husband finally died, she left it an entirely different place.

This is the first novel, a fact which, because of its vivid writing, its brilliant scenes, and its hosts of characters, is difficult to believe. There is no sign of the novice in the skilful way in which the intricate story is told, the semi-villain, a dashing fellow with vague and scattered principles, the dour Scot with his good looks and bank account and the lovely whining Therese, miserable as can be in a land of practically no juleps.

"The Mocking Bird Is Singing" is history thru personality and exceedingly well done. The people make the events, and I've no doubt could have finished the Civil war in a sentence, if given the chance. Those years offer more to the historian than any other time in our country's progress, except possibly the present, and this story does full justice to its connotations, for its author knows drama and its relation to the novel.

There is a great mass of printed material about the frontier and the pioneer, but none is more brilliantly comprehensive than this story of Therese Beaumarc and how she failed to find happiness in a land that all her people knew as the country of heart's desire.

Soviet Russia's Foreign Policy Well Analyzed

"RUSSIA AND POST-WAR EUROPE," by David J. Dallin. [Yale University Press, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Dr. Melchior Palyi.

This little book contains a most powerful intellectual attempt to understand soviet Russia's foreign policy. Free of prejudices, it analyzes the basic forces entering into that policy, the political interests as well as the ideological motivations and the background of experience and personalities, which add up to a nation's changing attitudes in a changing world situation.

This is one of the few must books of the war period which everybody ought to read who wants to get away from international phraseology and commonplaces, and wants to understand the power that is soviet Russia, what it aims at, and what its methods are.

AMONG THE AUTHORS

By Frederic Babcock.

A COMELY young housewife with a midwest and near-south background has just been awarded $10,000 for a first novel. . . . She is Dorothea Cornwell, and she is the winner of the Dodd, Mead-Redbook fiction prize. . . . Last year Martin Flavin, at the age of 60, won the Harper $10,000 novel competition. . . . This time success has come to a 25 year old.

The author is the wife of Donovan Cornwell, stationary engineer for the du Pont company at Charlestown, Ind. . . . She and her husband live in Louisville, Ky. . . . She was born in Pittsburgh, and has lived in Youngstown and Painesville, O., and has done book reviews for newspapers there and in Louisville. . . . Her novel, tentatively entitled, "They Dare Not Go a-Hunting," was chosen from more than 700 others.

Dorothea Cornwell. [AP Wirephoto.]

Where did she get that title? . . . It came from a line of poetry, "They dare not go a-hunting for fear of little men," quoted to her by her husband. . . . "My book has to do with a neurotic mother and a neurotic daughter," Mrs. Cornwell says. "The daughter revolts and marries, but she grows possessive, and 'the other woman' enters the plot. The other woman is a New York newspaper woman who just about steals the story."

John Drury, Chicago newspaper man, is one of 12 writers to win awards in the second series of regional writing fellowships granted by the University of Minnesota. . . . This was announced yesterday by Helen Clapesattle, secretary of the university committee administering the program. . . . The fellowships are intended to encourage writing in and about the central northwest, including Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, and the Dakotas. . . . Mr. Drury is the author of several books about the city he works in. . . . His "Old Chicago Houses" was published in 1941 by the University of Chicago Press. . . . For his fellowship project he will assemble the stories and pictures of a hundred historic midwest houses.

Other winners were Skulda V. Baner of Milwaukee, whose first book, "Latchstring Out," was issued this spring, and Herbert Krause of Sioux Falls, S. D., whose "Wind Without Rain" won the 1939 award of the Friends of American Writers as the best novel of the year regarding the midwest. . . . Both Miss Baner and Mr. Krause are planning novels with northwest themes.

Still another prize: The Anisfield award of $1,500 for the best book dealing with racial relationships has been given to Maurice Samuel for his "The World of Sholom Aleichem," published last year by Knopf. . . . Raymond Knotts has a mystery story coming out April 27 under the Farrar & Rinehart imprint. . . . It's called "And the Deep Blue Sea." . . . Mr. Knotts, a native of Chatham, Ill., has done newspaper work in Springfield, Ill.; St. Louis, and Chicago. . . . One of the leading characters in his new novel is—as you might expect—a Chicago newspaper man.

Lt. Lloyd Wendt, TRIBUNE writer now in the navy, and author of "Gunners Get Glory" and co-author of "Lords of the Levee," will address the Friends of Literature at a dinner at the Chicago Bar association headquarters Thursday evening. . . . Other guests are to be Dr. Preston Bradley; Dorothy Sparks, whose first novel, "Nothing as Before," will be issued this week by Harper, and Jane Mayer and Clara Spiegel, co-authors [under the name of Clare Jaynes] of "These Are the Times," to be printed this week by Random House. . . . On Saturday, May 6, a score or more of Chicago authors, critics, and commentators are to speak at the annual jamboree of the Friends of the Chicago Public Library. . . . This year's luncheon will be held in the grand ballroom of the Hotel Sherman.

New President.

James S. Thompson, former executive vice president of the McGraw-Hill Book company, has been elected president of the company, succeeding Martin M. Foss.

Family in War Time.

"Last Lovers," a novel about the life of an American family in war time," is Helen Topping Miller's latest book, soon to be published by Appleton-Century.

Do you wonder what to write . . .

To a young man in the armed forces?
To the folks back home?
When you have received a gift?
When somebody has had a baby?
When a friend or relative is ill?
When friends get married?
When someone has died?
When you want a better job?

TO give up city life and move to the country is a perfectly attainable dream. You don't have to be rich . . . you no longer have to be a farmer . . . If farming is all that has stopped you from having the country home you have always wanted, here is a book to make your dreams come true.

Good-bye worry, nervous exhaustion, inflation, depression

The author of this book is one of the thousands who have already deserted the cities for a richer, happier, more healthful and satisfying life in a productive home in the country. Beginning with the selection and purchase of such a home, he shows how it is possible, with moderate outlay, to achieve independence, freedom, and self-sufficiency on your own property, without the back-breaking, risky farming that ruins so many ventures. He gives you the detailed, practical picture of country property you have been waiting for—how to locate it and buy it; how to repair or make improvements; how to finance and insure; how to get along with your neighbors, your hired help, your livestock . . . and a thousand other things you want to know.

270 ways to make money

There are many ways in the country by which city people can earn money to balance the budget or add to the bank account. Mr. Wend lists them all and tells you specifically how to get started. Don't miss this book. It might change your whole life; it may bring you the independence and security you are striving so hard to obtain.

These Tales Have Merit of Richness

"A HAUNTED HOUSE," by Virginia Woolf. [Harcourt, Brace, $2.]

Reviewed by John Frederick Nims.

About three years ago critics and common readers alike were shocked by the death of Virginia Woolf. She had been strolling in the region of the River Ouse; her walking stick was found on the bank. The reason for her death was not, as the press hinted, horror at the war, tho German bombers were thick and somber in the skies about her home. For it was in the mind that she lived, and in the mind that she feared disaster. She who had always loved the play of sensation and the intricate shuttle of thought felt the return of a breakdown she had conquered before but could not conquer now.

Critics have called Virginia Woolf the greatest woman novelist of her time—one who, as E. M. Forster said in a lecture at Cambridge two months after her death, had pushed the light of the English language a little further against darkness. Consequently the publication of a new volume of her work, tho tentative and early, is an event of great literary importance.

"A Haunted House" is the first volume of her "short stories" to appear since 1921. Few of the pieces are new: Six are reprinted from the earlier volume; seven have appeared in magazines since that time; only five have not previously been published. In a sense, these are not short stories at all, but they are something at least as good. The two page reverie called "A Haunted House," tho without plot and without named characters, is lovely, strange, and passionate expression.

The work of Virginia Woolf does not consist of a slick maneuvering of the larger units of reality: adventure, love, suspense, and the other ingredients dear to the writer fresh from correspondence school. Her work is exciting, but with the excitement of brain and neuron sifting the qualities they cherish. In "Kew Gardens," for example, she is less interested in the people who saunter thru then in a single inch of earth stained with the colored shadows of the flowers. "The Mark on the Wall" is about just that and the thoughts is rouses: there is a rich and living passage about trees that might well be compared with the weaker imagery of a famous poem.

"A Haunted House" is not equal to the great novels of Woolf. It contains only the prelude and overtones of more important work, but it is rich and exquisite writing. As in her better work, it is true that nothing happens—nothing except that the eye sees and the heart is throbbing, and, somewhere in its lonely chamber, the soul is rapt and tortured.

Different Views of Southern Life

elist who smells out the secret, etc.

The trouble is not that the author is bold enough to use strong situations; it is that she does not use them strongly. In general, she seems to have impartially taken for her models the more eminent fiction writers of the Ladies' Home Journal and the Cosmopolitan.

What is distressing about this circumstance is not that "Colcorton" is a bad book, but that it is written by an author who seems to have real talent. The first half contains long sections of excellent straight writing, there is thruout a good sense of narrative pace, and the character of the heroine, which comes alive in the first half of the book, almost survives the preposterous shenanigans of the second half.

THE LITERARY SPOTLIGHT

by Fanny Butcher

THE series of lectures which were designed to plate the coffers of Poetry magazine with the necessary alloy of gold, silver, and copper to keep that distinguished little magazine alive [so that, for one thing, men and women in service who are inspired to poetry may have some place to get into print which is worthy of their devotion both to the art of poetry and to their country] ended with as delightful a morning as this ageing and lecture scarred spotlight manipulator has ever spent. . . . It ended with James Thurber, America's most amusing bi-dextrous artist. [He writes or he draws pictures, and his devotees are equally lyric.]

Every one present at the Arts club last Saturday agreed that James Thurber, human being, is like James Thurber, humorist, and James Thurber, artist, as refreshing to come upon as a crocus in the spring. . . . He was introduced by Peter DeVries, associate editor of Poetry and himself a wit of parts, now back in mufti after his service in khaki. . . . Mr. DeVries quipped, "He hits the male on the head," about the timorous males which Mr. Thurber has made an integral part of the native American humorous scene, and which gave extra special chuckles to the play, "The Male Animal," which he wrote with Elliott Nugent, with whom he went to school.

A Budding Career.

It was the first time in years that Mr. Thurber had lectured, and he was convinced, he said, that he would never lecture again, but the audience was so gleeful and so exuberant over him that he now may have a new career a-budding. Mr. DeVries called him the creator of "This man who says to the woman in the hotel lobby, 'You wait here and I'll bring the etchings down.'" Mr. DeVries' introductory remarks were so funny that a good half of the audience thought he was Mr. Thurber.

They aren't unlike in both being very tall, with hair that looks engagingly like a thatched roof on a skyscraper—a wonderful asset in a humorist to give a first impression that one never forgets.

Mr. Thurber is as subtly wise as he chooses to appear casual. . . . His speech has a literary ping like the imperceptible garlic which gives savor to a perfect green salad. . . . But his salad days, when he [like Cleopatra in her youth] was green in judgment, are past if not forgotten.

40 Words to a Page.

As he stood on the platform he reminded us oddly of James Joyce, whose eyes also failed him. . . . They look more than a little alike. . . . Mr. Thurber wears thick glasses, sees so badly that when he writes he uses a big, soft pencil and gets only 40 words on a sheet. . . . For four years he hasn't been able to see to type. . . . He doesn't see well enough to read, and when he draws things they don't always come out the way he started them to be. . . . He said all this, but with the most jaunty amusement. . . . He told tall tales about how "accidental" some of his funniest cartoons had been—like the famous one of the woman sitting on top of the bookcase, with two men and a woman looking at her, and with the hilarious caption, "That's my first wife up there and this is the present Mrs. Harris." . . . "I had a sane enough idea in mind," he said. "I drew a woman at the top of some stairs. . . . When the stairs were finished they looked like a bookcase; so I made it a bookcase. . . . When I sent it to the New Yorker, Harold Ross sent it back with the question, 'Is the woman alive, or dead, or stuffed?' . . . I decided that she was stuffed. . . . "O, I spend the longest time working these things out," he laughed.

He began to draw in 1917 when he was editor of The Sundial. "All the authors had gone to war, so I had to fill up space," he said. The first of his famous dogs he drew during the real estate boom days and a friend of his, who fancied himself as a big operator, had five telephones on his desk and five pads of paper beside them. . . . One day while Mr. T. was waiting for the tycoon he drew, as fast as he could, a dog on every one of the sheets of the pads—600 ancestors of the thousands of mournful but very wise hounds which he has drawn since then.

He Worked Too Hard.

"I never draw without frowning, never write without whistling," he said. . . . His first and now famous drawing, of a seal sitting on a rock eyeing two dots on the horizon, with the caption, "Hmm, explorers," was refused promptly. . . . His first pieces were all whooshed back quicker than he wrote them, altho he worked at them very carefully, he said. . . . Then his wife [she's charming, and obviously as appreciative of the humor of life as he is] said maybe he was working too hard over them; so he bought an alarm clock, set it to ring in a half hour, put a period on what he was writing when it rang, and sold the piece immediately. . . . That was in 1926. . . . In 1925 he was working on the Paris edition of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE. . . . Working on one side of him was Elliot Paul [whose "The Last Time I Saw Paris" was a smash hit of 1942]. . . . Mr. Paul was literary editor of that famous little paper then. . . . And on the other side was William L. Shirer [whose "Berlin Diary" highlighted 1941]. . . . Mr. Thurber quoted one honest cynic of the so-called lost generation thus: "Sure, the lost generation was unhappy, but they were unhappy in Paris, weren't they?"

What Is Humor?

James Thurber's blobby women answered the question in the title of the first book he illustrated, "Is Sex Necessary?" [which proved to be a runaway best seller]. . . . He quotes his editor as complaining, "Those women don't have any sex appeal," to which, according to Mr. Thurber, Marc Connelly replied, "They do for Thurber's men!"

When, in the question period which followed the talk, he was asked his definition of humor or laughter, he repeated a definition he had written for Max Eastman's "The Enjoyment of Laughter." . . . It's as good a one as you'll find: "Humor is chaos written about calmly in retrospect."

Career of Surgeon Is Inspiring Story

"ARMY SURGEON," by Genevieve Fox. [Little, Brown, $2.]

Take an adventurous Connecticut lad of 1808 setting off in a red sleigh to seek his future, add perseverance, romance, frontier army posts, and a man with a lid on his stomach, and the result is an exciting biography for boys and girls. How Army Surgeon William Beaumont, with a few test tubes, a sand bath, a thermometer, and an elusive patient named Alexis St. Martin made medical history and started the science of dietetics is told here with excellent characterization, humor, suspense, and inspiration.

Cavallaro Proving Big Attraction in Empire Room

Larry Adler's Also Winning New Plaudits

By Will Davidson.

He's the best dam' Cavallaro in all Chicago, to misquote Holbrook Blynn. He's a poet, a virtuoso, a charming, modest gentleman. He's Carmen Cavallaro, who is destined to become one of the greatest attractions the Palmer House ever has brought into its Empire room.

Seldom has a new performer received the ovation Carmen was accorded when he had finished the first number in his "Little Show"—Richard Addinsell's intensely beautiful Warsaw concerto. His touch is gentle, fluid, impeccable. He is a master pianist with a range of repertoire that encompasses the Latin lilt of the rhumba "Enlloro," the nostalgic appeal of "Body and Soul," and an eight to the bar technique that stopped the show when he accompanied Larry Adler in the latter's "Hand to Mouth Boogie."

Larry Adler.

Cavallaro's brilliance and personal charm warms the entire new Springtime revue, providing a perfect background for the sharp, impish appeal of Adler's unique harmonica talent. Larry has no qualms about trying any type of number. He makes a beautiful thing of his adaptation of "Holiday for Strings"; he finds unusual tonal beauty in Bach, Beethoven, Liszt. His "Besame Mucho" is brilliant; his "Blues in the Night" low down and hot. Like a bright-eyed Pan, Harry blends humor with musical technique that is unsurpassed in his field. And he does one brief satire on Hildegrade that is priceless. It seems to me that Adler today is a more finished, assured artist than ever before.

Merriel Abbott did a comeback in one of the two numbers her dancing girls perform. It is a skating routine, and it's a dandy. They open with a competent dance involving little lambs that never get around to eating ivy.

It is a real satisfaction to see Camilla Lane prove that the critics were right when they hailed her as a discovery during the Hildegarde show. Miss Lane was Ran Wilde's pianist and soloist, and scored a smashing hit in the Little Show. Now she has another excellent spot in that interim revue, and in addition plays a superb accompaniment for Larry Adler and takes over the piano from Cavallaro for the show.

I confess to a sense of disappointment in the dancing of Mario and Floria, a team billed as the successors to Veloz and Yolanda. Floria is a superb dancer, beautiful to watch, hard working, graceful, charming. She gives the act its chief appeal. Mario's work baffles me. I have no doubt that he is an expert dancer, but his movements have a puppet-like quality that destroys much of the illusion. Perhaps a second viewing will bring added appreciation of his work.

The town is bursting with talent, and peer of them all is Paul Draper. Paul has tightened his dance routines to fit the Mayfair room floor in the Blackstone hotel, and his performance, despite the restrictions, is superb. With Neil Bonshu's splendid music, with just the excellent piano accompaniment of Arthur Ferranti, or with no music at all, Paul interprets classics or jazz, folk songs or fiery Spanish masterpieces. He interprets them in movements that are compact, yet free; almost ascetically lean and reserved, yet filled with warmth and humor and a devout understanding of meanings. The pictures he creates are like superb pastels, masterfully blended, strong in design.

PAUL DRAPER

The estimable Mr. Draper is a man of culture and intelligence, and his approach to his art is respectful but not slavish. He has a delightful sense of humor. I recommend him highly.

Joe Jacobson and Mike Fritzel are working on a patchwork quilt which they hope will protect them from the cold winds of the Easter lull and the 30 per cent thud. So far the quilt has too many holes in it to be very effective.

Last week their Chez Paree show had Jackie Miles as the holdover star, with Cross and Dunn as sure fire entertainers; Bill Gary, a capable young dancer, and Bernice Parks, the singing dress designer. Now, if scheduled plans went thru, Mary Rae and Naldi are dancing in the show, with Miles gone—presumably on the theory that a man and a miss are as good as a Miles. Then in a few weeks there'll be another show starring Sophie Tucker.

The Edgewater Beach is in the full bloom of its annual blossom festival, and the show that Dorothy Dorben has manufactured out of not entirely standard material is worthy of the flowery setting. Using David Rose's "Our Waltz," Miss Dorben presents a glowing, quiet dance number, and then contrasts it with a lively, blazing exercise to a medley from "Porgy and Bess."

Gillette and Richards, having found some comic possibilities in the young woman's high kicking ability, overload what might well be a very funny satire on ballroom teams. But they are crowd pleasers, as is Francisco, young juggler. Charlotte Moon, a Dorben dancer, makes her debut as a singer in one number, and does it creditably.

Eddie Oliver now is a marine, but his band carries on well, with John Shanahan leading.

Boswelling the Bistros:

Thursday is the day for jive fans to watch, for then Louis Armstrong brings his band into the Sherman's College Inn. Louis will be there only eight days, so hurry. . . . I hope that the powers that be have taken up the option on the Rossi Sisters who are doing their excellent acrobatic dancing now in the New Walnut room of the Bismarck. Advancing age and the deteriorating effects of staying out late evidently made me forget to mention them last Sunday. And I had enjoyed them so much! They are pretty, they have fun, and they entertain.

Diane Davis, singer at the Drake, has had a lot of experience during her 21 years. Stage, concert, night clubs have seen her petite beauty. . . . The La Salle has reopened its Pan American cafe. . . . One of the best comedians in show business died recently. I'm referring to Red Dust, the languorous dog starred with Bob Williams. . . . The acrobatic Novellos are now in the Blackhawk show, with Maurice and Maryea, dance team, joining them Wednesday.

Heard the flower song? "Hydrangea Cried Last Night."

Woollcott's Generosity Is Plum for Seamen's Service

By Harry Hansen.

New York.

WHEN Alexander Woollcott was preparing that anthology of poems and stories that he called "As You Were" he told me that he wanted especially to make it useful to the men of the merchant marine. He worked quite unselfishly for causes that he approved, such as that of the Seeing Eye dogs, and his help was not merely vocal. I don't know how he became interested in the seamen, but he thought they needed help. He designated the United Seamen's Service, which operates clubs and recreation centers for merchant seamen, to receive the royalties on the book. The Service announces that it has just received a check for $31,410 from the Viking Press, which represents not only Woollcott's earnings but the profits of Viking Press, which it agreed to add to the fund. Just to prove that miracles come true the Service has sent a photograph of the check.

The 100th anniversary of the birth of Anatole France will be observed in New York Thursday, April 20, at a dinner at the Plaza hotel given by the French Institute in the United States. John Erskine will deliver the address. It will take several decades before France is appreciated to the extent he was in his lifetime; perhaps he will be known only for a few rare writings. Interest in him collapsed with his death, but that was not the reason; ironic subtleties were submerged by World War I. and its serious aftermath, which profoundly affected writing. Perhaps France polished off a period of skepticism that began with the serious scholar Renan. New York also commemorates Honore de Balzac. The Balzac anniversary dinner, given by the Balzac Society of America, was held here last evening.

Boston's Book Censorship.

Rackham Holt, author of "George Washington Carver," made several talks in Boston during the week that "Strange Fruit" was banned by the bookstores. She says this action was the chief topic of conversation in literary circles, which were indignant at this under-the-counter type of censorship. Booksellers withdraw a book in Boston at the suggestion of the police because they can be haled into court and fined if they sell it. But this time Boston will have to come out into the open, for Bernard De Voto, who reached the Boston area by way of Utah and Evanston, is making a test case of it, with the help of the Harvard bookstore. The excuse given for the withdrawal is that the book contains an obscene word; actually, however, it is believed that the description of the association of a white southerner and an educated Negro girl gave offense because the relationship is not condemned.

It was easier for puritanical Boston—which, by the way, owes little to the Puritans—to charge obscene language rather than tangle with the race problem. In the story the word is used by the sort of character who would use it and profoundly shocks the Negro girl. Thus, possibly, it has point, tho the whole level of the writing is higher. I think the use of offensive words can be avoided, and I don't like books that use them, but I am not the author, and if the author wishes to use them he has a perfect right to do so. You and I can register disapproval by refusing to read literature that offends us, but we have no right to demand that it should not be printed.

Poor Writing Crowded Out.

A paradoxical situation has developed in the making of books. The intensified buying in the bookstores has curtailed the risks of publication to a minimum; as one publisher expressed it, everything sells nowadays, no matter how badly written. But the publisher is short of paper so he must cut his lists. Therefore he tries to concentrate on the best manuscripts. He can afford to choose carefully among the manuscripts submitted. This should mean fewer and better novels.

Editors are not going to waste time on poor writing, no matter how eager they are to discover genius in a haystack. William Poole, editor for Whittlesey House, goes to Boston, looks over the field, and sends word to interested authors. Mr. Poole, it reads, "will be available for brief conference with authors of popular nonfiction and exceptional fiction at the Copley Plaza hotel from 3 to 5." Boston authors, if they have anything to offer, should make it snappy.

Editors and Authors.

A few weeks ago I mentioned Maxwell Perkins, editor for the house of Scribner, as the most astute and most highly respected of book editors. He has just been the subject of two articles in the New Yorker, written by Malcolm Cowley. In it several famous publishing incidents are fully cleared up. The first deals with the publication of F. Scott Fitzgerald's "This Side of Paradise," which marked a turn to modern youth on the part of Scribner's and had great influence on its generation. It has been believed that Fitzgerald took his manuscript to Scribner's because of the association of many of its men with Princeton university, which Fitzgerald attended. But Mr. Cowley reports that Shane Leslie, the Irish writer, who taught in Newman school, Lakewood, N. J., and who had Fitzgerald as a pupil at one time, brought the famous manuscript to Scribner's as early as 1917 because he felt indebted to Scribner's for getting him out of a threatened libel suit. From that point on Mr. Perkins entered the scene and influenced Fitzgerald to make important revisions. It was published in 1920.

The other news has to do with the oft debated subject of the fall-out between Thomas Wolfe and Mr. Perkins, which resulted in Wolfe's taking his bulky manuscripts to Harper's. This was an attempt of Wolfe to get away from the implication that he owed too much to his editor. Wolfe chose Harper "after he found that Edward C. Aswell, Harper's editor, had been born in the same week of the same month of the same year as himself." Such matters guide the fortunes of authors and publishers!

The Naming of Joliet.

Some time ago we had a debate in this column on how Joliet had to change its name from Juliet, and why Juliet was thus named. One theory was that the real estate speculator who surveyed the town lots named the site after his daughter, Juliet. But Mount Juliet, the hill that Joliet incautiously removed because it was made of good gravel, was mentioned by the earlier voyagers. The latest proof that Mount Juliet was so-called long before the real estate man ever saw the place is in Lt. John Armstrong's map of the Illinois river and accompanying description, dated 1790, which mentioned the Chicago portage and described Mount Juliet. You will find this discussed in Paul M. Angle's Journal of the Illinois State Historical Society for March.

Novel Shows Doctors Are Great Pals

"GIRL INTERN," by Elizabeth Seifert. [Dodd, Mead, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Maureen Daly.

"Girl Intern," like most of Elizabeth Seifert's novels, has a medical background, and this time it is lovely Doctor Chris Metcalf and handsome Doctor Key Edmons who work out their love problems together in a hospital atmosphere typically sterile and etherized. Chris' affections are sidetracked by two nonprofessional heart interests and Key clings to a prejudice against women doctors but mutual interest in their work overcomes these barriers and love moves in.

Elizabeth Seifert.

An exciting subplot of sabotage in the local defense plant is sandwiched betwen hospital feuds, major operations and amorous by-play to create more general and timely interest. The chief theme of the story seems to be the credo that women can be good doctors and doctors can be good men, in the romantic sense, after hours. And in that sense, at least, Dr. Edmons proves himself a superbly fine man.

There is one brief but very questionable chapter in the book which deals, thru the characters, with the subject of how a doctor can decide when an abortion is justifiable, aside from those reasons presumably given him in medical school.

Key Edmons, with disarming loyalty but addled reasoning, asserts that if a man asked him to perform such an operation on his daughter and "if he were surely my friend. I mean, if I knew he'd strip himself naked for me. Yes, I suppose I'd do as big a thing for him. But I'd have to know he was my friend. . . ." That curious criterion of ethics, nobly worded, slips the reader the impression that Dr. Key Edmons is a very fine fellow, a good old pal, just the friend to look up in a pinch!

22 Biographies of Newspaper Men

"POST BIOGRAPHIES OF FAMOUS JOURNALISTS," edited by John E. Drewry. [Random House, $3.]

This is a compilation of 22 sketches that appeared originally in the Saturday Evening Post, were reprinted by the University of Georgia Press two years ago, and are now being distributed by Random House.

They provide fascinating reading for any one interested in finding out about men and women who publish, edit, or write for America's newspapers and magazines.

Not all of them are sympathetic, and some are dipped in vitriol. But most of them are highly revealing.

Among the contributors are Jack Alexander, Alva Johnston, Forrest Davis, Stanley Walker, and J. P. McEvoy—all outstanding writers.

If you haven't already read these brief biographies, you'll probably wish to. If you have, you're likely to find them worth rereading.

Dream Trial of Hitler Is Unreal Tale

"THE TRIAL OF ADOLF HITLER," by Michael Young. [Dutton, $2.50.]

Reviewed by Paul Engle.

This book is a tour de force which lacks real force. It attempts to dramatize the trial of Hitler by building up a background of persecuted lives for half the book and then for the other half showing the actual trial itself.

Michael Young.

The result is a hurried story of the flight of a Jewish family from Vienna to Paris, the continuation of that escape later on by means of an American journalist, a residence in Washington with ready jobs, and finally a reported accident involving an old man's son which gives the old man so profound a shock that he loses consciousness and has a vision. The latter half of the book is a description of the arrest and trial of Hitler as seen by the old man in this vision and as put down by him on paper.

The account of the Jewish family is agreeable and of a certain interest, altho the characters are thinly characterized and the breaks of a fine job in America for the son and a good job for the old man are a little too happy to tolerate. The love of a girl and the son in Washington is surprisingly restrained and believable.

It is the trial itself which will give the book notoriety, if anything will, and it is the trial which is the weakest section. Churchill and Stalin make speeches attacking the condemned man [?] while Mme. Chiang Kai-shek acts as judge. President Roosevelt is also in the court, but, if you can believe it, says nothing thruout the whole procedure. This may in itself indicate the unreality of the affair. Witnesses are examined and a mass of material, familiar to every one, is presented.

Finally the voice of a dead woman accuses Hitler; he sees her cracked skull, collapses, and the trial ends abruptly and unconvincingly. The book ends with the girl and the son repledged in love. Exit probability.

BOOKS ALIVE

by Vincent Starrett

EMILY usually "elfed it" when visitors came to the big house in Amherst. She was always in the act of disappearing. Her oldest friends seldom saw her. Sometimes of an evening she flitted eerily across the garden, under the trees, but she never left the premises, and just to have caught a glimpse of her was something to boast about. Nursemaids of the neighborhood said she was a witch and frightened their charges by saying darkly, "Emily Dickinson!"

When friends came to see her, she spoke to them from the shadows of the hall, as they sat in the "parlor," or called her greetings down the stairs. She sent them little notes, however, in envelopes that were sometimes addressed by her sister Lavinia and sometimes by the unusual expedient of pasting up printed characters cut from the newspapers. Those notes would be worth a pretty penny today! They were not long, usually only a line or two—"Do you look well tonight?" for example, or, "Tonight the crimson children are playing in the West," or, "The moon rides like a girl thru a topaz town." Or perhaps, "The lawn is full of south and the odors tangle, and I hear today for the first time the river in the tree."

Emily's Strange Utterances.

One of her more arresting notes asserted: "Not what the stars have done, but what they are to do, is what detains the sky." If that line turned up in the mails today the intelligence department probably would spend a week trying to decipher it. Often her messages contained no words at all, they were just baskets of "goodies" lowered from her window to children waiting on the lawn.

Sometimes instead of a letter she sent a poem, a curious fragment three or four lines in length, and with it a box of caramels or cookies tricked out with spring flowers or sprigs of pine. Her poems like her extraordinary communiqués were rhythmical and congested with images, and often they were unrhymed. In the words of Van Wyck Brooks, they "suggested nursery rhymes or Dr. Watts' hymns, broken up and filled with a strange new content." Unsympathetic persons might have thought them a sort of "transcendental baby-talk," the language of one who had lost the art of ordinary communication. They were, in fact, the inspired utterance of one of the foremost geniuses of poetry.

Case Not Yet Diagnosed.

The occasion for Emily's odd neurosis has been frequently discussed. According to family legend she fell in love with a married man and, as no solution was possible, retired into herself to meditate on more eternal matters. Whatever may be the truth—and the Freudians, as you may suppose, are at work on her case—her frustration gave the world some of its loveliest poetry, and her story is one of the most interesting in our literary chronicle. Few of her poems were published in her lifetime and she had no volume until four years after her death.

I have drawn my own paragraphs about her largely from Van Wyck Brooks' "Literature in New England," Garden City's valuable reprint of two famous books, "The Flowering of New England" and "New England: Indian Summer." This is a work which should be in the library of every bookman, in one form or another, and the new two-in-one edition is probably the most convenient way to acquire it. It is beyond question one of the best literary histories ever written. Incidentally, a third volume in Mr. Brooks' continuing chronicle has just been announced by E. P. Dutton & Co. It is to be called "The World of Washington Irving," and chronologically it will precede the two earlier books. The new book will not be published until fall, when it will be a Book of the Month club selection.

When Is a Book Rereadable?

Another current reprint of more than passing interest is the Halcyon House edition of "Vogue's First Reader," an entertaining miscellany in which nearly everybody of importance appears to be represented. Here, among many other pleasant matters, is Clifton Fadiman's "My Life Is an Open Book"—his answer to the old question, "What makes a book rereadable?"

It depends, he asserts, as much on the reader as on the book. To Mortimer Adler, for example, a rereadable book is an "original communication," one marking a milestone in the history of western thought. "To the sentimentalist, it may be a book read in childhood; he rereads [and reloves] not the book, but himself as a child. To another, a book may be rereadable if it echoes his own unalterable prejudices. It is a gauge by which he may complacently measure his lack of mental progress."

It is the "magical" quality of a book which makes it rereadable for himself, says Mr. Fadiman, and adds that this quality is not dependent on the book's importance, its intellectual weight. . . . "Serious students of literature would doubtless rank 'Madame Bovary' as a more significant work of fiction than 'Great Expectations.' Probably it is. There is no question but that it has influenced the course of literature, whereas 'Great Expectations' is merely a Dickens novel that millions of plain readers have enjoyed. But for me 'Madame Bovary' has no virtues except those of perfection. It is without magic, without personality, it is not rereadable. 'Great Expectations,' on the other hand, is magical and its magic works every time."

Nor is magic confined only to "imaginative" literature, Mr. Fadiman remarks. For him there is magic in Gibbon's explanation of how he came to write his masterpiece, in the scientific popularizations of Sir Arthur Eddington, in Descartes' system of analytical geometry. "These works," he says, "set a bell ringing in the brain."

He tells a good story about a bright young thing who once inquired of Prof. Raymond Weaver of Columbia whether he had read a certain book, a best seller of the moment, and when he had confessed he had not, cried reproachfully: "O, you'd better hurry up—it's been out over three months!"

"My dear young lady," said the professor, "have you read Dante's 'Divine Comedy'? . . . No? . . . Well, you'd better hurry up—it's been out over 600 years!"

Variety of New Shows Opens on Broadway

By John Chapman.

New York [Special].—Outsiders have been doing most of the work for Broadway lately. Two Hollywood scenarists have favored us with a patchwork comedy which is quite funny; another Hollywoodian, now a New York magazine editor, has taken a thoro beating for writing a perfectly dreadful comedy about screen stars, and a night club operator has invested a tithe of his saloon profits in a big, glittering musical comedy which is okay except for needing a plot and a couple of pieces of music.

"Chicken Every Sunday" is a deliberately goofy cavalcade of crazy characters which becomes amusing out of sheer persistence. Rosemary Taylor wrote a book of that title and Julius J. and Philip G. Epstein, two busy and wealthy employes of the Warner Brothers, have turned it into a stage scenario. It could be a mixture of "You Can't Take It with You" and "Life with Mother," and it is held together by the affectionate and able performances of Mary Philips and Rhys Williams.

The time is 1916, the place is Tucson, Ariz., and the scene is the most godawful looking boarding house ever built. The setting, by Howard Bay, is funnier than any single joke in the play. Miss Philips runs the boarding house because she doesn't rely upon her husband, Mr. Williams, as a bread winner. Williams may own the town laundry and the traction system [one horse car], and he may be vice president of a bank, but he is just a penniless dreamer at home.

There is a touch of plot to "Chicken Every Sunday," but it is unimportant. The main attraction is the flock of characters who find shelter within the bulging walls of the boarding house. These include two widows. One widow, having been married to a wholesale grocer, is determined that her son shall be a poet. The numbstruck lad dutifully writes poetry, but confesses to his girl that he hates it—hates even good poetry. The other widow, more than slightly wilted, spends hours in the one bathroom trying to get beautiful with lotions and creams. When a crisis occurs in her life somebody observes that the lady hasn't a friend in the world. "Who would you meet in a bathroom?" inquires Mr. Williams.

Also in "Chicken Every Sunday" are a desert rat, stock type, a gentleman boarder, and a lady boarder whose affair is known to all because the floor creaks every time the gentleman sneaks up the outside back stairs, and a New York tomato who has been twice married to and twice divorced from a tycoon from Perth Amboy, N. J.

The tycoon has come to Tucson in a third pursuit of his ex-bride. It isn't so much that he wants her back, it's because every time there is a divorce her mother comes to live with him, and she is an old vaudevillian who drinks and yodels.

Lester Vail, the director, has managed to keep everybody moving rapidly in and out of the boarding house, and all of the character players are excellently chosen. "Chicken Every Sunday" won't win the critics' circle plaque, but you'd vote for it if you had to choose between it and "Public Relations."

"Public Relations" concerned Hollywood and was written by Dale Eunson, who should know better considering the fact that he started in the movie business 20 years or so ago in the Sam Goldwyn press department. His comedy was about a king and queen of the silents, now divorced and married to new spouses, who find themselves together again in their old million dollar shack in Beverly Hills. Few plays have ever tried so footlessly to be funny, and everybody felt sorry for the principals—Ann Andrews, Philip Merivale, and the old screen siren, Betty Blythe.

The new musical comedy, "Follow the Girls," is an expensive but routine job in whose honor the Shuberts have rebuilt the old Jolson theater, hard by Central park. The Jolson, now called the New Century, is as gaudy as a war contract and just the ticket for a girl show. Dave Wolper, who runs a night club called The Hurricane, has provided the girls and the show. He has assembled the most beautiful chorus and the most stunning octette of skyscraper models that these tireless old eyes have ever seen.

No night club man has yet invaded the musical comedy theater with great artistic success, for these after midnight impresarios can't tell the difference between a floor show and a real show. In a saloon any song will go, because nobody pays any attention, anyway; in a theater only good songs are hits. In a saloon, the dirtier the comedy the better; on a stage only a witty dirt wins plaudits.

Top biller star is Gertrude Niesen, a veteran of the night spots, who sings smokehouse songs smokily. In the laugh department, industry makes a fair substitute for comedy, and the head workmen are Jackie Gleason, Buster West, and Tim Herbert.

Oriental theater. "Gay Nighties," a new Harry Howard revue specializing in girls, humor, and color, holds the stage for a week. Chaz Chase is the comedian headliner with such routines as a strip tease, burlesque Russian dance, and a fan dance. Also listed are Leonard Gautier's "Bricklayers," a famous dog act; Larry Stuart, featured song star; Vic Hyde in a new version of a one-man swing band; Dave Barry, impressionist; Charles Kraft, ballet, soft shoe, and tap dancer, and in the line are Showgirls Billie Byrnes, Dana Steadley, Helen Howell, and Violet Martin.

Chicago theater. An "April Shower" revue appropriately holds the stage, with Maestro Lou Breese and his orchestra doing a new show featuring the band's newcomer, Balladeer George Carroll. In addition there are Joan Merrill, night club songstress; the Broadway satirist, Jack Marshall; the Berry brothers, colored dancing trio, and the acrobatic Juvelys. The ballet is seen in "Boogie Woogie," with Ellington music, and in "Rhythm Fantasy," a sequence tracing the development of stage dancing.

BOOKMAN'S HOLIDAY

By Charles Collins.

NEXT Sunday will be the feast day of the greatest figure in English or any other literature—William Shakespeare. Feast day is, we believe, an appropriate term for this 380th anniversary, for April 23 was certainly the date of his death and possibly the date of his birth. Observances, we assume, will be slight because there are more important matters on the Anglo-American agenda; but no doubt the pleasant custom of placing flowers on his statue in Lincoln park will not be forgotten. That custom, incidentally, was founded by the late James O'Donnell Bennett about 40 years ago when he was drama critic of the Chicago Record-Herald.

A few nights ago, at a club dinner table, the question of the Shakespeare "mystery" came up for casual discussion. To our surprise we found that four men in the group, each a certified intellectual, were willing to entertain doubts about the authorship of the plays. They did not pretend to be Shakespearean experts, but they had been influenced by the "mystery" cultists, who nominate a new candidate for Shakespeare's honors every few years. Their skepticism was mild and they had no favored candidate for the plumage of the Swan of Avon, but the ensuing argument failed to convert them into true believers.

Their doubts sprang from the ancient theory that a man with Shakespeare's obscure background, unblessed by a university, unknown among Elizabethan noble houses, unchampioned in his time, could not have written this rich catalog of plays. To which we answered that the appearance of literary genius out of such backgrounds is a frequent phenomenon, and that many lesser examples could be found in contemporary life. Shakespeare was no oafish peasant, incapable of swift self-education after his arrival in London. His transformation into a dramatist is no more to be wondered at than the literary success of plain Hoosier lads who have done chores for Chicago newspapers.

But what of the cipher messages and cryptograms alleged to have been found in the texts, the skeptics asked. Well, whenever we hear of such mystifications in literary scholarship, we immediately feel that there is a slightly cracked pot in the woodpile.

Germany's "unser Shakespeare"—a phrase which sprang from the frequency of German stage productions and the excellence of their translations—was often mentioned, with hostile sneers, in World War I. In the present war, however, everything has been quiet on the "Kultur" front. The first German translator of Shakespeare was Christopher Martin Wieland, eminent as a poet and man of letters. From 1762 to 1766 he published prose translations of 22 of the plays. A short street on Chicago's north side is named after Wieland.

For an early visual impression of Hitler, see "Der Fuehrer," Konrad Heiden's able history of the German dictator's rise to power [Houghton, Mifflin]. Max von Grueber, a professor of anthropology at the University of Munich, saw Hitler for the first time at close quarters in the beer hall "putsch," and testified at the subsequent trial:

"Face and head: bad race, mongrel. Low, receding forehead, ugly nose, broad cheekbones, small eyes, dark hair. Facial expression: not of a man commanding with full self-control, but betraying insane excitement. Finally, an expression of blissful egotism."

The president of the Boswell Club of Chicago, Dr. Don C. Rogers, is known within the circle as "Sir Joshua Reynolds," but in the future he may be called "Colonel." The honor of a Kentucky colonelcy, with all rights appertaining thereto, was conferred upon him last Monday. Gov. Willis of Kentucky sent Cleo Dawson of Lexington, Ky., authoress of "The Romance of the Rio Grande," to present the commission. The ceremony marked last Monday's meeting of the American Legion's Advertising Men's post.

In a letter written almost three years ago to George Ade, the late Irvin S. Cobb referred to the chronic illness which caused his death in this light manner:

"P. S.—Private. I wonder if you will applaud my choice. I have named my two stomach ulcers 'Franklin' and 'Eleanor.'"

THE MURDER CHART

By Drexel Drake.

ENTRY.	PERFORMANCE.	PAY-OFF.
"DOOM IN THE MIDNIGHT SUN," by Eunice Mays Boyd. [Farrar & Rinehart, $2.]	F. Millard Smyth, small town grocer and avid student of detective stories, has second venture clearing up eerie goings-on and murder in isolated Alaskan settlement.	This author depends upon fascinating settings and creepy complications to interest her readers, and she does it with considerable success. Diverting entertainment for the willingly gullible.
"THE PARCHMENT KEY," by Stanley Hopkins Jr. [Harcourt, Brace, $2.]	Mysterious death of a Great Dane and a fatal taxi crash usher Pvt. Peter Marrell and his wife Angie into the second of their exploits with Long Island mystery. Sinister politics and blackmail at work.	There are a lot of pieces to the puzzle, and there is a lot of expanded conversation in the course of putting them together. Story has merit, but interest wavers.
"JENNY KISSED ME," by Ruth Fenisong, [Doubleday, Doran, $2.]	Gwen Mattice, attractive divorcee, scattered her affections among a diverse assortment of males, but it was only the search for her murderer that bared vivid details of her career.	Author concocts a baffling puzzle, with surprise in its solution. Unfolding of plot gathers interest. Painstaking characterization, with scurrilous types in preponderance.
"MURDER ON THE PROGRAM," by M. M. Mannon. [Bobbs-Merrill, $2.]	When murder disrupts the spring meeting of the women's club board at Black Bart tavern, Sheriff White has both number and variety of women to deal with in unraveling snarls and pinning down the murderer.	Too many persons and a crisscross of relevant and irrelevant elements make this not too easy for a reader to follow, but the story offers excitement and a mild brand of fun. Competent puzzle.

MEN LIKE GODS WERE THESE BOSTONIANS

Biography of the Younger O. W. Holmes

"YANKEE FROM OLYMPUS," by Catherine Drinker Bowen. [Little, Brown, $3.]

Reviewed by Fanny Butcher.

"Justice Holmes and His Family" is the modest subtitle of the Jovian phrase which Catherine Drinker Bowen chose to describe the late Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes. Its five simple words compass the facts, the fancies, the charm, the character, the reality of one of the great New England families in a day when "the flowering" of New England gave intellectual fragrance to all of the states which were finally united forever by the bitter Civil war in which Justice Holmes nearly lost his life. [Mrs. Bowen remarks that when the crowds in Boston went crazy at the announcement of the war's end and many wept at the mention of the President of the United States, "It was not Lincoln they cheered. It was those two words—United States. 'Yes, sir!' the speaker had continued, 'thank God, President of the UNITED States!'"]

"It took three wars, two of them terrible wars before a man could say 'these United States,'" she says, and in this remarkable and fascinating record of the two Oliver Wendell Holmeses and the first one's father, Abiel, she tells not only their story but the story of that union which was so painfully cemented. Justice Oliver Wendell Holmes was born in 1841, and lived for 94 years, minus only two days. His father, the most popular literary wit of his day as author of "The Autocrat of the Breakfast Table," and even more popular as a topical contemporary—and often sentimental—poet, was born in 1809 and watched his world for 84 years. Abiel Holmes was born in 1763 and died at the youthful age of 74.

The Holmes men in those three generations watched our country's birth and its fierce adolescence, and saw it emerge the greatest young country on earth. The panorama of those three long generations forms a remarkable and vivid background for the lives of Mrs. Bowen's three main characters.

Altho this is primarily a biography of Justice Holmes, there will be few readers who will think that the picture which the author draws of his father is of less importance or less interest. She has done a delicious and understanding sketch of the man who couldn't let a good phrase go to waste, who turned every experience into words, who embarrassed his son time and again by using him as literary material, but who was also a hard working physician, determined, in advance of his time, to find out the scientific reason for so many deaths of women in childbirth, and the most popular lecturer on anatomy that the Harvard medical school ever had.

And Abiel Holmes, violent Calvinist, who refused to compromise with the liberal thought of his day and lost his pulpit, Abiel who won fame as the author of "American Annals, a Chronological History of America," is no less and no more of an individualist. And the spirit of both of these ancestors is mingled in the real hero of the book—for truly, as Mrs. Bowen says of Justice Holmes, "This was a man whose presence carried traditions."

There are so many things that one might say about this delightful and important book [and it is seldom that a book is coincidentally both], if space permitted, but which must be condensed into the mere unqualified statement that if you miss "Yankee from Olympus" you will miss one of the delights of the literary contemporary gods.

A sketch of the late Lt. Col. William E. Dyess, whose own story of escape from the Japs was edited by Charles Leavelle of The Tribune staff. The book has just been published by Putnam and is reviewed today by William Shinnick.

Two Views of Life in South with Vastly Different Aims

"WATERS OVER THE DAM," by Harry Harrison Kroll. [Bobbs-Merrill, $2.50.]
"COLCORTON," by Edith Pope. [Scribner's, $2.75.]

Reviewed by Robert Penn Warren.

"Waters Over the Dam" is the story, told by the hero himself, Mr. Danny, of the few years in a young farm hand's life when he first grew up and discovered love and ambition. The main action is simple enough: the contest for Mr. Danny between the teacher Parnell, a buxom, experienced woman, some years older than Danny, and Rennie, the daughter of Danny's employer, a little girl who to Danny is nothing but a child, but who has the weapons of devotion and cunning, as well as that of innocence.

The story moves somewhat casually, and never rises to any great pitch of intensity. But this is not adverse criticism of the book. The book is aiming at another kind of effect, the presentation of Mr. Danny's world as re-interpreted years later, as touched with the poetry of nostalgia and the indulgence of distance. But Mr. Kroll creates this atmosphere, and maintains the pervasive emotional tone, without making any sacrifice of humor or realism in the handling of the psychology of his characters or the details of the social and physical background.

In fact, on the side of realism, this is the best fictional record I have ever seen of the two-mule small-farm life of the middle south of about a generation ago, a life of some "money poverty" but no "food poverty," of hard work and full-blooded amusements, of piety and contentment, of confused ambition and gropings for education. At least, that is the picture given by Mr. Kroll

But he does much more than give us this sociological and historical document. He has an excellent ear for the colorful or humorous or moving phrase in the language of his North Alabama back country. And his three main characters are thoroly substantial creations, capable of engaging our interest and sympathy, and, I think, of staying in our minds.

All in all, "Waters Over the Dam" is a very considerable achievement within the limit it sets itself. It is not an ambitious book, but it does quite happily what it sets out to do. It is sensible, sensitive, veracious, and moving, and it is unfortunate that these attributes do not give the promotion experts very much to work with.

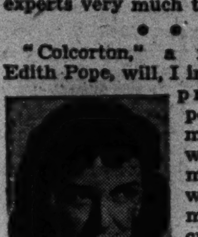
"Colcorton," a first novel by Edith Pope, will, I imagine, give the promotion experts a little more to work with. It is a melodrama done with a peculiar mixture of crudity and slickness and sentimentality, with an appropriate note about race prejudice tacked on at the end to bring the book up to date.



Edith Pope.

There is the ruinous mansion set at the edge of a Florida swamp, the poverty stricken and heroic woman whose hardness is finally melted by the clutching baby fingers of her murdered brother's child, the old will, the dire secret [the mansion had been built by a slave trader and Negro blood is in the veins of the Clanghearnes], the Yankee nov-

Hideous Menace of Japs Is Revealed in "Dyess Story"

"THE DYESS STORY," by Lt. Col. William E. Dyess. [Putnam, $2.]

Reviewed by William Shinnick.

This is one of the few really important books about the war. We learn from it what the Japanese soldier and the Japanese nation are; together they form the blackest menace that has ever confronted the United States. Read it, read the terrible indictment of a subhumanly cruel race [even tho you must force yourself thru the savage detail of the Death March from Bataan, as this reviewer did] and, if you aren't torn by compassion, your heart is of concrete. And the man or woman who, once having read it, doesn't recognize Enemy No. 1 is an unimaginable quantity.

From Europe have come atrocity stories of peculiarly horrible quality. But the Russian disclosure that 10,000 Poles were slain by the Nazis and buried in a single grave and the wholesale slaughter of the villagers at Lidice pale in comparison with the Philippine tragedy as Dyess told it. His is an authentic chronicle, too; the army command has studied it and tested it and found it true.

Dyess, one of the great heroes of the early days of the war in the Pacific, was in the death march; he saw his comrades trudge under a broiling sun for days on end, without food and without water. He has an eyewitness story of a Jap beheading an American officer; another of a colonel who was lashed until his face was unrecognizable; he saw men bayoneted to death simply because they were unable to keep up on the march. He saw unconscious men rolled gleefully by Japs under the wheels of trucks and crushed to death.

He witnessed the application of the sun cure to Americans and Filipinos, an infamous torture that, if long continued, must mean death, slow and painful. He and his companions were systematically starved in the midst of plentiful food; 6,000 Americans and many thousands more Filipinos did die. Nowhere in the chronicle is there an instance of kindness or chivalry or even of common sense on the part of any Jap; and the recital covers 361 days of imprisonment in three torture camps and a reeking transport ship.

That Dyess survived and escaped along with a few others is a tribute to his marvelous stamina, unquenchable determination, and subtle bravery. He was truly a great pilot, a great fighter. With a few others he fought the Jap air force until our side had no planes—the enemy had 3,000 available and on Bataan the United States had nine. When the last one was gone he fought on as an infantryman.

Dyess wanted his story told to the widest possible group of readers. Charles Leavelle of The Chicago Tribune staff, who edited the manuscript and wrote a foreword for it, relates that the tall Texan with the look of an eagle was not much interested in a large price for his work; instead he wanted to stir up action in behalf of his comrades being starved and crucified in oriental prisons.

A portion of the tale has been printed in THE TRIBUNE and many other newspapers, and brought about some of the things he wanted, including an announcement by the state department that Jap higher-ups responsible for the barbarities would be held accountable.

That was in January of this year. The government then accepted the view that it was useless to attempt further to salve the Jap military hierarchy into treating our prisoners with humanity. It was ironical that Lt. Col. Dyess had been killed a few weeks before in a plane crash on California soil. But his record will live on. So will his book, for it will convince America that nothing will end the Jap menace except the annihilation of Japan.

$400 in Prizes for Stories by Military Folk

Four hundred dollars in cash will be given by THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE to two members of the American armed forces either in this country, or overseas, or on the seas.

The contests, announced last week, are open to all men and women in the army and navy [including, of course, the marine corps, the coast guard, the WAVES, the WACs, the SPARS, the nurse corps, and the woman marines].

For the best account of a war time experience the prize will be $200. Essays are limited to 2,000 words, and should be sent to Mrs. Alice Manning Dickey, director, Midwestern Writers' conference, 410 S. Michigan av., Chicago. Entries must be postmarked not later than July 1.

For the best short story, on any subject the contestant chooses, the prize likewise will be $200, the word limit is 2,000, and the time limit is July 1. Stories should be sent to Mrs. Elmo Scott Watson, executive secretary, Writers' Conference of the Middle West, 824 Prospect av., Winnetka, Ill.

There is no entry fee. Contestants may, if they wish, submit entries in both competitions. No manuscripts can be returned unless they are accompanied by stamped, self-addressed envelope. Contestants should specify the complete name of their service organizations. It is important that the manuscripts be sent to the addresses given, rather than to THE TRIBUNE.

The contests will be held in connection with the forthcoming writers' conferences. The one of which Mrs. Dickey is director is sponsored by the Cordon and will take place at 410 S. Michigan av. on three week-ends starting May 19. The other, of which Phyllis Whitney is executive director, is sponsored by 21 literary groups of the Chicago area. It will be held July 26 to 29 in Scott hall on the Evanston campus of Northwestern university. In each instance there are to be a large number of cash awards.

Practitioner Tells Value of Hypnosis

"WHAT IS HYPNOSIS?" by Andrew Salter. [Richard R. Smith, $2.]

Mr. Salter recounts experiments he has conducted in hypnotizing subjects and in teaching them to hypnotize themselves. He describes his work as "Studies in Auto and Hetro Conditioning," for he conceives hypnosis to be a phenomenon of a kind with, on the one hand, the conditioned reflex, and, on the other hand, hysteria. Any one who has read an elementary psychology can follow his little book, and with interest. Mr. Salter suggests the military value of anesthesia by autohypnosis.

Boca Grande Super-Serene After Miami

By Thalia.

Boca Grande, Fla. [Special].—Still dazed by the impact of the crowds in Miami and Miami Beach, your ultra-violet rays of the Atlantic coast to the island village calm of Boca Grande.

But not before she had met, face to face, the man who still uses the long distance telephone as if it were an intercommunication system in his own house. He looked like most of the men whom she had seen on the crowded streets. He was dressed in an expensive suit, wore a tie that should have been wired for sound, I noticed him when he paid his bill noticed him when he paid his check at a restaurant where the food's palatability was in inverse proportion to its cost. The bill, with drinks, for the three people to whom he was host, was almost as much as an army private receives from his benevolent uncle for a month's services.

At the unavoidably public telephone which hung on the wall he talked to New York unconcernedly, for what seemed at least 15 minutes. Not one word vital to any one was said, only a rambling, laugh punctuated, play by play description and comment on the weather at both ends of the wire, his winnings and losses at Tropical Park, at the Brook club, at the dog track, and not one anxious question about business or anybody's health.

Your Thalia wanted to, but couldn't forget another sturdy American at the railroad ticket office who was pleading to get back to New York, and when the woman at the window told him politely that there was no chance he wrote something on a page of his notebook, tore it out, and pushed it under the grille. In a moment the woman cried angrily to him, "We don't do business that way here," and to the station at large, "He offered me six pair of nylon stockings if I'd get him something." Only a week or so before, the papers had been full of the arrest of a ring of black market railroad ticket sellers who had netted about $1,800 a week, and her audience, most of whom were trying desperately to get home, shouted their approval of her anger.

Boca Grande seemed super-serene after Miami. Boca Grande and Useppa Island, five miles away, have long been favorite winter spots for Chicagoans who preferred the calmer gulf waters of the west coast to the more dashing surf of the Atlantic. A few years ago when one jauntily drove three or four hundred miles to spend three or four days, we ran away to Boca Grande from Ormond and one of those icy whiffs from the north that may be designed by an all-wise providence to remind you that you are living on borrowed sunshine.

Then it seemed to us that at least three-fourths of Boca Grande's inhabitants were from Lake Forest and Chicago. It seemed also like a kind of Florida resort life peculiar to itself. To the people who swarm into race tracks and gambling "clubs," make an elaborate business of the simple joy of sitting at the water's edge in the sunshine, and an even more elaborate one of being fortified against pneumonia by an old fashioned and against starvation by a filet mignon, Boca Grande would seem like Alcatraz. For there is nothing to do but swim, play golf, walk, eat, play a quiet game of cards, and fish.

The beach life is simple and I saw no bathing costumes that looked as if they might dissolve in the surf, and a good, clean riddance. By 10 o'clock at night there isn't a sound to be heard and that despite the fact that the Gasparilla inn and its cottages and the Boca Grande hotel have, like all resort hotels, walls that Gestapo agents would find wonderful to listen thru.

This year Useppa Island was not

Women in War Work

By Dorothy Johnson.

More than half the Chicago area women attending Rockford college, Rockford, Ill., are active in war work in addition to their schedule of studies. Volunteer jobs they have undertaken include nursery school duty, Red Cross first aid courses, making of surgical dressings, first aid training, work for the Russian war relief, and typing for the OCD.

Eugene J. Benge, president of Benge Associates, 20 N. Wacker dr., which have been summarizing the combined surveys of more than 20 companies employing 32,000 war workers, recently reported that women in industry and commerce appear to have higher morale than men.

The attitude of women toward their superiors, the job, and the company shows that the feminine worker is better adjusted than are men and more conscientious, Mr. Benge said.

The survey reveals that, while most women do not care, proportionately, about opportunities for advancement, many who are interested believe that industry does not take full advantage of women's abilities. Benge said that the ambitious employe often writes: "My personal work abilities are greater than those used or permitted by my present job."

Mrs. Betty G., Chicago—Here's one use I have for pipe cleaners, and I think it's a good one. When I have a short stemmed flower I want to put in a long, slim vase I slit the end of the flower a bit and then wrap one end of a pipe cleaner around it. In this way I have found that the pipe cleaner serves as a sort of wick, once it is extended into the water of the vase.

Mrs. Ed W., Erie, Pa.—I use a vegetable grater when I want to remove a burned crust from bread I have baked a bit too long. Just rub the loaf with the grater and it does the work.

Mrs. Bill H., Chicago—My husband put two old desk drawers into active service at our house this spring. One he painted a deep green and we use it now as a box for firewood; the other he painted a cream color to match the kitchen walls. He added a few shelves painted red to match kitchen accessories, and now it hangs on kitchen wall, a pretty shelf unit.

Club Women Turn Eyes to Conventions

By Irene Steyskal.

Conventions serve women's organizations as a grandstand, affording them an over-all view of the domestic and world scenes. From one end of the country to the other there is the hurried stir that comes each spring with last stage preparations in the setting up of state and national meetings. The armies of observer delegates, armed with note books and newly sharpened pencils, are on the move.

Tomorrow night in New York, in the impressive setting of the Waldorf-Astoria ballroom, the national society of the Daughters of the American Revolution will open its 53d continental congress to a keynote address by J. Edgar Hoover, director of the federal bureau of investigation.

Tuesday, April 25, is the day set for the convening of two other national organizations—the League of Women Voters, gathering here in the Stevens hotel for its 16th meeting, and the General Federation of Women's Clubs, assembling in St. Louis at Hotel Jefferson. Here at Illinois Federation of Women's Clubs headquarters, Mrs. Charles C. Wells and her program committee for the state convention have plans well advanced for the 49th annual meeting opening Tuesday, May 9, in Hotel Sherman.

That club women are taking their part in national and world affairs with serious thought may be seen in their convention plans, which, for the most part, are stripped of all the festive trimmings—parties, entertainment, expensive decorations—that embellished meetings in pre-war years. And how seriously the women are regarded in their organized strength is readily discernible in the lists of important speakers that their meetings command.

The biennial convention of the League of Women Voters, a four day work conference, is underscored with a reminder from Miss Marguerite M. Wells, the president, that the country is in a crucial period of its history, "when the future depends so much upon the kind of government we maintain and upon the individual's sense of responsibility for good government." No entertainment, no visitors, and few speakers—that is the decree for the war time meeting.

The women are calling in a United States senator and three representatives for a round table "Organization of Congress," to be held on the second evening of their meeting, when such specific subjects will be discussed as the employment of experts by congress to help review the record and proposals of the executive branch; streamlining organization to prevent overlapping and confusion among the committees; the possibility of adopting one feature of the parliamentary system by having cabinet officers appear before congress for questioning; the need for congressional study of the organization of congress to make recommendations for improvements, and the problem of the two-thirds rule for treaty ratification.

Harold H. Burton of Cleveland, O., is the senator who will be a participant in the discussion. Sen. Burton has been particularly interested in the treaty ratification rule. The congressional representatives to be consulted are Estes Kefauver of Chattanooga, Tenn.; Everett Dirksen of Pekin, Ill., and A. S. Mike Monroney of Oklahoma City, Okla., each of whom have introduced bills in the house designed to bring about various organizational reforms.

Within its own organization there is lively interest in the election of officers that will be held at the national convention. Last week the nominating committee, of which Mrs. George G. Bogert of Chicago, a former president of the Illinois

Fresh from the Hills . . . . By Marge of Sunrise Mountain Farm . . . . Ozark Farm Girl

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

THE Jedge came out of the farm house in brown jodphurs, leather jacket and brown boots that glistened in the Ozark sunshine. At the gate between the lawn and the lane stood Rex, his riding horse, with Bill, the hired man, at his head. I stood back on the lawn and murmured things about that horse feeling his oats and remember your operation, darling. The Jedge threw me the pitying look a good horseman bestows on poor earthbound mortals. He took the reins, motioned for Bill to "turn loose," and put his left foot in the stirrup. He was in the act of throwing his right leg over the horse when Rex got under way. Or perhaps that's the week's understatement. Actually, the horse gave a leap that carried him almost to the turn in the lane. At that turn, the Jedge and the saddle met for the first time that morning. Somehow the Jedge's right foot found the stirrup, and away they went, the horse's shoes clicking fire from the rocks in the lane.

At the end of the lane, Rex collected his four thundering hoofs and leaped the wide gate as neatly as any trained jumper. Miraculously the Jedge stayed on. I watched them around the bend and out of vision. In this country, where sounds can be heard so far, I could follow the path of those flying feet. Past Aunt Lizzie's. Past Mr. Bates'. Past the Harlow schoolhouse. Then at a point that I judged to be Mark Butler's, two miles away, I heard the horse's feet gradually slowing down. In a few minutes they came back, both horse and rider breathing heavily. The horse was taken to the barn. The Jedge went to bed.

Next day, at the drug store, we set the Ozark grapevine in motion. We casually remarked that we'd like to have some one take Rex for a couple of weeks and give him a lot of exercise. On Saturday morning, a bright eyed, brown haired school girl, looking less than her sixteen years, rode a brown mare into the lane.

"I'm Jean Walker," she said. "I've come for Rex."

At the end of the lane, Rex collected his four thundering hoofs and leaped the wide gate . . .

I swore it would be murder for a girl to ride that runaway. But Jean just laughed. She whisked her own saddle, an army saddle with shortened stirrups, off the brown mare and put it on Rex while Bill held the horse's bridle rein.

When Rex gave his jackrabbit jump, Jean was ready for it. She headed him into the home forty and whittled out a race track around the wood pile. She could ride as fast as Rex could run.

"He's Okay," she finally called, riding up to the gate and leaning over to pat the horse's neck. "Just hard mouthed and likes to go!"

She took the bridle rein of Pet, the mare, and rode away.

Neighbors along the road tell how Jean managed to get both horses home. Rex didn't like to be held to Pet's slower pace. When he started to dance sideways, Jean would drop the mare's rein and give Rex his head. The mare would stop and crop grass along the roadside. When Rex had tired, Jean would ride back, pick up the mare's rein, and they would move on toward home. It was a 15 mile drive, and Jean probably rode 60 miles in making the trip. By the time they reached Jean's home, Rex had completely accepted her as master.

Jean has always liked horses. Her mother tells that as a tiny child, Jean would pipe up, when callers invited the Walkers over:

"Has oo dot a horse?"

Since Jean returned Rex, a far more manageable chap, we've learned a lot about horses from her. Riding easily on Pet, either with or without the saddle, Jean loves to talk about horses.

Horses have moods, she says. One day you can walk right up to a horse in a pasture and catch him without difficulty. The next day he will lead you a merry chase all over the meadow. Her family owned a horse like that one time. On the days when he wouldn't come up to the halter, Jean would hunch down in the pasture and pretend to be looking at a very exciting bug or rock. The horse would circle wide for a short time, curious as a cat. Then he couldn't resist coming up to see what she was doing.

Horses may dislike one person, yet like another one, for no apparent reason. And of course, horses always know when people fear them. Jean explains this by quoting scientists who have proved that fear induces a distinctive odor. Horses can 'smell fear.' Horses like music, too. Her Pet's favorite song is "Melancholy Baby," says Jean, in all seriousness. The horse twitches her ears and obviously listens to the song.

Horses are full of mischief, too, according to Jean. They take delight in going under low-hanging branches and brushing off their riders. Not for meanness, but just the heck of it.

And a horse must always be able to trust his owner. Many times when a horse bucks or rears, says Jean, it is simply because he does not trust the person handling him.

Toby moves his feet forward and stands posing until Jean tells him he can relax.

To prove that a horse can have faith in a person, Jean sat sidewise on her horse, kicked off her riding boots, and in stockinged feet, suddenly stood upright on the bare back of her brown mare. The horse looked over her shoulder as tho saying:

"Aren't people the craziest things?"

Jean's knowledge of horses is being put to test now in her care and training of Toby, Pet's 7 months' old colt. Toby is tawny beige with platinum blond mane and tail [flax mane and tail, is the hill term]. He has a small head, tiny feet, and beautiful big dark eyes with long eyelashes. Jean dreams of the day when she will ride Toby in horse shows. Almost from the time he could stand, she began teaching him to stretch in approved show ring manner. With the toe of her riding boot, she gently taps the rear of each of his front feet. Toby obediently moves them forward and stands posing until Jean tells him he can relax.

Jean is also preparing him for the time when shoes will be fitted to his feet.

"Shoe, Toby!" says Jean.

Then she lifts each of his four feet one by one, and raps them with a corn stalk, just to get him used to having his feet worked on. She puts a rope bridle on him and leads him about the barn lot. Then she mounts Pet, still holding the colt's bridle rein, and they race around the barn lot at break-neck speed. And already at seven months, Toby stands quiet as a lamb when Jean puts the saddle blanket and saddle on him.

When he is larger and stronger, Jean will be in that saddle; and what a picture they will make, a beautiful girl who rides magnificently, and a fawn colored horse with flax mane and tail.

Jean and her mother live alone on the farm that belonged to Jean's grandparents. Jean is a junior in high school in town, and before the school bus picks her up she helps her mother milk their two cows, tend to their three horses, and do other farm chores. In the evening, there is the milking again. Barns must be cleaned, too, and in addition to all this, Jean must saddle Pet and drive the cows and a bunch of heifers to the pond in the lower valley.

Jean loves the hills of her home. After her college days are over, she hopes to come back and take over the farm, to make it her home forever and to raise blooded horses. She told me of it as we sat in the sunshiny back yard, cracking black walnuts on a big rock and picking out the meats with a couple of horse shoe nails.

"O, yeah?" I said. "You'll probably wind up married to a white collar worker and spend your life in a kitchenette apartment."

"Not I," she said.

And to prove it, she gave me this poem she had written just the week before. She had called it: "MY IDEAL."

"Well, let's see,
He's about a head
Taller than me;
Has pretty eyes, too.
And that look,
As if he knew
He belongs to me
[Why, sure, I'm sure!]
He's as handsome as can be;
Very dark, of course."
"A man?" "Heavens, No!
A Horse!"

Boca Grande Super-Serene After Miami

opened and its devotees, many of them annual visitors with their families for 30 years, were at Boca Grande. The A. Watson Armours of Chicago belong to that group, as does Mrs. Mary Roberts Rinehart, the well known writer of mystery stories, who went to Useppa just after it was bought by Barron Collier from a group of ardent fishermen who had established what they called the Tarpon club there, with no nonsense about affixing a fancy name to a club that was handy to the best tarpon fishing in Florida.

One of the founders of that club was Alanson B. Houghton, former United States ambassador to the court of St. James, whose daughter, Gracia, married Mrs. Rinehart's son, Alan, who is now working in the maritime commission. Alan Rinehart's island, a canoe jaunt from Useppa, one of the show places of the region, is also closed for the duration.

There are a few pretty houses in Boca Grande—the du Pont family has one, the Frank Crowninshields another [she was a du Pont], but there is nothing really ostentatious on the island. Eugene Pike is the only Chicagoan who owns a house there. The cottages are very comfortable, but really cottages and not suburban mansions. This year one rarely saw a long dress in the evening and the phrase "dinner party" gives a wrong impression of the elaborateness of entertainment possible for visitors in Boca Grande. There is nothing special to be had but the regular, very good, hotel table d'hote and no place to take guests afterward except a movie in the little bare town hall or a rare lecture in the community center, which was the gift of Mrs. Crowninshield to the permanent townsfolk who number about 600 and who use it constantly for their own and visitors' war activities now.

This year the average age of the visitors seemed to me perceptibly higher and their have perceptibly grayer. Many of the Boca Grande visitors who formerly fished only for sport, for tarpon, that is, this year fished for food fish and even then apologized for pleasuring themselves in war time—which was another phenomenon not often noticeable.

Many of the Chicagoans who had formerly gone to Boca Grande were deterred this year by the difficulty of getting there. Since the thru Pullman from Chicago was taken off one has to come from Tampa, a hundred and more miles away, in a day coach or take a bus half way, and the hotel station wagon the other half, and make a three-quarter hour ferry trip to the island. But to those who love its simplicity the journey to Boca Grande was worth it. Among the Chicagoans I saw were the A. Watson Armours, the Howard Linns [Mrs. Linn arriving from a visit in Palm Beach], young Mrs. George Poole Jr. with her two children who were with Mr. Poole's mother, and the Barrett Wendells.

Every one was present at the greatest excitement which Boca Grande has known in a generation and every one helped in its aftermath. On an early Monday morning the old inn where the Gasparilla staff lived was in flames. The surrounding palm trees caught. Giant sparks were blown by the high wind onto the roofs of the big inn and cottages. The guests were all roused and told to leave their rooms. Some of them dashed down to the beach in a panic. Others stayed to watch or to try to help and got well soaked by the hose which burst in two places. Ironically only the night before a benefit had been held at the inn to provide new equipment for the volunteer fire brigade.

It was a dramatic and devastating blaze, so sudden and so furious that the men and women in the building escaped with little but their lives. The guests of the hotel went into the kitchen and made coffee for the terrorized servants, promptly started a purse for the unfortunates who had lost all of their possessions, and went thru their own wardrobes for clothes that might fit.

There are two small dress shops in the village and by noon their racks were practically vacant, for the generous guests had individually bought whatever they could find to replenish the wardrobes of the staff.

Overhead every sunny morning the undeniable sounds of tow target practice in the air kept all vacationers aware of a war which most of them could not forget because their children were helping win it. On that sparkling morning after the fire, while the upper air was echoing the machine gun bullets, it was brought home to me that there are no social distinctions in war or calamity, either in a B-25 at target practice or in a village fire.

Results of the assiduous wooing of Mrs. John L. Whitehurst, president of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, to the international outlook loom in the program plans for the forthcoming 53d convention of that organization of 2½ million women. Peppered with the names of foreign diplomats and unofficial representatives are the speakers' schedules for the series of "United Nations' Post-War Planning Forums" to be held at the St. Louis meeting. The subjects of forums will range from world government and international police force to economics, rehabilitation, communications and transportation, education, and welfare.

Frederick Puckle, counselor, and Michael Wright, first secretary of the British embassy, the New Zealand minister, Walter Nash, and S. K. Kirpalani and Jossleyn Hennessy, trade commissioner and public relations representative, respectively, from India, all will be heard in the course of the forums.

Ambassadors Alexander Loudon of the Netherlands, Don Francisco Castillo Najera of Mexico, and Jan Ciechamowski of Poland are others among the diplomats scheduled to speak.

Mrs. LaFell Dickinson of Keene, N. H., is the unopposed candidate for the presidency of the General federation, to succeed Mrs. Whitehurst. The Illinois club women expect to have Mrs. Dickinson at their convention in May as a special guest at the opening "president's night" session. Dr. Clark G. Kuebler, president of Ripon college, will address the convention that night, and Dr. Clifford H. Newham, minister at Covenant church in Evanston, is to give the keynote talk.

Among guest speakers at the state meeting will be the national chairmen of the women's divisions of the two major political parties — Miss Marion Martin of the Republican and Mrs. Charles W. Tillett of the Democratic party.

Planned for one of the sessions is a round table on "Prejudice, a Threat to Democracy," in which the participants will be Samuel G. Gandy of the Church of the Good Shepherd; Rabbi Israel H. The appearance of the Metropolitan Opera company on the Chicago scene is attended by several social sidelights, one of which is a tea for Kerstin Thorborg which the American Daughters of Sweden are giving Thursday afternoon in the Swedish club, 1258 N. La Salle.

Kerstin Thorborg.

Miss Thorborg, born in Sweden, made her debut at the Royal Opera house in Stockholm. The world famous contralto will sing the role of Brangaene in "Tristan and Isolde" tomorrow in the opening performance of the Metropolitan's Chicago season in the Civic Opera house.

This afternoon the Swedish Daughters' Cecilian chorus will be heard at the club in its 3d annual spring concert. The ensemble is directed by Ida Linn Cooley, and Adele Bronz is the accompanist. Three o'clock is the hour set for the program.

The Chicago Musical Arts club, meeting at 4 o'clock today at the Cordon in the Fine Arts building, will be given a report on the Chicago Opera company's plans for next season by Mary Wickerham, immediate past president of the club.

A program of excerpts from the opera "Aida" will be given by Naomi Cook, soprano; Clark Simpson, tenor, and Stefan Kozakevich, baritone. Miss Cook will preface the concert with a group of songs by Rudolph Ganz, Dr. Rossetter Cole, and Edgar Stillman Kelley, all of whom are honorary member composers of the club, and the late Eleanor Everest Freer, who also held an honorary membership. Louise Trenton now heads the organization as president.

Members of The Renaissance and their guests will gather at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow at the Swedish club for the fine arts group's annual music day luncheon and program. Mrs. William J. Holm will preside, Mrs. Joseph F. Goss will have charge of the program and Mrs. Erwin Schulze will direct luncheon arrangements.

Mrs. Goss will present Louise Bailey, soprano, in a musical. Among special guests attending the meeting will be Dr. Scott E. Bedford, writer and traveler; James Bradley Griffin, director of the Uptown Players, and Mrs. Dorothy Barr Agne, director of the Evanston Conservatory of Music.

The Council Alumnae are presenting Minnie Baudino, soprano, and Mariette Plante, pianist, in their annual twilight concert at 4 o'clock today in the Central Eleanor club.

Nordic Law Club to Hear Swedish 1st Vice Consul

Eyvind Bratt, Swedish first vice consul, will give a talk on present conditions in Sweden at a dinner meeting of the Nordic Law club Friday evening in the Swedish club, 1258 N. La Salle st. Mr. Bratt only recently arrived here from his native country.

Fashions and Fancy

By Judith Cass

The annual meeting of the Chicago Junior league brought out gay spring suits in quantity and quality, ranging from gabardine to checked tweeds. Mrs. Johnson Davis chose gabardine for her tailored suit of gray-green, and topped it with a dressy, white scoop brimmed bonnet laden with frothy pastel yellow flowers. Miss Peggy Ware chose fine gray checks for her suit, and with it she wore a tailored white blouse with a knife plaited bodice. A blue and white check jacket and monotone blue wool skirt were worn by Miss Marianna Bolognesi, whose smart little hat was a navy blue old fashioned tam. Mrs. Herbert C. DeYoung's suit was of sky blue wool, as was the little skull cap that went with it, a definite compliment to her blue eyes and titian hair. Miss Jane Leonard's wool suit was of black, and the topcoat that nearly covered it was of buttercup yellow. Her hat was a mere patch of black velvet anchored behind her pompadour. Miss Ginger Elwood wore a black bandeau across the top of her head, but Mrs. William H. Mitchell Jr. and Mrs. J. Hampton Monroe wore glamorous concoctions atop their long locks. Mrs. Mitchell's hat was the Easter rabbit hat that a few of the town's smart young matrons have purchased—pink eared bunnies perched on a white straw brim—and Mrs. Monroe's was similar in outline, created of long red and white feathers. One of the most stunning examples of the coat-dress, newly returned to popularity, is Mrs. Orville J. Taylor's smart black one with two buttons at the waist line, and turnback cuffs and roll collar of grayish yellow. With it the other day she wore a knockout small white straw sailor with what looked like cotton candy covering the brim, and a single large white orchid with a pale yellow throat was pinned to one shoulder.

Mrs. Herbert DeYoung.

Mrs. Frank S. Sims' new spring coat is of thin navy blue wool, gathering slightly about the waist line to allow a slight blouse in the back. With it the other day she wore one of the new little half-hats with a small bunch of white flowers above each ear. Mrs. John Murphy, back in town for a visit, appeared at the Casino in a two piece frock that combined a plain black skirt and a short sleeved overblouse of black and white print. Her sister, Mrs. F. Stanley Bickcords, also at the Casino, was a symphony of grays, from her tailored silk frock to her brimmed felt hat and short fur jacket. Mrs. Arnold Kirkeby's spring outfit combines black and white effectively. With a black wool suit with revers of white she wears a white blouse, white gloves, and a little sailor of white eyelet embroidery.

Chief topics of conversation with Easter paraders who passed thru the Drake hotel's lobby after church that morning were the lavish platina fox coat which Mrs. Titus Haffa wore to breakfast in the Camellia House over her pale blue crepe suit, the navy and white costume for which Mrs. Charles D. Peacock III. was judged the most suitably dressed woman there, and the outstanding beautiful spring setting which the hotel offered to all who entered its doors. A huge rhododendron plant crowned with pink blossoms in the entrance lobby; the Easter bower in the main lobby, where cherry branches bloomed above the daisy-banked fountain, surrounded with butter yellow pepper plants, and 8 foot blooming forsythia branches arched to the ceiling from the main pillars all contributed to the stunning background provided for the feminine breakfasters. Another costume greatly admired by the judges was worn to the Drake by Mrs. Edward A. Leight, whose Easter bonnet consisted of a large white feather dove wreathed in red geranium blossoms. The blouse of her striking dress was diagonally striped of cream and black satin. Opera-goers who have been wondering how to dress for tomorrow night's opening of the Metropolitan's short engagement can take a cue from Mrs. Leight. A veteran of 34 years of opera openings, Mrs. Leight is passing up this year's short evening dresses in favor of a long full-skirted gown of pale pink lace, over which she will wear a ruby velvet cape clasped in gold. The prize winning costume at the Mayfair room in the Blackstone, worn by Mrs. Jere Patterson, also was a navy and white combination. Her sleek blue wool gown, to which was pinned a knot of white carnations, had a navy taffeta peplum, and her tiny white hat touched in fuchsia was of breast and tail feathers.

Mrs. Charles D. Peacock III.

Sororities to Hold Annual Spring Meets

The renewed zest in club and social activities that inevitably comes with spring time seems particularly apparent in recent announcements from women's university and college circles.

Next Sunday afternoon Chicago area alumnae of the Alpha Gamma Delta sorority will join with active chapter members at Northwestern university in their annual "International Reunion Day" festivities, and on the Saturday following a similar joint gathering of Pi Beta Phi alumnae and actives will mark the 77th anniversary of the founding of this oldest of women's college social sororities. University of Illinois alumnae of Kappa Delta have chosen the same Saturday, April 29, as the date for their annual spring luncheon, and at noon the next day, St. Mary's Chicago Club of Notre Dame will be giving its annual spring breakfast.

The national grand president of Alpha Gamma Delta, Mrs. C. Moreau Jansky Jr., will come from Washington, D. C., to be keynote speaker at the reunion day program. Her message will be given at Scott hall on the university campus in Evanston, where also will be presented an original skit and a musical by the active chapter members. From there, the assembly will move on to the chapter house on Orrington av. for a reception and tea at which Miss Mary Louise Snider of S. Shore dr., one of the sorority founders, will share honors with Mrs. Jansky. Miss Gladys Nelson, president of the Northwestern alumnae chapter, is in charge of arrangements, and her co-chairman is Miss Dorothy Schloerb, president of the undergraduate chapter. Miss Helen E. Heggie, international director of fraternity education, will act as toastmistress.

Three alumnae clubs of Pi Beta Phi—the Chicago Business Women's, Chicago North, and North Shore—are joining with the active members in their founders' day celebration, to be given at the Georgian hotel in Evanston. Principal speaker is to be Mrs. Henry Koehler, national war service chairman, who will give a detailed resumé of the fraternity's national war service project wherein the organization is making $400 scholarships available to qualified college women for the study of physical therapy. There will be a brief dramatic Red Cross presentation by Mrs. Henry Szymanski, Mrs. Arthur Vyse and Mrs. Mildred K. Schroeder, and the active chapter president, Miss Patricia Klineschmidt, will direct her group in an original skit. The committee on arrangements includes Mrs. Ralph Leiben of Chicago, Mrs. Leonard Paider of Kenilworth, and Mrs. Mildred K. Schroeder and Mrs. George Watson of Evanston.

The Kappa Delta spring luncheon, which is to be combined with the group's annual business meeting, is booked at the Georgian room of Carson Pirie Scott's. Mrs. E. T. Ohs will preside.

The north ball room of the Stevens hotel will be the setting for the St. Mary's Chicago club breakfast, where strolling players will provide the music. Mrs. Frances Woods is party chairman, and among those assisting her are Miss Helen Neumann, club president, Mrs. Edward Kennedy, Mrs. Walter Cahill, Mrs. Frank O'Brien, Mrs. George Hardin, Mrs. George Henzler, and Mrs. Theodore Susen.

The Woman's University Club of Chicago, gathering in the club rooms at 2:30 o'clock next Wednesday, will hear Mrs. Arpad M. Barothy, Chicago painter and lecturer who has just returned from Mexico, give a talk on "Personal Impressions."

In connection with the diamond jubilee convention of the Illinois P. E. O. Sisterhood, to be held Tuesday and Wednesday, April 25 and 26, in the Red Lacquer room of the Palmer House, Chapter D of the Illinois society will exhibit a collection of Americana, depicting the last pioneer days of the middle west. The nucleus of the exhibition was presented by Mrs. Lulu Weaver Avery, nationally known collector who organized the Colonial Coverlet guild.

Paul G. Dallwig, layman lecturer of the Chicago Natural History museum, will give a dramatized talk on "The Parade of Races," when he appears as guest speaker tomorrow before members of Chapter A, of the state P. E. O. The lecture is to be given in the Palmer House, following a 12:45 o'clock business session.

According to Culbertson

By Ely Culbertson.

The opportunity to ruff a loser with a "worthless" trump may be a snare and a delusion, as the declarer learned, too late, in the following deal.

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 diamond	Pass	1 spade	Pass
2 clubs	Pass	2 hearts	Pass
3 clubs	Pass	3 hearts	Pass
4 hearts	Double [final bid]

Declarer was fortunate that West decided to open a club instead of a diamond. Thus, South could get rid of his singleton diamond immediately on dummy's second top club. The spade king was led next; West won and shifted to a diamond. The jack forced the queen, and declarer ruffed. Now a spade was ruffed with the "worthless" six of hearts; a diamond was ruffed with a low trump in the closed hand, and another spade lead, ruffed with the ace, dropped East's spade queen and established the rest of South's suit. Unfortunately, however, this still left South considerably short of his goal. Now when he led the good diamond king and over-ruffed East's four of hearts, the best he could do was return the heart queen in an effort to draw trumps. East won and returned a club, and when South ruffed with the eight West promptly over-ruffed with the nine. Down one!

South should not have been so interested in keeping the enemy from making a second spade trick. Having salvaged his diamond loser, he could well afford to give up two tricks in spades, to establish the suit, if he could hold his loss in the trump suit to one trick. That being so, after he knocked out the spade ace and ruffed West's diamond return, South should have cashed the trump ace and led the six toward his own hand. Whether East chose to take the heart king then or later, that trick and the spade queen [in addition to the spade ace already won] would wind up the defenders' case.

Spring Comes to the Desert Near Phoenix

By Ruth Dickinson.

PHOENIX, ARIZ. Most of the year the desert is gray and formidable with weird, grotesque growth rather like some futuristic painting. Then comes the birth of spring, as if some magic wand were waved over the land. It becomes an enchanted land, an extravaganza of color against a background of green, while overhead sail the swiftly moving clouds with their blue, rose, purple, and mauve shadows fleeting across the distant mountains.

Every cactus is aflame with color, and one of the miracles of this desert land is that such awesome plants can produce blossoms of sheer loveliness — exotic, waxlike flowers, each resembling a full blown rose. The trees, too, with their gay, yet dainty blossoms, pirouette and sway in the breezes. Just now the hedgehog is in bloom, the first of the season. It's as ugly as the snout of a hog but the blossoms are indescribably lovely, deep red, rose pink, or lavender "roses," with waxy petals and a bright green pistil which glistens like an emerald.

The prickly pear, too, is in bloom now. It's easily recognized by the large flat leaves, rather like a bunch of green flapjacks stuck together at all sorts of angles. On the very edge of the "flaps" the blossoms appear, beautiful roses of every known hue with yellow predominating. The spines of the prickly pear are particularly beautiful, distinct rosettes of long, glistening white needles.

The two loveliest trees are the palo verde and the iron wood. Both will be in bloom within another week. Palo verde is just what its name implies—a green stick. From a distance it looks not unlike a willow tree with its graceful sweep of branches. Now it is a joyous sight, a symphony of sunny yellow blossoms. The iron wood tree is a rugged grayish tree. Soon large clusters of lavender sprays will cover the entire tree, like sprays of wisteria.

The most flamboyant of all the desert plants is the ocatillo, really of the lily family. It's often called "devil's coach whip," or "candle flower." In the spring each stalk or coach whip flaunts a scarlet banner at the tip, consisting of many tiny red bells, giving the effect of a scarlet flame.

The first thing Cadet John Louis thought of, when he heard that he had a furlough, was "Let's go out to Phoenix." It didn't take much persuading to get the John Louis seniors sold on the idea, so back they are, for not much more than a week, however. Every week-end the Louis house is filled with cadets, and this week with John home, its been open house for all the cadets in the vicinity.

Phyllis Johnson is spending her Easter holiday with her parents, the Alfred Johnsons. Phyllis has brought several sorority sisters with her from the University of Arizona and they certainly are an added attraction over at the Jokake inn pool where they sun-laze away the afternoons.

Mr. and Mrs. John James Munns, their daughter, Gertrude, and Henrietta Lizars are packing a lot of fun into their short visit at the inn between riding every morning and swimming. There has been a succession of Sargents for the past two months. Peggy arrived the first of the week and will stay on for three weeks, while the Chester Sargents and their grandson, young Billy Weiboldt, leave today. The Raymond Kochs invited a few friends in for a farewell party before their train left.

Lou Volpe Jr., Jokake's tennis pro who has done much to make the season a success, is leaving within a few days to join the service. He hopes to spend a few days in Chicago renewing old friendships before joining the forces of Uncle Sam.

On Friday afternoon the Benjamin Coopers had a few of their friends in for tea as a farewell party for Mrs. Mark Campbell who is leaving for Chicago tomorrow after a month's visit at the Arizona Biltmore. Mrs. Warren Lamson was there with her daughter, Virginia, now Mrs. George Locke, and Mr. Locke. On Easter, Miss Mary Louise Anderson had a cocktail party for her Chicago friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Bruce McLeish and the Frank Paynes are the only newcomers at the Arizona Biltmore. They timed their visit late this year in order to see the desert flowers. Camelback inn had a special Easter breakfast table for the 14 children who are guests at the inn. The centerpiece was a nest of colored eggs decorated with heads of chickens, bunnies, and ducks. At each child's place was a small basket of candy eggs.

The seventh annual amateur night on Friday was a big success with some 13 acts. Judges for the affair were William McFarlane, Herbert Lorber, and Mrs. John Favill.

Colorful Art Work Is Shown by Chicagoans

By Eleanor Jewett.

The Association of Chicago Painters and Sculptors has an excellent show at the Chicago galleries, 215 N. Michigan av., to April 29. The association is one of the oldest and best known artist societies in Chicago. It counts in its membership many of our finest painters and sculptors and its annual exhibit is always an eagerly anticipated event and one which usually gives an extraordinary amount of pleasure. This year the exhibition is diversified and colorful and there are enough outstanding canvases to make it one of the four star shows of April.

The most gorgeous painting by all odds is "Fountain" by Julius Moessel, a crowded canvas of cherubs, birds and magnificent flowers, a canvas so lavishly decorated that the fountain diminishes to a pivot upon which the rococco beauty of the composition turns. Moessel has recently closed a stunning one man show at the Chicago galleries and this painting coming on top of the fine pictures he hung there, places him well in the forefront of those artists who are giving us a surcease from war's fears and sadness in pictures that grow ever better and more beautiful.

Walter Krawiec is another painter in the current exhibit whose work is extraordinarily fine. His "Victory Gardeners" is a superb canvas. If one enjoys good painting of fine horses, Mr. Krawiec has just that. The work horses in "Victory Gardeners" are amazingly well handled; you will not forget them easily. About them are yards and men and the cheerful bustle that accompanied much of our home gardening last year and that is about to burst into flower for 1944.

Elmer A. Forsberg has an unusual landscape, "After the Rain." It is a handsome western landscape of rolling fields and hills, and the rainbow lies over the ground, so delicate and vivid are the different grasses and crops and stretches of soil that make up the country. A wet sky, running into mist and clouds, presses softly against the rounded tops and gentle crests of the hills. J. Jeffery Grant has a fine, sturdy bit of homespun "Alleghany Shack"; a gray hillside under a gray sky with a weather-beaten cottage and a group of men, children, and goats to center one's interest.

Antonin Sterba shows a splendid self-portrait, "A Studio Portrait," one of the nicest things of his we have seen lately. Winnifred Pleimling has an attractive portrait of a handsome young man "J. Harold Fife"; it gives the impression of being a good likeness as does the "Portrait—Captain Michael Fielding" by Oskar Gross. Adolph Heinzie has a stunning mountain scene, "Canadian Rockies," and Gianni Cilfone a good winter painting, "Winter Woodland," tho perhaps the snow runs in too heavy and straight a pattern for all tastes.

Eugenie F. Glaman contributes a stunning glimpse of stock yards traffic, "The Cattle Traders," and Charles W. Dahlgreen an arresting still life of a painter's brushes and etcher's tools. F. R. Harper has perhaps the most sensitive character study in the show in "All Set." Karl Plath shows a fine animal painting, "Jungle Sinister—Clouded Leopard."

Among the other artists who give importance and value to the exhibit are Leo Marzola, Anna Lynch, Macena Barton, Arnold E. Turtle, Frank V. Dudley, Rudolph Ingerle, Paul Plaschke, Harriet Krawiec, Lucie Hartrath, Gaspar J. Ruffolo, Tunis Ponsen, Frances A. Barothy, and Karl C. Brandner.

The Art institute opened last Thursday an extensive showing of prints by Posada, a Mexican who was popular in his day as a cartoonist and illustrator. His work resembles similar work done in France, England, and Germany from, roughly, 1850 thru 1910. Any one who has seen handbills of the Petit Guignol horror plays in Paris will find a resemblance in the "murder" series by Posada. They are horrifying more because of their bluntness than their art; in fact art is not in great evidence in the majority of the propaganda and illustration cartoons on the walls. Posada was a clever draftsman; his skill is attested to in the many tiny prints and particularly in the game for children where the paper is divided into tiny squares each filled with an engaging picture.

Posada does not seem deep enough, obscure enough, nor important enough to need "explaining." But the Gallery of Art Interpretation on the first floor of the museum has been given an explanatory Posada exhibit entitled "Who Is Posada?" You may enjoy it; tastes differ.

A collection of medals and plaquettes of the Renaissance owned and lent by Sigmund Morgenroth of Santa Barbara, Cal., has been placed in one of the temporary galleries on the second floor of the Art institute. It is an interesting show, but one would like to see the art of medals brought up to date and given an American flavor by the introduction of the series of medals by American sculptors which has been issued by the Society of Medalists over the last few years.

The art of the medal like that of the miniature has been neglected too long by the Art institute. Now that medals are to be found there, one hopes miniatures will follow soon and that both crafts will have American as well as foreign representation.

Palmer Homes Add Beauty to Sarasota Area

By Rose Cour.

SARASOTA, FLA.

Florida is amazing in a number of ways, aside from its astonishing flora and fauna. One of these is the fact that while it was one of the first parts of the United States to be discovered, it is the youngest from point of development. Even now less than 10 per cent of the state is in use, and the largest part of it is uninhabited. This, altho there are no mountains or deserts in Florida or any other unsurmountable difficulties, only jungles and swamps which seemingly give way readily enough when cleared, drained, and cultivated.

The attractions of scenery and climate have been extolled too often to need repetition, and it is easy to understand the enthusiasm felt by Mrs. Potter Palmer I. when she came to Sarasota in 1911 intending to stay a few weeks at the village inn. Before many days had passed she had purchased a large tract, and had given orders for the building of a palatial home where she spent most of the balance of her life.

They say it is almost as difficult to find a native Sarasotan as it is a Californian but Arthur B. Edwards, the realtor who had the distinction of selling most of the many thousands of acres to Mrs. Palmer, was born and brought up in Sarasota. That is why he was able to show her the many beauties of the section.

There were no hard roads here at that time and the car of the period was not a good means of transportation over the white sandy cow trails, so that horse and buggy were employed on Mrs. Palmer's sightseeing tours, except those that were made by boat along the shores of Sarasota bay and thru the numerous picturesque bayous. That she fell in love with the place is evidenced by the fact that she proceeded to invest over a million dollars in her new home, in citrus groves, in celery farms, cattle ranches, and other enterprises to the extent that the Palmer National bank of Sarasota was finally established to take care of the Palmer interests here.

The Oaks, Mrs. Palmer's residence, is at Osprey, about eight miles south of the city of Sarasota. Part of it was once the Paul Jones estate. While it had many natural beauties, including a dense grove of live oaks heavily garmented by gray Spanish moss, one of the oddities of the place with which Mrs. Palmer was particularly intrigued was a huge palm tree and live oak which had twined around and around each other, presenting a strange freak of nature.

A portion of the original estate, Meadow Sweet Acres, totaling about 17,500 acres, was bequeathed by Mrs. Palmer to her brother, Adrian C. Honore. This has been acquired by the state and is now a state and national park and refuge for wild life. It is located on Upper and Lower Myakka lakes. After Mrs. Palmer's death The Oaks became the property of her son, Potter Palmer, who died last summer.

Immokalee, the home of another son, Honoré, also is located on Sarasota bay, near Phillippi creek, a few miles north of The Oaks. Kimlira, the home of Mrs. Palmer's niece, Mrs. Edward L. Hersey, and Mr. Hersey, as well as Wealaka, the estate of Mrs. Palmer's sister, Mrs. Stanley Field, are in the immediate vicinity.

Immokalee, which, in the Seminole Indian language, means "My Home," is a charming white awninged, low eaved clapboard house, originally the caretaker's house. It was rebuilt in 1924 after fire had destroyed the first Honoré Palmer house which was located much closer to the sea wall than the present house.

The long living room is coolishly white with bits of silver and crystal. Distinctly modern in tone, with white rattan, white deep cushioned chairs and sofas, and putty colored rug, there are contrasting touches lent by the ebony grand piano, an especially handsome English Adam mantel, and a number of lovely small Chippendale tables. The window hangings are white with green palm leaves, and small round pillows of the same material add color notes to the couches.

A pair of unusually beautiful glass screens decorated with white palm fronds stand near the fireplace. These were painted by the Palmers' son, the late Honoré Jr. Examples of his work as an artist appear thruout the house.

The black birdseye cypress with which the bookroom is paneled is attractive. This is the wood which, after long seasoning, loses its "eyes" and becomes "pecky" cypress.

From Immokalee, if one knows the way, there is a short cut thru the garden and under rows of palmettos, and live oaks, past Kimlira, over to Wealaka, home of Mrs. Stanley Field. The drive approaching the house is lined with glossy-leaved Calamandine, trimmed in formal cylindrical shapes, and two pyramidal evergreens guard the entrance to a lawn that runs to the water's edge.

Mrs. Field's home was built by David Adler only 10 years ago but the white brick has taken on a gray appearance that, with the black wrought iron railings and grilles, gives it a look of Venice. This effect is heightened by the lagoon over which the house is built. The house

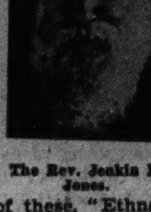
When Chicago Was Young

By Herma Clark

Letters from Martha Freeman Esmond to her friend Julia Boyd of New York.

Chicago, April 19, 1896.

Dear Julia: I have been at the Art institute today to see the unusually fine exhibition of water colors, pastels, and miniatures by American artists. Not many of these are from Chicago, but Frederick W. Freer, a teacher in the institute school and a member of a fine old Chicago family, is showing two pastels, one of these, "Ethna," being the idealized head of a beautiful young woman. He is one of our best painters. Pauline Dohn, another Chicago artist, is represented by a water color which she calls "A College Song." As I looked at it I thought how very modern that painting is. It couldn't have been painted a century ago, a college girl singing to the accompaniment of her banjo. It is pleasant to see her depicted as gay and happy, for the opponents of higher education for women like to make them out as anemic, homely females, with protruding teeth and high foreheads.



The Rev. Jenkin L. Jones.

Magda Heuerman, another Chicago artist, has two charming miniatures in the exhibit. We are proud of our Art institute and of the young people who are taking advantage of its fine school.

As I walked north along the east side of Michigan av. I was interested to see mail wagons drawing up to the curb at Randolph st., and discharging their contents. A crowd had gathered to watch the proceedings and I stopped to look, too. I found it was Uncle Sam's moving day. The postoffice building is to be torn down and replaced by a larger one and while it is being built, headquarters of the postal service will be in a barnlike structure erected near Randolph st. on the lake front.

It will be there for some time, as the old building must first be razed and then the new one built. Washington Hesing, our postmaster, seems proud that the moving has been accomplished so easily. He told Will that there could have been an afternoon delivery of mail from the new building, only it had been announced that there would be none and people didn't expect it. Assistant Postmaster John M. Hubbard was as busy as a bee, receiving packages that came over from the old building. He came out on the sidewalk just as I passed and I stopped to speak to him. He has a fine bass voice and sang in the Lumbard Brothers' quartet, famous for its Civil war songs.

We saw a clever play last evening at Hooley's theater—"Christopher Jr."—in which John Drew is starring, tho Maude Adams, pretty young actress, had almost as much attention as Mr. Drew. Ethel Barrymore, niece of John Drew, had a small part, which she acted perfectly. A remarkable family, the Drews. Any play can be successful if they are in it. "Christopher Jr." is a trifle, but amusing, the dialog bright and the situations funny, tho I wonder why dramatists can't think of something more original than a marriage in which the contracting parties don't know who their partners really are. Pretty dumb, it seems to me.

Bicyclists are occupying more and more space in the public press, and I get a bit tired of it, I must say. On almost every page of the paper is a picture of the Lake View Cyclists' club or the Hyde Park Wheelmen's club or the Irving Park Bicycle club's headquarters. The Rev. Jenkin Lloyd Jones, pastor of All Souls [a popular liberal church on the south side] is trying to get wheelmen to attend services there, and offers to have their wheels checked while they are worshipping. I think that is pampering the sportsmen too much. Surely men and women ought to be able to come to church attired in suitable garments and wait till afternoon to ride along the boulevards. Now I must close. As ever, your old friend,

MARTHA FREEMAN ESMOND.

Members of the Cathedral Book club will be opening their meeting to the public when they gather at 8:15 o'clock Wednesday evening in the Holy Name Cathedral auditorium to hear the Rev. J. J. Another literary gathering of interest this week will be the dinner meeting at 6:30 o'clock Thursday evening of the Friends of Literature, whose guest speaker is to be Lt. Lloyd Wendt, author of the new book, "Gunners Get Glory," and coauthor with Herman Kogan of "Lords of the Levee." Lt. Wendt, a special feature writer for THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, is on a military leave of absence from his newspaper duties while serving with the navy. In the distinguished guest contingent to be welcomed at this meeting will be Dr. Preston Bradley, author and lecturer, and Mrs. Bradley; Miss Dorothy Sparks, whose first book, 'Nothing As Before" will be off the press this month; and Jane Mayer and Clare Spiegel, coauthors of "Instruct My Sorrows" and "These are the Times."

Next Saturday Mrs. Bart Spence is opening her home in Evanston to the Northern Illinois branch of the National League of American Pen Women. Artist members who will share the program at that time will be Mabel Landrum Torrey, sculptor; Esther B. Golder, landscape architect; Beatrice Glos and Estella Crook Cain, poets; Frieda Spence and FloMae Raymond, singers, and Nina Shumway Knapp and Margaret Henderlite, accompanists.

The branch president, Mrs. Minnie Moreland Dow, together with Esther Golder of Oak Park will represent this group at the National league convention scheduled on Saturday, April 29, at Washington, D. C.

Winding up a year's series of educational programs, the American Speech committee of the Chicago Woman's club will meet at 11:30 o'clock Saturday morning at club quarters to hea rthree talks concerning spoken English. Annette Hamilton, chairman, will discuss "The Progress of Basic English," and Frances K. Wetmore, supervisor of the department of adult education with the Chicago board of education, will have for her topic "Raising the Standard of English for Adults." Other Aprils.

In a long ago April great preparations were being made at Munich for the production of Wagner's new opera, Walkyrie. What at first seemed insurmountable difficulties of the mise-en-scene were overcome in "La Chevauchee des Walkyries," where nine virgins descend from the clouds on real horses to gather up the bodies of the dead heroes and carry them to Wallhalla, and the magic fire. The young king of Bavaria, Louis II., showed more interest in the production than in forming his ministry.

"The Mystery of Edwin Drood" and others of Charles Dickens' works were being serialized in American papers and magazines. A French edition of his popular novels was announced and several were dramatized in Paris.

Nathaniel Hawthorne walked the violet-bordered hilltop path under his beloved larches and pines and thought out the tragedy of "Septimius Felton."

The success of a theater at Rodosto, on the Marmora, Turkey, was reported as a "strange sign of the times."

Indian papers reported the Siamese had succeeded in producing a white elephant.

In a little group of Gavarni's sketches printed in America, I came upon an engraving of his "April"—a bearded French peasant in long smock and wooden sabots setting out little potted plants in his garden.

In other Aprils little boys and girls were romping in village squares and along the sunny streets of a thousand towns and hamlets. Now, from foreign lands and alien seas, their thoughts fly back to—

Home Town.

[Tune of "Little Town of Bethlehem."]

O, little town of memories,
How calm and still you lie!
Outside your quiet, friendly streets
The rushing world goes by.

Yes, I have seen the cities
As I have traveled far,
But I am coming home tonight
To find a door ajar;

And in a window gleaming
An ever-shining light;
The woes and fears of all the years
I'll lose in thee tonight.

The seven seas I've sailed on
Have naught so fair to see
As you, my little old home town,
You're home sweet home to me.

CHARLOTTE EWING.

April Days.

Madonna blue of April skies,
O'er clouds of silvery white,
No bluer are than tender eyes
Aglow with true love's light.

O, would all days were April days
With clouds as evanescent,
Thru which still shine the sun's bright rays
So softly opalescent.

If skies grow dark instead of blue,
And silver clouds turn gray,
O, may the sun again break thru,
As on an April day.

Send Them Out.

With a wealth of reading matter always at hand, do we realize what even a bit of it may mean to our boys and girls far away? An "anxious mother" wrote that a son had lost a favorite poem, with all his other possessions, on the beach at Tarawa. He wanted another copy. So let's keep right on sending out cheering bits to those in the services everywhere we can reach them.

There are increasing calls from the hospitals, too. Lt. Virginia Vogel, Percy Jones General hospital, Battle Creek, Mich., says booklets are nice for the "dayroom," leaflets for the bed patients. Do a wee bit to speed the long, tedious hours of convalescence.

Thru the Looking Glass

We've become so accustomed to routine tints of face powders, ivory, peach, or tannish tints having been popular for such a long time, that we were startled practically speechless by a newcomer that reached our desk recently. But maybe we shouldn't say "newcomer," for the powder itself is one that has been firmly established in public favor for some years because it's so light and fluffy in texture, and clings so nicely to the skin. It's the color that is so decidedly new.

We should have been prepared for what we saw, since it was labeled pink lilac, but we weren't quite ready for the pronounced pink that greeted us when we lifted the lid. We almost said "Isn't that silly" and dismissed it, but instead we tried it and had some of our eager experimenters try it. And the results were as startling as the color, for, patted on the face, it lost the too-pink look and imparted a beautiful rosy glow to the complexion. It brings out the pink tones in the skin, picks them up and heightens them to give a look of fresh radiance that brightens the whole facial aspect.

Because it's so definitely pink it probably can't be worn by women whose complexions are naturally dark, but for those who are medium or fair skinned it's highly successful and as becoming as a faint blush. It gives a glowingly healthy look to the skin and perks it up to a youthful rosiness. Those who can wear it well will love it because it's perfect with the new fashion tones of pink and pale pastels.

There is a lipstick in a red lilac shade that goes with it, and the two make a team of face charmers that's hard to beat.

Can that "younger look" be restored?

Now...in many cases, yes! For Science has made a revolutionary discovery. Doctors have found there is a "vitalizing" substance that is always necessary for a pretty young skin. It is called ACTIVOL* and brought to you only by Endocreme. Results of its use are remarkable! Skins which lacked this substance begin to look smoother, firmer, fresher again! Patterns by Clotilde

We recommend these two patterns as wardrobe reliables for late spring and early summer. They're the sort of dresses you will prize for busy days during which you are called upon to fly from office to dinner.

The one piece model uses that fashion fancy, applique, as trimming at the shoulder yoke and on the capacious pockets. It's a casual sort of dress with soft bodice, full skirt, and midriff waistline. Make it of cotton or crepe, in either dark or light shades. The applique design is included in the pattern.

The other model is a handsome, sculptured jumper built high at the shoulders, with reglan lines. The set-in belt is a waistline slimmer. Add a plaid or printed blouse to contrast, and you have a tailored outfit with a social conscience.

Style No. 3790 is designed for sizes 10 to 20. Size 16 requires 2¾ yards of 39 inch fabric with 5 yards of rickrack braid.

Style No. 3755 is designed for sizes 12 to 40. Size 16 requires 2⅛ yards of 35 inch fabric for blouse; 3⅛ yards of 35 inch material for jumper.

Each pattern is 10 cents, plus 2 cents for mailing.

Hens Go All Out for War; Eggs Plentiful

By Mary Meade.

[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]

The nation's hens have been doing their duty so patriotically that they've caused an American crisis. Egg production is so large that the farmer can't find a profitable market for his hen produce and unless the situation changes he may grow discouraged about egg and poultry production. If he does grow discouraged and sell his flock or refuse to raise a new crop of chickens, next winter's egg and poultry supply may be short. That would be tragedy.

Plainly, homemakers can help the situation by using eggs and using them lavishly. Now isn't that an abnormal [and wonderful!] situation? We're not being told, "Please conserve eggs," the usual war time plea, but "Use all the eggs you can!"

All of the egg headache isn't the poultryman's. Cold storage facilities are heavily taxed, transportation is a problem, and there's a shortage of egg packing cases. The situation adds up to "Eat eggs."

It's a marvelous opportunity to live up to the nutritional ideal of an egg a day for every member of the family. Eggs are a protective food, rich in calcium, phosphorus, iron, vitamin A, thiamin, and riboflavin.

Let's have them every morning for breakfast! Seven different ways for seven different mornings: scrambled, poached, hard or soft cooked, fried in bacon or ham fat, baked in bacon rings, omelet, creamed on toast.

Let's make custards of them; soft custard to top desserts, baked custard to be the dessert itself, custard pie, rice custard. Let's make souffles, noodle rings, egg salads, lemon pies, angel and sunshine cakes.

Let's devil eggs for Sunday night supper; let's scramble them with frozen corn [no points, now] for lunch any day.

But with all their abundance, eggs are a precious food, so let's use them freely, without waste.

Eggs are ration free, point free, cheap even when they are expensive. By that I mean that eggs furnish high food values in a little package, and there's no waste to them but the thin shell.

Brown eggs are as good as white eggs, and vice versa. In some parts of the country the populace prefers brown shells; in others, white shells. Eggs of good quality come in both brown and white shells—the shell's color has nothing to do with the quality of its contents.

The small egg may be just as good to eat as the large one. Size does not affect quality, either.

Don't wash your eggs before refrigerating them. To do so removes protective coating on the shell and encourages the egg to absorb odors and flavors from other foods in the refrigerator. Keep them away from strong flavored foods, such as onions, cooked cabbage, fish, during storage.

There are four simple ways to preserve eggs for use next fall—freezing, for families who have access to locker facilities, "putting the eggs down" in water glass solution, coating them with mineral oil, or storing them in dry ice. Only infertile, sound, clean-shelled eggs should be used for home preservation, and a cool storage place is essential.

I have prepared two leaflets about eggs—one on preserving them at home and the other about a collection of fine, eggy recipes. Readers may have either or both without charge. My only request is that a stamped, self-addressed envelope accompany each letter asking for these bulletins. I'd prefer that it be a large envelope, for a small one may not hold all the recipes. Address Mary Meade, Chicago Tribune.

Mexican Glassware Is Plentiful and Inexpensive, Too

Mexican glassware in the typical deep, vibrant blue or the light, gray green is plentiful in the stores now, and unlike many other pieces of merchandise has not gone up much in price. It's still as inexpensive as it is artistic.

Try a pair of the low, ruffled top vases for candles. If you use the short, fat candles called vigil lights their flames will be well below the top of the vase and the effect, seen thru the colored glass, is quite lovely. For an informal table four of these surrounding a centerpiece of fruit or pottery gourds are charming.

Wrapping paper, cardboard, the tissues you use in your home, the newsprint that carries these words . . . all have almost a "weight-in-gold" value because of restricted paper supplies. Cheery Cotton Brings Color to New Rooms

By Edith Weigle.

The decorative possibilities of humble cotton are tried and found not wanting in color and gayety in a newly furnished demonstration house being exhibited by a Chicago store.

In the living room yards and yards of bright blue and white checked gingham, ruffled in crisp white chintz, are used for tie-back curtains. The chintz, button tufted with the gingham makes contrasting, tailored valances.

More yardage of the gingham is applied like wallpaper on the end or bookshelves wall, the shelves being painted white, and again you see it stretched tight on the doors which lead into the little dining room. The other three living room walls are painted a deep, rich blue; the woodwork, chalk white.

On a pair of antique tables flanking the sofa are huge white pottery lamps with white pleated parchment shades, very spectacular and stunning, and in front is a large low, French provincial coffee table. There's a quaint old pine bookkeeper's desk near-by, its lid lifted to show the inner compartment lined in gingham.

Opposite is a very fine antique armoire which has been stripped and refinished in a putty tone, a pearly gray.

The fireplace has a French provincial mantel of walnut and is framed in blue and white tiles. At right angles to the hearth are two comfortable lounge chairs done in bright yellow and edged in blue.

The atmosphere of this room is gay, simple, and informal.

The bedroom is carried out in green and white. Checked gingham in these colors is applied as a dado on white walls, and appears again as a deep, full ruffle at the molding just below the ceiling. The beds are wide studio couches and are slip-covered in more gingham and ruffled in white chintz.

A Victorian chest of drawers has been refinished in white with touches of green and its white marble top has been left as it was. Two Victorian side chairs, also white, have bright green seats. Unique plant stands are made of a pair of little Victorian castiron stoves which are hardly recognizable as such under their new coats of white paint.

As a final example of the possibilities of cotton, the checked gingham has been used as a large mat and frame for a brightly colored print, hung above the chest of drawers.

All the rooms in this interesting little house are open to the public. See them for clever new ideas in spring refurbishing.

For further information about the rooms described above telephone the Tribune Public Service Office, Sup. 0200, or write in enclosing a stamped, self addressed envelope for your reply.

No Men Allowed in Fishing Creek of 'Eve Waltons'

RALEIGH, N. C. [Special].—It's Eve—not Izaak—Walton at Neal's creek in western North Carolina. Once more, the little mountain trout stream, a tributary of the South Toe river, has been set aside for women anglers only. It opens May 13.

Some years ago authorities in the game management area set aside Neals creek to satisfy women who wanted to fish without masculine help and unsolicited advice. Reports say that in spite of the relative war time isolation of the stream, about a dozen fair anglers visited the stream each week-end last season. And they caught fish, too.

A Fighting State looks forward to your post-war visit!

Pennsylvania is no stranger to war. Within its boundaries are the hallowed historic shrines of Valley Forge where men's souls were tried . . . and of Gettysburg where the fate of the Nation was decided by the greatest battle ever fought on American soil.

Today, Pennsylvania is again at war. No battles are being fought on her soil. . . . save the great battle of production. From Pennsylvania's mines, forges and foundries flow the munitions to supply her fighting sons and their brothers-in-arms.

But a happier day will come with victory . . . and then this fighting state looks forward to welcoming you to its superb highways, its historic shrines and its scenic splendors.

Rainy Weather Fashions Boast New Elegance

By Rea Seeger.

There have been rainy days when nearly all of the feminine population dashed forth in hideous, figure obliterating rain clothes. These were hastily gathered together odds and ends of both masculine and feminine apparel, anything that had been banished for every day, sunny weather wear. Consequently, rainy day shoppers were as depressing a sight as could be imagined.

Revolutionary fashions appeared a good 10 years ago. Nothing could be done about the weather but plenty was done for the raincoats. The first models took over, and giddy reds, yellows, greens, and electric blues appeared and caused a small furor.

These bright spots continue, but there are some rainy day fashions that have been rather subdued, but only in color. The neutral gabardines, the water colors in blue, yellow, wine, and green made of trick water repellent materials came along, as well as swanky trench coat models copied from G. I. coats.

A few jaunty checks and plaids arrived, then came the smart, shiny black and white satin [thoroly waterproof] coats, and now this spring you'll see raincoats of a new design, dressmaker coats, altho rainproof, that have all the masterful details of a casual sports or topcoat. Some are designed and made like a dressmaker street coat. These are the last word in sartorial elegance for a rainy day, so smart and so flawlessly fitted that they can easily be worn for chilly days in place of a wool affair.

Some of the new arrivals have belts, bloused backs, and long sleeves with narrow band cuffs like those of a shirtwaist blouse or dress. Others are cut and fashioned like a classic box coat with concealed fly front closings. Neutrals, like gray beige and soft blue, are extremely wearable, with the scarlet, bright greens, whites, and blacks assuring a good choice for those who demand contrasting colors.

New models are made of checked waterproof materials with the sheen and luster of surah silk. These are the soft, feminine raincoats, shirred around the waistline with a bow at the back, bows at the cuffs to hold the sleeves snug and a bow to be tied in front.

Many raglan shoulder lines are featured, but the regulation set-in sleeves are wide and roomy. And while the casual box coats and trench coats of trick materials, such as army twill, balloon cloth, and the remaining stuff that crackles and snaps with each move, continue as ideal coats for some women, these new smooth super-sophisticated raincoat costumes are starting a new trend for wet weather fashions.

Sketched are three new models for the spring ahead. They are part of an unusual collection of dress parade raincoats to be found in new collection featured in a smart boulevard Chicago shop. For information call Superior 0200.

1 . . . Classic rain coat of beige gabardine features fly front closing and two huge pockets. • 2 . . . Smart rainy weather coat has inverted plait at back and raglan shoulder treatment. Available in gray, beige, black, white, and red. • 3 . . . Checked dressmaker type rain coat is made with surahlike material. Long sleeves tie at wrists, and ties around waist with bows at front and back assure snug fit. Available in black, red, and white or navy, red and white.

Women's Ad Club to Hear Newspaper Man Next Tuesday

During the business session, at which Esther Latzke will preside, the elections committee will submit names of officers who are to assume their new duties next month.

The Chicago Office Supervisors' club will hear a talk by James F. Rice, who has been correspondence adviser for the Commonwealth Edison company the last 20 years, when members gather at 6 o'clock Thursday evening at the Central Y. M. C. A., 19 S. La Salle st.
